11 A company may only agree to a variation of a contract authorised under the Companies Act 2006 s 694 if the variation is approved in advance in accordance with the following provisions: s 697(1). The terms of the variation must be authorised by a special resolution of the company before it is agreed to: s 697(2). That authority may be varied, revoked or from time to time renewed by a special resolution of the company: s 697(3). In the case of a public company a resolution conferring, varying or renewing authority must specify a date on which the authority is to expire, which must not be later than five years after the date on which the resolution is passed: s 697(4) (amended by SI 2009/2022). A resolution conferring, varying, revoking or renewing authority under the Companies Act 2006 s 697 is subject to s 698 (exercise of voting rights), and s 699 (disclosure of details of variation): s 697(5).

In relation to a resolution to confer, vary, revoke or renew authority for the purposes of s 697, where the resolution is proposed as a written resolution, a member who holds shares to which the resolution relates is not an eligible member: s 698(1), (2). Where the resolution is proposed at a meeting of the company, it is not effective if: (1) any member of the company holding shares to which the resolution relates exercises the voting rights carried by any of those shares in voting on the resolution; and (2) the resolution would not have been passed if he had not done so: s 698(3). For this purpose: (a) a member who holds shares to which the resolution relates is regarded as exercising the voting rights carried by those shares not only if he votes in respect of them on a poll on the question whether the resolution is to be passed, but also if he votes on the resolution otherwise than on a poll; (b) any member of the company may demand a poll on that question; (c) a vote and a demand for a poll by a person as proxy for a member are the same respectively as a vote and a demand by the member: s 698(4). See Kinlan v Crimmin [2006] EWHC 779 (Ch), [2007] 2 BCLC 67 (waiver of requirement by unanimous assent).

In relation to a resolution under s 697, a copy of the proposed variation (if it is in writing) or a written memorandum giving details of the proposed variation (if it is not) must be made available to members: (i) in the case of a written resolution, by being sent or submitted to every eligible member at or before the time at which the proposed resolution is sent or submitted to him; (ii) in the case of a resolution at a meeting, by being made available for inspection by members of the company both at the company's registered office for not less than 15 days ending with the date of the meeting, and at the meeting itself: s 699(1), (2). As to the registered office see PARA 129. There must also be made available in the same way a copy of the original contract or, as the case may be, a memorandum of its terms, together with any variations previously made: s 699(3). A memorandum of the proposed variation so made available must include the names of the members holding shares to which the variation relates: s 699(4). A copy of the proposed variation so made available must have annexed to it a written memorandum specifying such of those names as do not appear in the variation itself: s 699(5). The resolution is not validly passed if the requirements of s 699 are not complied with: s 699(6).

12 Companies Act 2006 s 694(4). A resolution conferring, varying, revoking or renewing authority under s 694 is subject to s 695 (exercise of voting rights) and s 696 (disclosure of details of contract): s 694(6). Where a resolution to confer, vary, revoke or renew authority for the purposes of s 694 is proposed as a written resolution, a member who holds shares to which the resolution relates is not an eligible member: s 695(1), (2). Where the resolution is proposed at a meeting of the company, it is not effective if: (1) any member of the company holding shares to which the resolution relates exercises the voting rights carried by any of those shares in voting on the resolution; and (2) the resolution would not have been passed if he had not done so: s 695(3). For this purpose: (a) a member who holds shares to which the resolution relates is regarded as exercising the voting rights carried by those shares not only if he votes in respect of them on a poll on the question whether the resolution is to be passed, but also if he votes on the resolution otherwise than on a poll; (b) any member of the company may demand a poll on that question; (c) a vote and a demand for a poll by a person as proxy for a member are the same respectively as a vote and a demand by the member: s 695(4).

In relation to a resolution to confer, vary, revoke or renew authority for the purposes of s 694, a copy of the contract (if it is in writing) or a memorandum setting out its terms (if it is not) must be made available to members: (i) in the case of a written resolution, by being sent or submitted to every eligible member at or before the time at which the proposed resolution is sent or submitted to him; (ii) in the case of a resolution at a meeting, by being made available for inspection by members of the company both at the company's registered office for not less than 15 days ending with the date of the meeting, and at the meeting itself: s 696(1), (2). A memorandum of contract terms so made available must include the names of the members holding shares to which the contract relates: s 696(3). A copy of the contract so made available must have annexed to it a written memorandum specifying such of those names as do not appear in the contract itself: s 696(4). The resolution is not validly passed if the requirements of s 696 are not complied with: s 696(5).

16 Companies Act 2006 s 700(1). The terms of the proposed agreement must be authorised by a special resolution of the company before the agreement is entered into: s 700(2). That authority may be varied, revoked or from time to time renewed by a special resolution of the company: s 700(3). In the case of a public company, a resolution conferring, varying or renewing authority must specify a date on which the authority is to expire, which must not be later than five years after the date on which the resolution is passed: s 700(4) (amended by SI 2009/2022). The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 698 (exercise of voting rights), and s 699 (disclosure of details of variation) (see note 11), apply to a resolution authorising a proposed release agreement as they apply to a resolution authorising a proposed variation: s 700(5).

1238. Authority for market purchase.

A limited company¹ may only purchase its own shares² by an off-market purchase³ or by an authorised⁴ market purchase⁵. A company may only make a market purchase of its own shares if the purchase has first been authorised by a resolution of the company⁶. That authority may be general or limited to the purchase of shares of a particular class or description, and may be unconditional or subject to conditions⁷. The authority must specify the maximum number of shares authorised to be acquired, and determine both the maximum and minimum prices that may be paid for the shares⁸.

The authority may be varied, revoked or from time to time renewed by a resolution of the company⁹. A resolution conferring, varying or renewing authority must specify a date on which it is to expire, which must not be later than five years after the date on which the resolution is passed¹⁰. A company may make a purchase of its own shares after the expiry of the time limit specified if: (1) the contract of purchase was concluded before the authority expired; and (2) the terms of the authority permitted the company to make a contract of purchase that would or might be executed wholly or partly after its expiration¹¹.

A resolution to confer or vary authority may determine either or both the maximum and minimum price for purchase by specifying a particular sum, or providing a basis or formula for calculating the amount of the price, but without reference to any person's discretion or opinion¹².

The rights of a company under a contract giving authority for market purchase¹³ are not capable of being assigned¹⁴.

Redemption or Purchase in general/B. PURCHASE OF OWN SHARES/(A) In general/1239.
Treatment of shares purchased.

1239. Treatment of shares purchased.

Where a limited company¹ makes a purchase of its own shares², then, if the statutory requirements as to treasury shares are satisfied³, the shares may be held and dealt with as treasury shares⁴. Otherwise, the shares are treated as cancelled, and the amount of the company's issued share capital⁵ is diminished accordingly by the nominal value of the shares cancelled⁶.

If on the purchase by a company of any of its own shares⁷ the shares are not treasury shares⁸ and the shares are consequently treated as cancelled, or the shares are treasury shares but are cancelled forthwith⁹, the company must give notice of cancellation to the registrar, within the period of 28 days beginning with the date on which the shares are delivered to it, specifying the shares cancelled¹⁰. The notice must be accompanied by a statement of capital¹¹ which must state with respect to the company's share capital immediately following the cancellation:

- 2166 (1) the total number of shares of the company¹²;
- 2167 (2) the aggregate nominal value of those shares¹³;
- 2168 (3) for each class of shares: (a) prescribed particulars of the rights attached to the shares¹⁴; (b) the total number of shares of that class; and (c) the aggregate nominal value of shares of that class¹⁵; and
- 2169 (4) the amount paid up and the amount, if any, unpaid on each share (whether on account of the nominal value of the share or by way of premium)¹⁶.

Where a company¹ has entered into an authorised contract for off-market purchase², or market purchase³ of its own shares⁴, the company must keep available for inspection a copy of the contract or, if the contract is not in writing, a written memorandum setting out its terms⁵. The copy or memorandum must be kept available for inspection from the conclusion of the contract until the end of the period of ten years beginning with: (1) the date on which the purchase of all the shares in pursuance of the contract is completed; or (2) the date on which the contract otherwise determines⁶. The copy or memorandum must be kept available for inspection at the company's registered office⁷, or at the company's alternative inspection location⁸. The company must give notice to the registrar of companies⁹ of the place at which the copy or memorandum is kept available for inspection, and of any change in that place, unless it has at all times been kept at the company's registered office¹⁰. Every copy or memorandum required to be kept must be kept open to inspection without charge by any member of the company¹¹, and in the case of a public company¹², by any other person¹³.

If default is made in complying with the inspection requirements¹⁴, or if default is made for 14 days in giving notice to the registrar¹⁵ of the place of inspection, or an inspection¹⁶ is refused, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁷.

Where a company¹ purchases its own shares², it must deliver a return to the registrar³ within the period of 28 days beginning with the date on which the shares are delivered to it⁴. The return must distinguish: (1) treasury shares⁵ and shares which are not treasury shares; and (2) treasury shares that are cancelled forthwith⁶ and treasury shares that are not so cancelled⁷. Particulars of shares delivered to the company on different dates and under different contracts may be included in a single return¹¹.

Effect of company's failure to redeem or purchase.

1242. Effect of company's failure to redeem or purchase.

Where a company¹ issues shares² on terms that they are or are liable to be redeemed³, or agrees to purchase any of its shares⁴, the company is not liable in damages in respect of any failure on its part to redeem or purchase any of the shares⁵. This is without prejudice to any right of the holder of the shares other than his right to sue the company for damages in respect of its failure⁶. The court may not grant an order for specific performance of the terms of redemption or purchase if the company shows that it is unable to meet the costs of redeeming or purchasing the shares in question out of distributable profits⁷.

If the company is wound up and at the commencement of the winding up any of the shares have not been redeemed or purchased, the terms of redemption or purchase may be enforced against the company⁸. When shares are redeemed or purchased in this way, they are treated as cancelled⁹. However, this does not apply if: (1) the terms provided for the redemption or purchase to take place at a date later than that of the commencement of the winding up; or (2) during the period beginning with the date on which the redemption or purchase was to have taken place, and ending with the commencement of the winding up, the company could not at any time have lawfully made a distribution equal in value to the price at which the shares were to have been redeemed or purchased¹⁰.

There must be paid in priority to any amount that the company is liable¹¹ to pay in respect of any shares: (a) all other debts and liabilities of the company (other than any due to members in their character as such¹²); and (b) if other shares carry rights, whether as to capital or as to income, that are preferred to the rights as to capital attaching to the first-mentioned shares, any amount due in satisfaction of those preferred rights¹³. Subject to that, any such amount must be paid in priority to any amounts due to members in satisfaction of their rights, whether as to capital or income, as members¹⁴.

PURCHASE OF OWN SHARES/(B) Redemption or Purchase by Private Company out of Capital/1245. Financing redemption or purchase of own shares out of capital.

1245. Financing redemption or purchase of own shares out of capital.

The 'permissible capital payment' is the payment that may¹ be made by a company² out of capital³ in respect of the redemption or purchase of its own shares⁴ as, after applying for that purpose any available profits⁵ of the company, and the proceeds of any fresh issue of shares made for the purposes of the redemption or purchase, is required to meet the price of redemption or purchase⁶.

Where a payment out of capital is made⁷ for the redemption or purchase of its own shares by private company⁸, if the permissible capital payment is less than the nominal amount of the shares redeemed or purchased, the amount of the difference must be transferred to the company's capital redemption reserve⁹. If the permissible capital payment is greater than the nominal amount of the shares redeemed or purchased: (1) the amount of any capital redemption reserve, share premium account or fully paid share capital of the company; and (2) any amount representing unrealised profits of the company for the time being standing to the credit of any revaluation reserve maintained by the company, may be reduced by a sum not exceeding (or by sums not in total exceeding) the amount by which the permissible capital payment exceeds the nominal amount of the shares¹⁰.

1 In accordance with the Companies Act 2006 Pt 18 Ch 5 (ss 709-723).

2 In a private company that falls within the Companies Act 2006 s 709 (see PARA 1244). As to the meaning of 'private company' see PARA 102. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

3 See PARA 1244 note 5.

4 As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1055.

5 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 18 Ch 5, the available profits of the company, in relation to the redemption or purchase of any shares, are the profits of the company that are available for distribution (within the meaning of Pt 23 (ss 829-853) (see PARA 1389)): s 711(1). But the question whether a company has any profits so available, and the amount of any such profits, is to be determined in accordance with s 712 instead of in accordance with ss 836-842 in Pt 23 (see PARA 1395-1400): s 711(2).

The available profits of the company are determined as follows: s 712(1). First, determine the profits of the company by reference to the following items as stated in the relevant accounts: (1) profits, losses, assets and liabilities; (2) provisions of the following kinds: (a) where the relevant accounts are Companies Act accounts, provisions of a kind specified for the purposes of s 712(2) by regulations under s 396 (see PARA 728); (b) where the relevant accounts are IAS accounts (see PARA 859), provisions of any kind; (3) share capital and reserves (including undistributable reserves): s 712(2). Second, reduce the amount so determined by the amount of any distribution lawfully made by the company, and any other relevant payment lawfully made by the company out of distributable profits, after the date of the relevant accounts and before the end of the relevant period: s 712(3). For this purpose, 'other relevant payment lawfully made' includes: (i) financial assistance lawfully given out of distributable profits in accordance with Pt 18 Ch 2 (ss 677-683) (see PARA 1223 et seq); (ii) payments lawfully made out of distributable profits in respect of the purchase by the company of any shares in the company; and (iii) payments of any description specified in s 705 (payments other than purchase price to be made out of distributable profits) (see PARA 1235) lawfully made by the company: s 712(4). The resulting figure is the amount of available profits: s 712(5). The 'relevant accounts' are any accounts that are prepared as at a date within the relevant period, and are such as to enable a reasonable judgment to be made as to the amounts of the items mentioned in s 712(2): s 712(6). 'Relevant period' means the period of three months ending with the date on which the directors' statement is made in accordance with s 714 (see PARA 1246): s 712(7).

As to the definition of 'provisions' for the purposes of head (2)(a) see the Small Companies and Groups (Accounts and Directors' Report) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/409, reg 12, Sch 7 Pt 2 para 4; and the Large and Medium-sized Companies and Groups (Accounts and Reports) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/410, reg 12, Sch 9 Pt 2 para 4.

Where the proceeds of a fresh issue are applied by the company in making a redemption or purchase of its own shares in addition to a payment out of capital under Pt 18 Ch 5, the references in s 734(2) and (3) to the permissible capital payment are to be read as referring to the aggregate of that payment and those proceeds: s 734(4).

PURCHASE OF OWN SHARES/(B) Redemption or Purchase by Private Company out of Capital/1246. Conditions for payment out of capital.

1246. Conditions for payment out of capital.

A payment out of capital by a private company¹ for the redemption or purchase of its own shares² is not lawful unless the statutory requirements governing the directors' statement and auditor's report³, approval by special resolution⁴, public notice of proposed payment⁵ and the directors' statement and auditor's report to be available for inspection⁶ are met⁷. This is subject to any order of the court⁸ extending the period for compliance on the application by persons objecting to payment⁹.

The company's directors must make a statement specifying the amount of the permissible capital payment for the shares in question¹⁰. It must state that, having made full inquiry into the affairs and prospects of the company, the directors have formed the opinion: (1) as regards its initial situation immediately following the date on which the payment out of capital is proposed to be made, that there will be no grounds on which the company could then be found unable to pay its debts¹¹; and (2) as regards its prospects for the year immediately following that date, that having regard to their intentions with respect to the management of the company's business during that year, and the amount and character of the financial resources that will in their view be available to the company during that year, the company will be able to continue to carry on business as a going concern, and will accordingly be able to pay its debts as they fall due, throughout that year¹².

The directors' statement must be in the prescribed form and must contain such information with respect to the nature of the company's business as may be prescribed¹³. It must in addition have annexed to it a report addressed to the directors by the company's auditor¹⁴ stating that: (a) he has inquired into the company's state of affairs; (b) the amount specified in the statement as the permissible capital payment for the shares in question is in his view properly determined¹⁵; and (c) he is not aware of anything to indicate that the opinion expressed by the directors in their statement as to any of the matters mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above is unreasonable in all the circumstances¹⁶.

If the directors make a statement without having reasonable grounds for the opinion expressed in it, an offence is committed by every director who is in default¹⁷.

1247. Procedure for special resolution sanctioning payment out of capital.

The payment out of capital for the redemption or purchase of a company's own shares¹ must be approved by a special resolution of the company². The resolution must be passed on, or within the week immediately following, the date on which the directors make the statement³ specifying the amount of the permissible capital payment for the shares in question⁴.

Where the special resolution⁵ is proposed as a written resolution⁶, a member who holds shares to which the resolution relates is not an eligible member⁷. Where the resolution is proposed at a meeting of the company, it is not effective if any member of the company holding shares to which the resolution relates exercises the voting rights carried by any of those shares in voting on the resolution, and the resolution would not have been passed if he had not done so⁸.

A copy of the directors' statement and auditor's report⁹ must be made available to members: (1) in the case of a written resolution, by being sent or submitted to every eligible member at or before the time at which the proposed resolution is sent or submitted to him; and (2) in the case of a resolution at a meeting, by being made available for inspection by members of the company at the meeting¹⁰. The resolution is ineffective if this requirement is not complied with¹¹.

The payment out of capital must be made no earlier than five weeks after the date on which the resolution¹² is passed, and no more than seven weeks after that date¹³.

1248. Publicity for proposed payment out of capital.

Within the week immediately following the date of the resolution sanctioning payment out of capital for the redemption or purchase of a company's own shares¹, the company must cause to be published in the Gazette² a notice: (1) stating that the company has approved a payment out of capital for the purpose of acquiring its own shares by redemption or purchase³ or both, as the case may be; (2) specifying the amount of the permissible capital payment⁴ for the shares in question, and the date of the resolution⁵; (3) stating where the directors' statement and auditor's report⁶ are available for inspection; and (4) stating that any creditor of the company may at any time within the five weeks immediately following the date of the resolution apply to the court⁷ for an order preventing the payment⁸.

Within the week immediately following the date of the resolution the company must also either cause a notice to the same effect as that required by heads (1) to (4) above to be published in an appropriate national newspaper⁹, or give notice in writing to that effect to each of its creditors¹⁰.

Not later than the day on which the company first publishes or gives the notice as required, the company must deliver to the registrar¹¹ a copy of the directors' statement and auditor's report¹².

The directors' statement and auditor's report must be kept available for inspection throughout the period beginning with the day on which the company first publishes or gives the required notice, and ending five weeks after the date of the resolution for payment out of capital¹³. They must be kept available for inspection at the company's registered office¹⁴, or at the company's alternative inspection location¹⁵. The company must give notice to the registrar of the place at which the statement and report are kept available for inspection, and of any change in that place, unless they have at all times been kept at the company's registered office¹⁶. They must be open to the inspection of any member or creditor of the company without charge¹⁷. If default is made for 14 days in complying with the requirement to give notice to the registrar, or an inspection is refused, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁸.

Where a private company¹ passes a special resolution approving a payment out of capital for the redemption or purchase of any of its shares², any member of the company³ (other than one who consented to or voted in favour of the resolution), and any creditor of the company, may apply to the court⁴ for the cancellation of the resolution⁵. On making an application to the court to cancel a resolution, the applicants, or the person making the application on their behalf, must immediately give notice to the registrar⁸. In addition, on being served with notice of any such application, the company must immediately give notice to the registrar⁹. Within 15 days of the making of the court's order on the application, or such longer period as the court may at any time direct, the company must deliver to the registrar a copy of the order¹⁰. If a company fails to comply with these obligations, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹¹.

On an application to the court to cancel a resolution approving a payment out of capital¹, the court may if it thinks fit adjourn the proceedings in order that an arrangement may be made to the satisfaction of the court for the purchase of the interests of dissentient members², or for the protection of dissentient creditors³. The court may also give such directions and make such orders as it thinks expedient for facilitating or carrying into effect any such arrangement⁴. Subject to that, the court must make an order either cancelling or confirming the resolution, and may do so on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit⁵. If the court confirms the resolution, it may by order alter or extend any date or period of time specified in the resolution, or in any statutory provision⁶ applying to the redemption or purchase to which the resolution relates⁷. The court's order may, if the court thinks fit: (1) provide for the purchase by the company of the shares of any of its members and for the reduction accordingly of the company's capital; and (2) make any alteration in the company's articles⁸ that may be required in consequence of that provision⁹. The court's order may, if the court thinks fit, require the company not to make any, or any specified, amendments of its articles without the leave of the court¹⁰.

Treasury shares.

(C) TREASURY SHARES

1251. Treasury shares.

Where a limited company¹ makes a purchase of its own shares², the purchase is made out of distributable profits³, and the shares are qualifying shares⁴, then the company may hold the shares (or any of them), or deal with any of them, at any time, as treasury shares⁵. Where shares are held by the company, the company must be entered in its register of members⁶ as the member holding the shares⁷.

In the Companies Acts⁸ references to a company holding shares as treasury shares are to the company holding shares that: (1) were (or are treated as having been) purchased by it in the circumstances set out above; and (2) have been held by the company continuously since they were so purchased (or treated as purchased)⁹.

Where shares are held by a company as treasury shares, the company must not exercise any right in respect of the treasury shares, and any purported exercise of such a right is void¹⁰. This applies, in particular, to any right to attend or vote at meetings¹¹.

No dividend may be paid, and no other distribution, whether in cash or otherwise, of the company's assets (including any distribution of assets to members on a winding up) may be made to the company, in respect of the treasury shares¹².

Nothing in the provisions set out above¹³ prevents: (a) an allotment of shares as fully paid bonus shares in respect of the treasury shares; or (b) the payment of any amount payable on the redemption of the treasury shares (if they are redeemable shares)¹⁴.

Where shares¹ are held as treasury shares², the company³ may at any time: (1) sell the shares, or any of them, for a cash consideration⁴; or (2) transfer the shares, or any of them, for the purposes of or pursuant to an employees' share scheme⁵.

If the company receives a notice⁶, in connection with a takeover offer that does not relate to shares of different classes, that a person desires to acquire shares held by the company as treasury shares⁷, the company must not sell or transfer the shares to which the notice relates except to that person⁸.

Where shares held by a company as treasury shares are sold, or are transferred for the purposes of an employees' share scheme, the company must deliver a return to the registrar⁹ not later than 28 days after the shares are disposed of¹⁰. The return must state, with respect to shares of each class disposed of, the number and nominal value of the shares and the date on which they were disposed of¹¹. Particulars of shares disposed of on different dates may be included in a single return¹². If default is made in complying with this requirement an offence is committed by every officer of the company who is in default¹³.

The creation of an obligation on the part of a settlement bank to make a relevant payment in respect of the transfer by a company to a system-member, by means of a relevant system, of a share held by the company as a treasury share is to be regarded as a means of payment falling within head (5): Companies (Shares and Share Capital) Order 2009, SI 2009/388, art 4(3). The expressions 'relevant system', 'settlement bank' and 'system-member' have the meanings given in the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755; and 'relevant payment' means a payment in accordance with the rules and practices of an operator of a relevant system: Companies (Shares and Share Capital) Order 2009, SI 2009/388, art 4(4). 1253. Disclosure by company of cancellation of treasury shares.

Where shares¹ are held as treasury shares², the company³ may at any time cancel any or all of the shares⁴. If shares held as treasury shares cease to be qualifying shares⁵, the company must forthwith cancel the shares⁶. If a company cancels shares held as treasury shares, the amount of the company's share capital is reduced accordingly by the nominal amount of the shares cancelled⁷. The directors⁸ may take any steps required to enable the company to cancel its shares without complying with the provisions⁹ relating to the reduction of share capital¹⁰.

Where shares held by a company as treasury shares are cancelled, the company must deliver a return to the registrar¹¹ not later than 28 days after the shares are cancelled¹². The return must state, with respect to shares of each class cancelled, the number and nominal value of the shares and the date on which they were cancelled¹³. Particulars of shares cancelled on different dates may be included in a single return¹⁴. The notice must be accompanied by a statement of capital¹⁵ which must state with respect to the company's share capital immediately following the cancellation: (1) the total number of shares of the company; (2) the aggregate nominal value of those shares; (3) for each class of shares (a) prescribed particulars of the rights attached to the shares¹⁶; (b) the total number of shares of that class; and (c) the aggregate nominal value of shares of that class; and (4) the amount paid up and the amount, if any, unpaid on each share (whether on account of the nominal value of the share or by way of premium)¹⁷.

(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY

(i) Power to Borrow

1256. Company's capacity to borrow.

A company regulated by the Companies Act 2006¹ has unrestricted capacity, unless its objects specifically are restricted by the articles of association². This is a change from the situation that pertained under the Companies Act 1985 and its predecessor legislation³, according to which a company was obliged to state its objects in the memorandum of association⁴. Formerly, a trading or commercial company had an implied power to borrow to a reasonable amount for the purposes of its business, and to mortgage or charge all or any part of its property to secure the money so borrowed, even where no express power to borrow or mortgage was given to it, provided that such borrowing or giving of security was not expressly prohibited⁵. No power of borrowing was implied when the company was not a trading or commercial undertaking⁶; and, in such a case, a company might borrow only if authorised to do so by its constitution. In view of these limitations, it was almost invariable practice to give an express power to borrow in the company's constitution.

Under the Companies Act 2006, the company's articles may impose a limit on borrowing⁷, although subsequently a company may amend its articles of association by special resolution⁸ so as to extend or remove any limit on borrowing⁹.

Where a company's constitution expressly limits the capacity of the company to borrow, any borrowing beyond that limit is, strictly speaking, ultra vires and, at common law, void¹⁰. However, no intending lender will be concerned with any question of capacity because the Companies Act 2006 provides that the validity of an act done by a company may not be called into question on the ground of lack of capacity by reason of anything in the company's constitution¹¹.

11 See the Companies Act 2006 s 39(1); and PARA 265. The protection thus afforded does not affect any right of a member of the company to bring proceedings to restrain the doing of an action that is beyond the powers of the directors: see s 40(4); and PARA 263.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(i) Power to Borrow/1257. Borrowing when directors' powers limited.

1257. Borrowing when directors' powers limited.

A company's articles of association may limit the directors' authority to borrow¹; and a member of the company² may bring proceedings to restrain the doing of an action (for example, borrowing) that is beyond the powers of the directors³, although no such proceedings lie in respect of an act to be done in fulfilment of a legal obligation arising from a previous act of the company⁴.

However, in favour of a person dealing with a company in good faith, the power of the board of directors to bind the company, or to authorise others to do so, is deemed to be free of any limitation under the company's constitution⁵. Furthermore, a person dealing with a company is not bound to inquire as to any limitation on the powers of the directors to bind the company or authorise others to do so, is presumed to have acted in good faith unless the contrary is proved, and is not regarded as acting in bad faith by reason only of his knowing that an act is beyond the powers of the directors under the company's constitution⁶.

If the company enters into a transaction which, although within its powers, is in excess⁷ of or an abuse of the directors' powers, the transaction may be set aside⁸, or ratified by the company⁹, an ordinary resolution being sufficient for that purpose¹⁰. Ratification of the transaction also may be inferred¹¹. This protection does not, however, affect any liability incurred by the directors, or any other person, by reason of the directors' exceeding their powers¹². A company may ratify conduct by a director amounting to negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust in relation to the company, if the decision to ratify such conduct is made by resolution of the members of the company¹³.

The power to borrow must be exercised in good faith for the benefit of the company, and not for purposes other than those for which it has been conferred¹⁴.

Where one company lends money to another, and one person is a director of both companies, the knowledge acquired by him as officer of one company is not imputed to the other company, unless he has some duty to communicate his knowledge to the company sought to be affected by the notice and some duty imposed on him by that company to receive it; and if the officer in common has been guilty of fraudulent conduct, or even irregularity, the court will not draw the inference that he has fulfilled his duties¹⁵.

1258. Security given by directors.

In the absence of limitations in the company's constitution¹, a company's directors² may borrow to such an amount and upon such terms and security and for such purposes for the benefit of the company as they think fit; they may issue bonds or debentures³ to secure sums borrowed; and they may borrow on other securities⁴.

Directors may exercise the power to mortgage for such purposes as to secure a past debt, if the mortgage is not given in such circumstances as to make it a preference⁵; to secure sums owing on a bill of exchange given by directors to secure a debt of the company⁶; or to indemnify directors against loss on guarantees given by them to the company's creditors⁷. They may issue debentures in satisfaction of the debts of an insolvent business which the company has taken over and against which it has agreed to indemnify the vendor of the business⁸, and may give the vendor of a solvent business preference over unsecured creditors in respect of a part of the purchase price⁹. Even if proceedings to enforce a series of debentures have begun, they may issue further debentures of the series, provided that a receiver has not been appointed¹⁰.

A director of a company¹ may, unless prohibited by the company's constitution², lend money to the company, provided that, in so doing, he is acting for its benefit, even though the loan is made on the security of a debenture³ issued at a discount⁴.

A trader, when selling his solvent business to a company, even though it consists only of himself and members of his family, may as a general rule lawfully take debentures charged upon all the company's assets in satisfaction of the whole or part of his purchase money⁵.

Where two or more companies join in giving one debenture¹ to secure a joint loan, and thereby purport to charge their several undertakings and assets with payment of the amount advanced, but only under a general power to borrow in the company's constitution², the charge is ultra vires³ so far as it purports to make one company's assets a security for money lent to the other company or companies; but the charge is good as to each company's assets to the extent of the money actually received by that company⁴.

An overdraft at a company's bank is a loan¹. A sale in good faith of part of its equipment by a company which has exhausted its borrowing powers, accompanied by an agreement on its part to hire the equipment from the purchaser at a rent which will repay the purchase money and interest and enable the company at the end of the term to repurchase the equipment for a nominal consideration, is not a borrowing². A sale of goods in good faith with a proviso that the purchaser may call on the vendor to repurchase them at a profit to the purchaser at the end of four years is not a borrowing; but it is a borrowing where there is not only a sale but also a collateral document providing for the redemption by the vendor of the goods comprised in the sale³.

1262. Condition precedent to borrowing.

Where the power of a company's directors to borrow¹ is limited to a power to borrow upon the security of debentures² only after a certain proportion of the share capital³ has been subscribed, any debentures issued before such subscription will be invalid⁴.

Although as a general principle any condition precedent to the exercise of a power to borrow or mortgage should be performed, yet, where the condition is a matter pertaining to the internal management of the company, its non-performance does not invalidate a loan by a person acting in good faith without notice, nor any security given in respect of the loan by the company⁵. Statutory protection is also afforded to a person dealing with a company in good faith, in respect of the power of the board of directors to bind the company, or to authorise others to do so, which is deemed to be free of any limitation under the company's constitution⁶.

If the lender is a director, he may be taken to have notice of non-compliance with internal regulations⁷; but a security transferred to him by a person who had no notice will be valid in his hands⁸.

1263. Public company trading certificate: when borrowing powers commence.

A company¹ that is a public company² must not exercise any borrowing powers³ unless the registrar of companies⁴ has issued it with a certificate (a 'trading certificate') indicating that he is satisfied that the nominal value⁵ of the company's allotted share capital⁶ is not less than the authorised minimum⁷. Such a certificate is conclusive evidence that the company is entitled to exercise borrowing powers⁸.

If a company exercises borrowing powers in contravention of the prohibition on doing so without a trading certificate⁹, any such contravention does not affect the validity of a transaction entered into by the company¹⁰. However, if a company: (1) enters into a transaction in contravention of that prohibition¹¹; and (2) fails to comply with its obligations in connection with the transaction within 21 days from being called on to do so¹², the directors of the company¹³ are jointly and severally liable to indemnify any other party to the transaction in respect of any loss or damage suffered by him by reason of the company's failure to comply with its obligations¹⁴.

Where a security is transferable at law and is legally transferred, an irregularity in the issue cannot be set up against an assignee for value in good faith without notice, even where the original holder had notice of it¹; but the equitable assignee of a security takes it subject to any equities affecting the person to whom it was originally issued, even though the assignment is taken for value and without notice of the circumstances giving rise to such equities², unless the terms of issue otherwise provide³. If a debenture defectively created is issued to a person who has no notice of the defect⁴, so that the company cannot rely on the defect, and is then assigned to a person who has notice of the defect, the assignee has a good title to the debenture⁵.

COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(i) Power to Borrow/1265. Charge on uncalled capital.

1265. Charge on uncalled capital.

The property of a company does not include the liability of its members to contribute to its funds¹; but a mortgage of uncalled capital² may be made³ where, by the company's constitution⁴, whether original or as amended⁵, there is express power to mortgage uncalled capital, or where there is a power to mortgage 'the company's properties and rights'⁶, or 'property and assets whether existing or future'⁷, or 'to receive money on loan . . . upon any security of the company or upon the security of any property of the company'⁸, or to borrow money on the security of 'all or any of the real and personal assets . . . of the company'⁹, or to borrow 'in such other manner as the company may determine', when the preceding specific powers cover everything it could charge except uncalled capital¹⁰. A charge on uncalled capital is not authorised by a power to charge the company's 'funds or property'¹¹, or to charge its 'works, hereditaments, plant, property and effects'¹² or its 'property'¹³; but such a power authorises a charge on calls already made or determined upon¹⁴.

Where a company, with power to charge its uncalled capital, issues debentures¹⁵ charging only its undertaking and its present and after-acquired property, the charge does not include uncalled capital¹⁶; nor does a charge on 'all the lands, tenements and estates of the company and all their undertaking'¹⁷, or on 'their undertaking and property and receipts and revenues'¹⁸, or on 'their real and personal estate'¹⁹.

If a resolution has been passed under the Companies Act 2006 (or under the enactments which it replaces²⁰) prohibiting any portion of the uncalled capital being called up except in the event and for the purpose of the company being wound up²¹, directors cannot mortgage that uncalled capital, even if the constitution empowers them to mortgage uncalled capital²².

Where a temporary loan is made by a bank to a company on the security of its uncalled capital, a charge made by a resolution of the board, that is, by parol, is good, subject to the statutory provisions²³ as to registration²⁴.

A company limited by guarantee²⁵ cannot charge the amounts which the members have undertaken to contribute in the event of a winding up²⁶.

A mortgage of uncalled capital¹ may be enforced while the company is a going concern by appointing a receiver², and either ordering the company's directors³ to make calls and pay the proceeds over to the receiver or ordering the receiver to make the calls⁴. Such a charge may also be enforced after the company goes into liquidation⁵; but generally speaking only the liquidator may make and enforce the calls although, on an adequate indemnity being given, a receiver so appointed may obtain leave to use the liquidator's name in proceedings to enforce the calls⁶.

The fact that uncalled capital has been charged does not prevent the company from forfeiting shares⁷.

2 In South Australian Barytes Ltd v Wood (1976) 12 SASR 527, Aust SC, it was held that the deed of charge validly delegated to a receiver and manager the directors' powers to make calls, the court intimating that such a delegation could in any event easily be implied. (ii) Floating Charges

1269. Meanings of 'fixed charge' and 'floating charge'.

The terms 'floating charge' and 'floating security' mean a charge or security which is not to be put into immediate operation, but is to float over a company's assets so that the company is allowed to carry on its business¹. While a specific (or 'fixed') charge is one which without more fastens on ascertained and definite property or property capable of being ascertained and defined, a floating charge moves with the property which it is intended to affect until some event occurs or some act is done which causes it to settle and fasten on the subject of the charge within its reach and grasp².

The essence of a floating charge is that it is a charge, not on any particular asset, but on a fluctuating body of assets which remain under the management and control of the chargor; and the chargor has the ability to dispose of and deal with the charged asset and, if necessary, to remove it from the security without first requiring the permission or consent of the chargee³; the essence of a fixed charge is that the charge is on a particular asset or class of assets which the chargor cannot deal with free from the charge without the consent of the chargee⁴.

Deciding whether a charge is fixed or floating involves: (1) construing the instrument of charge to establish the intention of the parties with regard to their mutual rights and obligations in respect of the charged assets; and (2) characterising the charge thereby construed as a matter of law⁵. It is clear that any label that might be attached to a charge in a particular instrument does not prevent the court from declaring it to be otherwise⁶.

Accordingly, the language used in a debenture⁷ is not conclusive; while a creditor can state that a charge in a debenture is fixed, whether the clause in question imposes a fixed or a floating charge depends on the legal characteristics of the charge⁸. Mortgage debentures usually contain a charge upon the undertaking of the company and all its property⁹, real or personal, whether present or future, and may or may not give a charge upon uncalled capital¹⁰. The conditions usually provide that the charge so given shall be a floating charge or security. Where a series of debentures or debenture stock¹¹ is secured by a trust deed¹², then, in addition to specific property of the company being assigned by it to the trustees to secure the debentures or stock, a floating charge is generally given upon all the other property of the company, present or future, and its undertaking, and in some cases its uncalled capital.

A general charge may be construed as a floating security even though the instrument does not expressly so describe it. Thus a charge on the undertaking of a company constitutes a floating charge on all its property¹³, and debentures given to bind a company and all its estate, property and effects¹⁴, or its real and personal estate¹⁵, constitute a floating security.

A floating charge may extend to part only of the company's assets¹⁶, the profits of certain schemes for developing land¹⁷, or the furniture and effects 'which now are or which may from time to time be placed upon or used in or about' specified premises¹⁸. It may also arise from a contract of sale of goods on credit terms reserving the equitable ownership in the goods to the vendor¹⁹ or from a contractual lien on sub-freights²⁰.

In the Court of Appeal, Romer LJ at 295 gave the most often cited description of a floating charge as being a charge which has the following characteristics: (1) it is a charge on a class of assets of a company present and future; (2) that class is one which, in the ordinary course of the business of the company, would be changing from time to time; and (3) by the charge it is contemplated that, until some future step is taken by or on behalf of those interested in the charge, the company may carry on its business in the ordinary way as far as concerns the particular class of assets. It has been stated judicially since that the characteristics listed at head (1) and head (2) above, although typical of a floating charge, are not distinctive of it and it is the characteristic listed at head (3) above that is the hallmark: see Agnew v IRC [2001] UKPC 28 at [13], [2001] 2 AC 710 at [13], [2001] 2 BCLC 188 at [13] per Lord Millett; and In re Spectrum Plus Ltd (in liquidation) [2005] UKHL 41 at [106]-[107], [2005] 2 AC 680 at [106]-[107], sub nom Re Spectrum Plus Ltd, National Westminster Bank plc v Spectrum Plus Ltd [2005] 4 All ER 209 at [106]-[107] per Lord Scott of Foscote (who went on to say that he was inclined to think that the characteristic listed at head (3) above qualifies a charge as a floating charge so that it cannot be a fixed charge whatever its other characteristics).

A floating charge was formerly unknown to the law of Scotland, and such a charge given by a company registered in Scotland over assets in England was void: see Carse v Coppen 1951 SC 233. The law of Scotland was changed to enable companies to give security by way of floating charge in 1961; and the definition of 'floating charge' that is used for the purposes of the Insolvency Act 1986 means a charge which, as created, was a floating charge and includes a Scottish floating charge: see s 251; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 212. Otherwise, the expression 'floating charge' is taken to be self-explanatory; it bears the meaning attributed to it by judicial decision: see In re Spectrum Plus Ltd (in liquidation) at [98] per Lord Scott of Foscote.

The issue as to characterisation of a charge is important because statute has given priority to preferential creditors over debenture holders so far as payment of debts out of assets subject to a floating charge is concerned: see PARA 1271.

1270. Charges on book debts.

A charge on book debts¹ may be a fixed or floating charge²; the categorisation will depend upon the legal characteristics of the charge and not on the intention or language of the parties³. The company's freedom to deal with the charged assets without the consent of the charge holder is characteristic of a floating charge⁴.

Accordingly, a restriction on disposal which permits a company to extinguish book debts and to use the proceeds freely for its own benefit is inconsistent with the nature of a fixed charge because it enables a debt to be withdrawn from the security by the chargor's act⁵. Similarly, a charge over book debts, present and future, where the chargor: (1) cannot dispose of or charge the uncollected book debts but can deal with its debtors and collect the debts; and (2) is obliged to place the payments made to it by its debtors in a designated account with the chargee bank, but without any restriction on how the company may use those proceeds (barring the normal overdraft limit placed on the account), creates a floating charge rather than a fixed charge over the book debts⁶.

A debenture that requires book debts to be paid into a company's account with the chargee bank and prevents any dealing with the book debts without the prior consent in writing of the bank does not infringe the competition rules in the EC Treaty⁷.

1 According to usage, book debts are sums due to a company arising from the normal course of its business. The greater part of most entrepreneurial companies' assets would consist of raw materials, work in progress, stock-in-trade and trade debts; these were circulating assets, replaced in the normal course of business and constantly changing, and were not amenable to being the subject of traditional forms of security, before equity intervened: see In re Spectrum Plus Ltd (in liquidation) [2005] UKHL 41 at [95], [2005] 2 AC 680 at [95], sub nom Re Spectrum Plus Ltd, National Westminster Bank plc v Spectrum Plus Ltd [2005] 4 All ER 209 at [95] per Lord Scott of Foscote.

2 As to the meanings of 'fixed charge' and floating charge' see PARA 1269.

3 As to whether a charge is to be characterised as fixed or floating see PARA 1269.

4 See the cases cited in PARA 1269 notes 1-3.

5 Agnew v IRC [2001] UKPC 28, [2001] 2 AC 710, [2001] 2 BCLC 188 (prohibition on factoring or alienation of the book debts was insufficient to convert a floating charge into a fixed charge while the company was free to deal with the debts without the chargee's consent). The decision in Re New Bullas Trading Ltd [1994] 1 BCLC 485, CA, where purportedly there were two charges, one fixed and one floating, must be considered to be wrongly decided: Agnew v IRC at [50] per Lord Millett (the only relevant assets were uncollected book debts which were at the free disposal of the company and therefore inconsistent with the nature of a fixed charge).

6 In re Spectrum Plus Ltd (in liquidation) [2005] UKHL 41, [2005] 2 AC 680, sub nom Re Spectrum Plus Ltd, National Westminster Bank plc v Spectrum Plus Ltd [2005] 4 All ER 209 (overruling Re Siebe Gorman & Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep 142). It is, however, quite clear that a fixed charge on book debts, present and future, is conceptually possible, so long as the particular form of debenture, properly construed, provides for a charge over specific, ascertainable book debts as and when they accrue to the chargor company: see In re Spectrum Plus Ltd (in liquidation) at [102]-[103] per Lord Scott of Foscote, and at [136] per Lord Walker of Gestingthorpe; and Siebe Gorman & Co Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd (which part of the judgment was not overruled by the House of Lords in In re Spectrum Plus Ltd (in liquidation)). If the terms of the debenture were such as to require the trader to segregate its book debts and to pay all that are collected into the bank and to prohibit the trader from drawing on the account (so that the account is blocked), a charge on debts, described as a fixed or specific charge, would indeed take effect as such over present or future book debts: see Re Keenan Bros Ltd [1986] BCLC 242, Ir SC, followed in William Gaskell Group Ltd v Highley (Nos 1, 2, 3) [1994] 1 BCLC 197. In those circumstances, the chargee would be in control, prior to crystallisation, and the trader would be unable to trade in the ordinary way without the chargee's positive concurrence: see In re Spectrum Plus Ltd (in liquidation) at [140] per Lord Walker of Gestingthorpe. It is not enough to provide in the debenture for an account to be blocked, if it was not in fact operated as a blocked account, but it is not inconsistent with the fixed nature of a charge on book debts for the holder of the charge to appoint the company its agent to collect the debts for its account and on its behalf: Agnew v IRC [2001] UKPC 28 at [48], [2001] 2 AC 710 at [48], [2001] 2 BCLC 188 at [48] per Lord Millett. Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(ii) Floating Charges/1271. Effect of floating charge.

1271. Effect of floating charge.

A floating security being only a charge on the assets for the time being¹, the company may in the ordinary course of its business², unless it is otherwise agreed and until the security becomes fixed, sell³, let, mortgage⁴, or otherwise deal with⁵ any of its assets, just as if the floating charge had not been created⁶. It follows that, if the company enters into a specifically enforceable agreement to sell land, the subsequent crystallisation of the charge will not afford a defence to a claim by the purchaser for specific performance of that agreement⁷. Where a company has created a floating charge on its undertaking and assets and has reserved power to mortgage its property, it cannot in general create another general floating charge over all the assets to rank in priority to, or pari passu with, the first floating charge⁸; but, where the company has reserved power to charge specified assets, it may create a floating charge on those assets in priority to the general floating charge⁹.

Each asset within the scope of the floating charge must be regarded as equitably assigned to the debenture holder by way of charge as soon as it comes into the ownership of the company, so that, if such asset is a debt, no right of set-off of any subsequently acquired debt could defeat the debenture holder's interest¹⁰. However, where necessary, property subject to a floating charge must be used to fund the general expenses of winding up in priority to the floating charge holder and is subject to any preferential creditors to be paid out of that property¹¹. In relation to a charge which is a floating charge on its creation and which is created after 15 September 2003¹², realisations from such a charge are a prescribed part of the company's net property that must be made available for the satisfaction of unsecured debts¹³.

Even before a floating security becomes fixed or 'crystallised', the debenture holders are entitled to an injunction to restrain the company from parting with its assets otherwise than in the ordinary course of its business, as, for example, when, with a view to its ceasing to be going concern, it agrees to sell all its property¹⁴. Where a floating charge is held over the company's assets and undertakings and void dispositions of the company's property are made¹⁵, that property remains subject to the charge¹⁶.

The administrator of a company¹⁷ may dispose of or take action relating to property which is subject to a floating charge as if it were not subject to the charge¹⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'floating security' see PARA 1269.

1272. Restrictions on operation of floating charge.

It is usual to qualify the operation of a floating security¹ by providing that the company shall not create a mortgage or charge on all or any of the assets, ranking in priority to or pari passu with the charge given by the debentures². The mere existence of such a restriction in a debenture containing a specific charge on certain assets does not enable a floating charge on the remaining assets to be implied³.

Such a restriction does not prevent a solicitor from acquiring a lien having priority over the floating charge⁴; or a mortgagee of an insurance policy, without notice of such provision, from acquiring priority by giving notice to the insurance company⁵; or a person without notice from acquiring a charge on specific property in priority to the debentures⁶. This restriction does not prevent a vendor who leaves the purchase price of property acquired from him by the company on mortgage from obtaining priority for that mortgage⁷, or a lender who provides the purchase price of property acquired by the company in consideration of a first mortgage from obtaining priority for that mortgage⁸.

Similarly, where a specific mortgagee, being a bank, knows that debentures have been issued, and even holds some of the same series as security for an account of another company, the bank is not affected with notice of the restriction⁹ and the registration of particulars of debentures pursuant to the Companies Act 2006, or earlier Acts¹⁰, although it amounts to constructive notice of the debentures, does not amount to constructive notice of the restriction, at any rate where particulars of the restriction are not also registered¹¹.

Where such a restriction exists, and a company transfers goods to creditors at a fair price to find money to carry on the company's business, then, even though the creditors are not dealers in such goods, the transaction will be held to be a sale and not an infringement of the restriction, provided that the transfer is an out and out sale¹².

1273. When floating charge becomes fixed: crystallisation.

If the company ceases its business¹ (but not if it ceases to be a going concern, in so far as there is any difference)² or if it is wound up, or if a receiver is appointed, the security ceases to be a floating security and becomes a fixed charge³, and the company cannot thereafter deal with any part of the property so charged except subject to the charge⁴. It does not, however, automatically crystallise on the crystallisation of a subsequent floating charge⁵.

Where the security merely provides that the company is at liberty to deal with the property charged until the happening of a specified event, the security continues to be a floating one after the happening of that event until a receiver is appointed or until the company goes into liquidation⁶. The mere application for a receiver to be appointed is not sufficient to affect the company's power of disposition⁷. The parties to a charge may make provision for the floating charge to become fixed or to 'crystallise' on the happening of a defined event⁸.

1274. Effect of floating charge becoming fixed.

When a floating security¹ upon all the property or assets of the company becomes fixed, it constitutes a charge upon all the property or assets then belonging to the company. It has priority over any subsequent equitable charges² and over unsecured creditors³. Where necessary, property subject to a floating charge must be used to fund the general expenses of winding up in priority to the floating charge holder and is subject to any preferential creditors to be paid out of that property⁴. In relation to a charge which is a floating charge on its creation and which is created after 15 September 2003⁵, realisations from such a charge are a prescribed part of the company's net property that must be made available for the satisfaction of unsecured debts⁶.

A floating charge on all the undertaking and property of a company including uncalled capital constitutes a charge on money recovered by a liquidator in misfeasance proceedings⁷ as well as on calls got in by him⁸.

1275. Effect of attachment of debts.

Where, after a judgment creditor has obtained and served on a company a third party debt order attaching debts due from the company to the judgment debtor¹, the company borrows money on the security of a debenture comprising all its assets, and execution is then levied to enforce the attachment on its goods, the title of a receiver subsequently appointed under the debenture prevails². Where judgment is obtained against a company and the judgment creditor serves a third party debt order on a person owing the company a debt which is at the time subject to a floating charge in a debenture, the title of the debenture holder prevails over that of the creditor, even though his receiver is appointed after the service of the order³, and the receiver's title prevails even if the third party debt order is made absolute before he is appointed⁴, unless the money has been actually paid over under the order⁵; and, even if debentures are irregularly issued, the rights of the holder, if he had no notice of the irregularity, prevail over those of an execution creditor⁶. The court will not, however, restrain an execution from proceeding or refuse to make a third party debt order unless the debenture holder takes some step to turn his security from a floating into a fixed charge⁷.

(iii) Registration of Company Charges

A. REQUIREMENT TO REGISTER

1277. Requirement to register charges created by company.

A company¹ that creates a charge² that is required to be registered³ must deliver the prescribed particulars⁴ of the charge, together with the instrument (if any) by which the charge is created or evidenced, to the registrar of companies⁵ for registration before the end of the period allowed for registration⁶. The registration of such a charge may instead be effected on the application of any person interested in it⁷; and where registration is effected on the application of some person other than the company, that person is entitled to recover from the company the amount of any fees properly paid by him to the registrar on registration⁸.

If a company fails to comply with this requirement to register a charge⁹, an offence is committed by the company, and by any officer of the company who is in default¹⁰; a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to a fine or (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum¹¹.

Where any commission, allowance or discount has been paid or made either directly or indirectly by a company to a person in consideration of his subscribing or agreeing to subscribe (whether absolutely or conditionally) for debentures in a company¹², or in consideration of his procuring or agreeing to procure subscriptions (whether absolute or conditional) for such debentures¹³, the particulars that are required to be sent for registration¹⁴ must include particulars as to the amount (or rate per centage) of the commission, discount or allowance so paid or made¹⁵. However, a failure to comply with this requirement¹⁶ does not affect the validity of the debentures issued¹⁷.

1 In the Companies Act 2006 Pt 25 Ch 1 (ss 860-877) (Company Charges: Companies registered in England and Wales or in Northern Ireland), 'company' means a company registered in England and Wales or in Northern Ireland: s 861(5). 4 In the Companies Acts, 'prescribed' means prescribed (by order or by regulations) by the Secretary of State: Companies Act 2006 s 1167. - 2173 (4) the name and address of the person entitled to the charge (reg 2(d)); and
- 2174 (5) short particulars of the property charged (reg 2(e)).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(iii) Registration of Company Charges/A. REQUIREMENT TO REGISTER/1279. Charges required to be registered.

1279. Charges required to be registered.

Every charge¹ falling under the following heads, created² by a company³, is required to be registered⁴ with the registrar of companies⁵:

- 546 (1) a charge on land or any interest in land⁶, other than a charge for any rent or other periodical sum issuing out of the land⁷;
- 547 (2) a charge created or evidenced by an instrument which, if executed by an individual, would require registration as a bill of sale⁸;
- 548 (3) a charge for the purpose of securing any issue of debentures⁹;
- 549 (4) a charge on uncalled share capital of the company¹⁰;
- 550 (5) a charge on calls made but not paid¹¹;
- 551 (6) a charge on book debts of the company¹²;
- 552 (7) a floating charge¹³ on the undertaking¹⁴ or property¹⁵ of the company¹⁶;
- 553 (8) a charge on a ship or aircraft, or any share in a ship¹⁷;
- 554 (9) a charge on goodwill or any intellectual property¹⁸.

1 For these purposes, 'charge' includes mortgage (see PARA 1277 note 2), but does not include a charging order imposed under the Charging Orders Act 1979 s 1 (see MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW vol 73 (2009) PARA 636): Re Overseas Aviation Engineering (GB) Ltd [1963] Ch 24, [1962] 3 All ER 12, CA. The provisions relating to registration of charges cannot be evaded by making what is in fact a mortgage or charge in form an absolute assignment: Re Kent and Sussex Sawmills Ltd [1947] Ch 177, [1946] 2 All ER 638. Cf Lloyds and Scottish Finance Ltd v Prentice (1977) 121 Sol Jo 847, CA; affd sub nom Lloyds and Scottish Finance Ltd v Cyril Lord Carpets Sales Ltd (1979) [1992] BCLC 609, HL (assignment construed as absolute). As to the registration of charges by overseas companies see the Overseas Companies (Execution of Documents and Registration of Charges) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1917; and PARAS 1825, 1833. As to charges on existing property see PARA 1280; and as to charges in other jurisdictions see PARAS 1282, 1283.

2 Whether the parties have created a charge is a matter of construction. A charge such as an unpaid vendor's lien which arises by operation of law is not 'created' within the meaning of these provisions: London and Cheshire Insurance Co Ltd v Laplagrene Property Co Ltd [1971] Ch 499, [1971] 1 All ER 766. As to the time of creation see PARA 1278. In the case of the usual arrangement of a conveyance of property where part of the consideration is left outstanding on mortgage, the charge is created after the conveyance and accordingly falls within these provisions: Capital Finance Co Ltd v Stokes [1969] 1 Ch 261, [1968] 3 All ER 625, CA.

3 As to the meaning of 'company' for the purposes of registration see PARA 1277 note 1. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

5 See the Companies Act 2006 s 860(7). The provisions of s 860 (see PARA 1277) apply to the charges listed in heads (1) to (9) in the text: see s 860(7). As to the fees payable for registration of a charge under Pt 25 Ch 1 (ss 860-877) see the Registrar of Companies (Fees) (Companies, Overseas Companies and Limited Liability Partnerships) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2101, reg 3, Sch 1 para 7(g). As to the power of the Secretary of State by regulations to amend the Companies Act 2006 Pt 25 (ss 860-894) see s 894; and PARA 1277 note 1.

6 The holding of debentures entitling the holder to a charge on land is not, for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 860(7)(a), an interest in the land: s 861(1). As to the meaning of 'debentures' see PARA 1299. It is immaterial for the purposes of Pt 25 Ch 1 (ss 860-877) (Company Charges: Companies registered in England and Wales or in Northern Ireland) where land subject to a charge is situated: s 861(2).

7 Companies Act 2006 s 860(7)(a). This does not include an unpaid vendor's lien arising by operation of law: London and Cheshire Insurance Co Ltd v Laplagrene Property Co Ltd [1971] Ch 499, [1971] 1 All ER 766. See also Re Wallis & Simmonds (Builders) Ltd [1974] 1 All ER 561, [1974] 1 WLR 391 (deposit of title deeds to secure debt owed by third party created equitable charge void against liquidator of depositor company for want of registration). A contract to create, in a particular event, a legal charge is not registrable as it does not create a present equitable right to a security, but is merely an agreement that in some future circumstance a security will be created: Williams v Burlington Investments Ltd (1977) 121 Sol Jo 424, HL; Re Gregory Love & Co [1916] 1 Ch 203. Cf Re Jackson and Bassford Ltd [1906] 2 Ch 467 (agreement creating present security interest registrable). The exception of a charge for rent or a periodical sum issuing out of land was introduced by the Companies Act 1948; and by s 458(1) (repealed) the equivalent provisions of earlier Companies Acts were to be deemed never to have applied to such a charge.

In the case of a land charge for securing money created by a company before 1 January 1970 or so created at any time as a floating charge, registration under the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908 s 93 (repealed), the Companies Act 1929 s 79 (repealed), the Companies Act 1948 s 95 (repealed) or the Companies Act 1985 ss 395-398 (repealed) and the Companies Act 2006 Pt 25 (ss 860-894) (see PARA 1277 et seq) and regulations made under s 1052 (overseas companies) (see PARA 1833) was or is sufficient in place of registration under the Land Charges Act 1972, and had or has effect as if the land charge had been registered under the Land Charges Act 1972: s 3(7), (8) (amended by the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 30, Sch 2; the Companies Act 1989 s 107, Sch 16 para 1(3); and SI 2009/1941). All other charges require registration under both Acts. As to compensation for loss due to undisclosed land charges see the Law of Property Act 1969 s 25; and LAND CHARGES vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 617. For a discussion of the relationship between registration of a charge under these provisions and the Land Charges Act 1972 where the registration of an equitable charge was not effected in the name of the owner of the underlying legal estate see Property Discount Corpn Ltd v Lyon Group Ltd [1981] 1 All ER 379, [1981] 1 WLR 300, CA.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 860(7)(b). It is not sufficient that the instrument, if executed by an individual, would require registration as a bill of sale if it does not also create a charge: Stoneleigh Finance Ltd v Phillips [1965] 2 QB 537, [1965] 1 All ER 513, CA (sale of property which did not leave vendor's possession). 12 Companies Act 2006 s 860(7)(f). The deposit by way of security of a negotiable instrument given to secure the payment of book debts is not, for the purposes of s 860(7)(f), a charge on those book debts: s 861(3). As to charges on book debts see PARA 1270. There must be a book debt in existence and included in the contract at the date the charge is created: Paul & Frank Ltd v Discount Bank (Overseas) Ltd and Board of Trade [1967] Ch 348, [1966] 2 All ER 922. Cf Shipley v Marshall (1863) 14 CBNS 566; applied in Independent Automatic Sales Ltd v Knowles and Foster [1962] 3 All ER 27, [1962] 1 WLR 974 (where it was held that a deposit of hire purchase agreements with a finance company to secure a loan was registrable as constituting a charge on book debts).

A company may charge a deposit which it has with a bank: Re Bank of Credit and Commerce International (No 8) [1998] AC 214, [1997] 4 All ER 568, HL. Cf Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1989] Ch 497, [1988] 3 All ER 702, CA; Tam Wing Chuen v Bank of Credit and Commerce International Hong Kong Ltd (in liquidation) [1996] 2 BCLC 69, PC. However, a balance at a bank is not normally a book debt: Re Brightlife Ltd [1987] Ch 200, [1986] 3 All ER 673; Northern Bank Ltd v Ross [1991] BCLC 504, NI CA. It is possible also to create a charge over a sum of money held by a person once it has been paid to him, without necessarily also creating a charge over the debt or other right in respect of which it may come to be paid: Re SSSL Realisations (2002) Ltd (in liq), Re Save Group plc (in liq) [2004] EWHC 1760 (Ch) at [49]-[55], [2005] 1 BCLC 1 at [49]-[55] per Lloyd J (affd [2006] EWCA Civ 7, [2006] Ch 610, [2007] 1 BCLC 29).

The existence of a power of sale does not make a lien into an equitable charge requiring registration: Re Hamlet International plc (in administration), Trident International Ltd v Barlow [1999] 2 BCLC 506, CA (a legal possessory lien over customers' stock in a warehouse coupled with a right to sell the goods and to use the proceeds to discharge the outstanding debts due to the warehouse company from those customers was not registrable). As to contractual liens on sub-freights see Re Welsh Irish Ferries Ltd [1986] Ch 471, [1985] 3 WLR 610 (contractual lien on sub-freights held to constitute a charge on book debts and hence registrable); Annangel Glory Cia Naviera SA v M Golodetz Ltd [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep 45 (contract lien on sub-freights held to constitute a floating charge and hence registrable); and CARRIAGE AND CARRIERS vol 7 (2008) PARA 306. But see also Agnew v IRC [2001] UKPC 28 at [39], [2001] 2 AC 710 at [39], [2001] 2 BCLC 188 at [39] per Lord Millett (the better view is that a lien on sub-freights is not a charge at all).

As to whether an assignment by a leasing company of rents due from a consumer to a financial services company providing credit to the consumer constitutes a charge on the leasing company's book debts see Orion Finance Ltd v Crown Financial Management (No 2) [1996] 2 BCLC 382, CA; and Orion Finance Ltd v Crown Financial Management Ltd [1996] 2 BCLC 78, CA (no single objective test to determine whether a transaction is one of sale and repurchase or one of security). Where an agreement provided that assignments of debts were to be absolute, the fact that the parties did not operate the transactions in accordance with the terms of the agreement did not make them into charges on book debts: Lloyds and Scottish Finance Ltd v Cyril Lord Carpets Sales Ltd (1979) [1992] BCLC 609, HL; Carreras Rothmans Ltd v Freeman Mathews Treasure Ltd [1985] Ch 207, [1985] 1 All ER 155. An escrow agreement whereby an account was opened and the moneys paid into it were to be impressed with a trust was held not to be registrable: Lovell Construction Ltd v Independent Estates plc (in liquidation) [1994] 1 BCLC 31 (the account created by the escrow agreement was only machinery for effecting payment).

Registration of charges existing on property acquired.

1280. Registration of charges existing on property acquired.

Where a company¹ acquires property which is subject to a charge² of a kind which would, if it had been created by the company after the acquisition of the property, have been required to be registered³, the company must deliver the prescribed particulars⁴ of the charge, together with a certified copy⁵ of the instrument (if any) by which the charge was created or is evidenced, to the registrar of companies⁶ for registration⁷. This requirement⁸ must be complied with before the end of the period allowed for registration⁹.

If a company fails to comply with this requirement¹⁰, an offence is committed by the company, and by any officer of the company who is in default¹¹; a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to a fine or (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum¹².

4 In the Companies Acts, 'prescribed' means prescribed (by order or by regulations) by the Secretary of State: Companies Act 2006 s 1167. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 860, the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Particulars of Company Charges) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/2996. Accordingly, the prescribed particulars for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 862(2) are:

2175 (1) the date of the creation of the charge (Companies (Particulars of Company Charges) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/2996, regs 2(a), 4(a));

2176 (2) a description of the instrument (if any) creating or evidencing the charge (regs 2(b), 4(a));

2177 (3) the amount secured by the charge (regs 2(c), 4(a));

2178 (4) the name and address of the person entitled to the charge (regs 2(d), 4(a));

2179 (5) short particulars of the property charged (regs 2(e), 4(a)); and

2180 (6) the date of the acquisition of the property which is subject to the charge (reg 4(b)).

5 For these purposes, a certificate or verification, as the case may be, that a copy of an instrument by which a charge is created or evidenced is a correct copy must be given by the company which has created the charge, or, where that person is different, by the person who delivered or sent the copy to the registrar: Companies (Forms) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/854, reg 7(1); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b). Such a certificate must be signed by or on behalf of the person giving it; and where that person is a body corporate, the person signing the certificate on behalf of the body must be an officer of it: Companies (Forms) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/854, reg 7(3) (amended by SI 1986/2097); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b).

- 558 (4) the names of the trustees, if any, for the debenture holders¹¹, together with the deed containing the charge (or, if there is no such deed, one of the debentures of the series)¹². Particulars of the date and amount of each issue of debentures of such a series¹³ must be sent to the registrar for entry in the register of charges¹⁴; but any failure to comply with this requirement¹⁵ does not affect the validity of the debentures issued¹⁶.

The registration of such a series of debentures may instead be effected on the application of any person interested in it¹⁷; and where registration is effected on the application of some person other than the company, that person is entitled to recover from the company the amount of any fees properly paid by him to the registrar on registration¹⁸.

If a company fails to comply with the requirement to register¹⁹, an offence is committed by the company, and by any officer of the company who is in default²⁰; a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to a fine or (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum²¹.

1284. Sale of property subject to charge.

Where property subject to a mortgage is sold and the proceeds are invested in other property which is conveyed to the company, and then mortgaged by the company to the mortgagee, the latter mortgage requires registration¹; but the registration of a trust deed securing debenture stock² containing specific equitable charges on property is sufficient to cover subsequent legal mortgages of that property to complete the security, and also mortgages of further property substituted under the powers of the deed for property comprised in the original charge³.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(iii) Registration of Company Charges/A. REQUIREMENT TO REGISTER/1285. Retention of title clauses.

1285. Retention of title clauses.

An ordinary retention of title clause in a contract by a vendor of goods sold to a company and to which the Sale of Goods Act 1979 applies¹, so drawn as to ensure that title in the goods does not pass to the company until payment, or until the goods are sold to a third party, does not require registration under the Companies Act 2006². Just as the company never itself obtains title to the goods, so it cannot create any effective charge over such goods in favour of the vendor³. Such a reservation of title will thus be fully effective and enforceable at the appropriate time, for example on the liquidation of the company or against a receiver, in respect of so much of the goods as are then still remaining in the company's hands⁴.

In cases where the goods supplied by a vendor to a company are simply resold by the company without alteration, the contract may by appropriate wording provide that the company is also to be regarded as standing in a fiduciary position to the vendor in relation to any goods sold, who may then be entitled to trace his goods into the proceeds of sale⁵.

Difficulties arise, however, where the company employs the goods sold to it in a manufacturing process. If the finished product incorporates no other material, there is no reason why the vendor's title should not remain⁶. If the goods are incorporated with others in such a manner that it is possible to separate them out again, then the vendor's title to any such goods still in the hands of the company remains⁷. If, however, the goods sold have for practical purposes lost their identity by being utilised in a non-reversible manufacturing process⁸, then, since the vendor never had any title to the whole of the finished product, a retention of title clause by itself will not furnish him with any rights against the manufactured product or its proceeds of sale⁹. Any provision granting any such rights will amount to a floating charge created by the company and will be accordingly void as against a liquidator or any creditor of the company for non-registration¹⁰.

Any provisions, other than a simple retention of title clause, may be held to create a charge granted by the company if, on their true construction, that appears to be their intended effect¹¹.

B. PERIOD ALLOWED FOR REGISTRATION OF A CHARGE CREATED BY A COMPANY

1286. Period allowed for registration with the registrar.

The period allowed for registration of a charge¹ created by a company² is 21 days beginning with the day after the day on which the charge is created³ or (if the charge is created outside the United Kingdom⁴) 21 days beginning with the day after the day on which the instrument by which the charge is created or evidenced (or a copy of it) could, in due course of post (and if despatched with due diligence) have been received in the United Kingdom⁵.

The period allowed for registration of a charge to which property acquired by a company is subject⁶ is 21 days beginning with the day after the day on which the acquisition is completed⁷ or (if the property is situated and the charge was created outside the United Kingdom) 21 days beginning with the day after the day on which the instrument by which the charge is created or evidenced (or a copy of it) could, in due course of post (and if despatched with due diligence) have been received in the United Kingdom⁸.

The period allowed for registration of particulars of a series of debentures⁹ is (if there is a deed containing the charge¹⁰), 21 days beginning with the day after the day on which that deed is executed¹¹ or (if there is no such deed) 21 days beginning with the day after the day on which the first debenture of the series is executed¹².

The registrar of companies¹³ has no power to extend this time¹⁴.

14 It was formerly the practice of the registrar of companies to allow an extension of time for the lodging of a properly completed form if an improperly completed form had been lodged within the 21-day period. This procedure has been held to be without statutory authority and erroneous: R v Registrar of Companies, ex p Central Bank of India [1986] QB 1114, [1986] 1 All ER 105, CA, where a quashing order (formerly known as an order of certiorari) had been granted by the court below to quash the registrar's decision to register the charge outside the 21-day period reckoned from the date of its creation. This decision was reversed on appeal, but the criticism of the practice was upheld.

1287. Order by court for extension of time or rectification of register.

If the court¹ is satisfied:

- 559 (1) that the failure to register a charge² before the end of the period allowed for registration³, or the omission or mis-statement of any particular with respect to any such charge or in a memorandum of satisfaction⁴, was accidental⁵, or due to inadvertence⁶ or to some other sufficient cause⁷, or is not of a nature to prejudice the position of creditors⁸ or shareholders⁹ of the company¹⁰; or the court may, on the application¹² of the company or of a person interested (and on such terms and conditions as seem to the court just and expedient) order that the period allowed for registration is to be extended¹³, or, as the case may be, that the omission or misstatement is to be rectified¹⁴.
- 560 (2) that on other grounds it is just and equitable to grant relief¹¹,

The statutory jurisdiction to order rectification under these provisions is limited and wholly inconsistent with any suggestion that the court has any inherent power of rectification¹⁵. The court also lacks jurisdiction under these provisions to order the deletion of the whole of a registration¹⁶ or to grant interim relief¹⁷.

It is only in exceptional circumstances that such an extension will be granted after the company has gone into liquidation¹⁸; but it is such an exceptional case if the only creditor who could be affected thereby does not oppose¹⁹.

COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(iii) Registration of Company Charges/B. PERIOD ALLOWED FOR REGISTRATION OF A CHARGE CREATED BY A COMPANY/1288. Procedure on application for rectification.

1288. Procedure on application for rectification.

An application for the period for registration of a charge¹ to be extended or for an omission or misstatement with respect to any such charge to be rectified², is made by the issue of a claim form³, which should be supported by a statement proving the facts relied on as founding the court's jurisdiction to grant relief⁴. It is usually specified in the statement that no petition to wind up the company has been presented, no notice convening a meeting for voluntary liquidation has been served, and no judgment against the company has been recovered which is unsatisfied⁵. On an application for extension of time for registration, the court will not as a rule decide the question whether a charge requires registration⁶.

There is usually inserted in an order granting an extension of time for registration⁷ a proviso that the order is to be without prejudice to any rights acquired prior to actual registration against the persons entitled to the mortgage or charge⁸. The usual form of proviso will not protect ordinary unsecured creditors unless, before actual registration, either they have acquired rights against or affecting the property charged by the debentures⁹ or a winding up has commenced¹⁰; and no express words for their protection will in ordinary cases be inserted¹¹. Where a liquidation is found to be imminent, the decision whether to extend time is a matter of discretion, the overriding question being whether it is just and equitable to grant an extension¹². It is the settled practice of the court not to make an order¹³ extending time for registration on an application made after the commencement of the winding up¹⁴. Where an administration order¹⁵ does not include as one of its purposes the survival of the company, or survival proves incapable of achievement, the court will not normally extend time for registration since liquidation is inevitable¹⁶.

C. REGISTRATION PROCEDURE

1289. Register of charges kept by the registrar.

With respect to each company¹, the registrar of companies² must keep a register of all the charges³ requiring registration under the Companies Act 2006⁴.

He must enter in the register, in the case of a charge to the benefit of which the holders of a series of debentures⁵ are entitled, the particulars required⁶ to be delivered by the company⁷; and, in the case of any other charge, the following particulars⁸:

- 561 (1) if it is a charge created by the company⁹, the date of its creation and, if it is a charge which was existing on property acquired by the company¹⁰, the date of the acquisition of the property¹¹; and
- 562 (2) the amount secured by the charge¹²; and
- 563 (3) short particulars of the property charged¹³; and 564 (4) the persons entitled to the charge¹⁴.

The register so kept by the registrar¹⁵ must be open to inspection by any person¹⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(iii) Registration of Company Charges/C. REGISTRATION PROCEDURE/1290. Certificate of registration given by the registrar.

1290. Certificate of registration given by the registrar.

The registrar of companies¹ must give a certificate of the registration of any charge² registered with him³, stating the amount secured by the charge⁴. The certificate must be signed by the registrar or authenticated by the registrar's official seal⁵; and such a certificate is conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Companies Act 2006 as to registration⁶ have been satisfied⁷; and the court will refuse to go into the question whether the requirements as to registration have been complied with⁸.

Thus it is immaterial, after the certificate has been obtained, that the date of the resolution creating stock is omitted from the particulars filed on registration⁹; and, if the certificate sufficiently identifies the instrument of charge, it is conclusive evidence of the effective registration of the charge in respect of all the property comprised in it, even though the registered particulars of the property charged omit some of such properties¹⁰.

It is equally immaterial that the order for extension of time for registration, if made properly at the time of making, is subsequently set aside. If registration has been effected in the meantime in reliance upon the original order, it remains valid¹¹.

If a person obtains an order for the appointment of a receiver or manager¹ of a company's property², or appoints such a receiver or manager under powers contained in an instrument, he must within seven days of the order or of the appointment under those powers, give notice of the fact to the registrar of companies³.

Where a person appointed receiver or manager of a company's property under powers contained in an instrument ceases to act as such receiver or manager, he must, on so ceasing, give the registrar notice to that effect⁴.

The registrar must enter a fact of which he is given notice in this way⁵ in the register of charges⁶.

A person who makes default in complying with these requirements⁷ commits an offence⁸; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale⁹ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹⁰ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹¹.

D. CONSEQUENCES OF FAILURE TO MEET REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS

1294. Avoidance of charges where registration requirements not met.

If a company¹ creates a charge² which must be registered under the Companies Act 2006³, the charge is void (so far as any security on the company's property or undertaking is conferred by such a charge⁴) against⁵: (1) a liquidator of the company⁶; (2) an administrator of the company⁷; and (3) a creditor of the company⁸, unless the registration requirements⁹ are complied with¹⁰. It is not actual registration, but delivery of the particulars to the registrar for registration, that preserves the validity of the charge¹¹.

This provision¹² is without prejudice to any contract or obligation for repayment of the money secured by the charge¹³; and when a charge becomes void in this way¹⁴, the money secured by it immediately becomes payable¹⁵.

1295. Companies' duty to keep copies of instruments creating charges.

A company¹ must keep available for inspection² a copy of every instrument creating a charge³ requiring registration under the Companies Act 2006⁴; in the case of a series of uniform debentures⁵, a copy of one debenture of the series is sufficient⁶.

1296. Company's register of charges.

Every limited company¹ must keep available for inspection² a register of charges³, and enter in it⁴: (1) all charges specifically affecting property of the company⁵; and (2) all floating charges⁶ on the whole or part of the company's undertaking⁷, the entry giving in each case a short description of the property charged, the amount of the charge and, except in the case of securities to bearer⁸, the names of the persons entitled to it⁹. The property charged, not the instrument, is required to be registered¹⁰.

The omission to enter a charge in the register does not invalidate the charge¹¹, even where it is given to a director¹² or other officer of the company¹³ or to a shareholder¹⁴. If an officer of the company knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the omission of any such entry¹⁵, he commits an offence¹⁶; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to a fine or (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum¹⁷. The company's bankers are not officers¹⁸; but the solicitor acting in the transaction is an officer¹⁹. Where directors instruct the secretary²⁰ to register a charge and he omits to do so, they are not knowingly and wilfully authorising or permitting the omission²¹.

Inspection of instruments creating charge and company's register of charges.

1297. Inspection of instruments creating charge and company's register of charges.

Copies of every instrument creating any charge¹ that requires registration under the Companies Act 2006², and a company's register of charges³, that are kept available for inspection, must be kept available for inspection either at the company's registered office⁴, or at a place specified in regulations⁵. The company must give notice to the registrar of companies⁶ of the place at which the documents and register are kept available for inspection⁷, and of any change in that place⁸, unless they have at all times been kept at the company's registered office⁹. The documents and register must be open to the inspection of any creditor¹⁰ or member of the company¹¹ without charge¹², and to the inspection of any other person on payment of such fee as may be prescribed¹³.

If default is made for 14 days in complying with the giving of notice to the registrar of the place where inspection may be made¹⁴, or if an inspection¹⁵ is refused, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁶. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁷ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹⁸ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁹. In the case of a required inspection of the documents or the register²⁰ being refused, the court²¹ may by order compel an immediate inspection²².

Power to make provision for effect of registration in special register.

F. PROVISION FOR SPECIAL REGISTER

1298. Power to make provision for effect of registration in special register.

The Secretary of State¹ may by order² make provision for facilitating the making of information-sharing arrangements³ between the person responsible for maintaining a special register⁴ (the 'responsible person') and the registrar of companies that meet the requirement⁵ of ensuring that persons inspecting the register of charges⁶:

565 (1) are made aware, in a manner appropriate to the inspection, of the existence of charges in the special register which are treated in accordance with provision so made⁷; and 566 (2) are able to obtain information from the special register about any such charge⁸.

If the Secretary of State is satisfied that appropriate information-sharing arrangements have been made, he may by order provide that⁹:

567 (a) the registrar is authorised not to register a charge of a specified description¹⁰ under the Companies Act 2006¹¹;

568 (b) a charge of a specified description that is registered in the special register within a specified period is to be treated as if it had been registered (and certified by the registrar as registered) in accordance with the statutory requirements¹²; and 569 (c) the other statutory provisions¹³ apply to a charge so treated with specified modifications¹⁴.

Such an order¹⁵ may:

- 570 (i) modify any enactment¹⁶ or rule of law which would otherwise restrict or prevent the responsible person from entering into or giving effect to information-sharing arrangements¹⁷;
- 571 (ii) authorise the responsible person to require information to be provided to him for the purposes of the arrangements¹⁸;
- 572 (iii) make provision about the charging by the responsible person of fees in connection with the arrangements and the destination of such fees (including provision modifying any enactment which would otherwise apply in relation to fees payable to the responsible person)¹⁹, and about the making of payments under the arrangements by the registrar to the responsible person²⁰;
- 573 (iv) require the registrar to make copies of the arrangements available to the public (in hard copy or electronic form)²¹.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 As to the making of orders under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. An order under s 893 is subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the order is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): see ss 893(9), 1289. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order has been made in exercise of the power conferred by s 893.

As to the power of the Secretary of State by regulations to amend Pt 25 (ss 860-894) see s 894; and PARA 1277 note 1.

3 For these purposes, 'information-sharing arrangements' are arrangements to share and make use of information held by the registrar of companies or by the responsible person (see the text and note 5): see the Companies Act 2006 s 893(2). As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2.

4 For these purposes, a 'special register' means a register, other than the register of charges kept under the Companies Act 2006 Pt 25, in which a charge to which Pt 25 Ch 1 (ss 860-877) (see PARA 1277 et seq) or Pt 25 Ch 2 (ss 878-892) (registration of company charges relating to companies registered in Scotland) applies is required or authorised to be registered: s 893(1). 2181 (1) the type of company by which it is created (s 893(7)(a));

2182 (2) the form of charge which it is (s 893(7)(b));

2183 (3) the description of assets over which it is granted (s 893(7)(c));

(iv) Debentures and Debenture Stock

A. DESCRIPTION AND CONTENTS OF INSTRUMENTS OF SECURITY

1299. Meaning of 'debenture'.

No very precise definition of 'debenture'¹ can be found², but various forms of instruments are called debentures³. In the Companies Acts⁴, 'debenture' includes debenture stock, bonds and any other securities of a company⁵, whether or not constituting a charge on the assets of the company⁶.

A debenture is a document which either creates or acknowledges a debt⁷. The debt secured may be all moneys due from the company on any account whatsoever, and is then known as an 'all moneys debenture'. Even so, it does not cover moneys due on unsecured loan stock issued to a third party and subsequently acquired by the debenture holder⁸. A document may be a debenture even though, under its terms, the debt is to be repaid out of only a part of the profits⁹. The term 'debenture' is usually associated with a company of some kind, and most debentures are securities given by companies. Nevertheless debentures are often granted by clubs¹⁰ and occasionally by individuals.

The instrument need not describe itself as a debenture even to bring it within the exception from the application of the Bills of Sale Acts 1878 and 1882¹¹ which exists in favour of debentures of an incorporated company¹², and the use or non-use of the word is not conclusive¹³; but, even though no security other than a promise to pay is given by the instrument, if it is described as a debenture on the face of it, it is a debenture for stamping purposes¹⁴.

1 A debenture has been described as a certificate or voucher certifying that a sum of money is owing to the person designated in it (said to derive from the Latin debentur which was used as the first word of a certificate recording a debt): Oxford English Dictionary (2nd Edn) vol IV p 311.

1300. Form of debenture.

Although this is not strictly necessary¹, a debenture is generally issued under the company's seal²; but it is doubtful whether the statutory right of a mortgagee to sell where the mortgage is by deed³ applies to a series of debentures of a company⁴. As a rule, a debenture contains a covenant to pay, generally at some named place, such as the company's office⁵, accompanied by some charge or security, in which case the instrument is usually called a 'mortgage debenture'⁶. Debentures sometimes contain a fixed charge, and usually contain a charge by way of floating security⁷ on the company's property and undertaking, including, as a rule, its uncalled capital⁸. A debenture is usually one of a series of documents all of which rank pari passu in point of priority, but it may, and often does, consist of one document only⁹.

However, see also Re Harris Calculating Machine Co, Sumner v Harris Calculating Machine Co [1914] 1 Ch 920 (where the interest, unlike the principal, was not payable at a specified place).

A debenture need not, however, embody a charge: cf Pearl Assurance Co Ltd v West Midlands Gas Board [1950] 2 All ER 844 (a decision on the definition of 'securities' in the Gas Act 1948 s 74(1) (now repealed)). A covenant binding the company's estate, property and effects to repay a sum mentioned in the bond has been held to constitute a charge: see Re Florence Land and Public Works Co, ex p Moor (1878) 10 ChD 530, CA. 1301. Unsecured notes.

Sometimes a debenture contains no charge over the company's property whatsoever, in which case it is known as a 'naked debenture'¹, or unsecured note. Where such notes are secured by a trust deed, in the sense that the company covenants to pay the money due under them to trustees, they are sometimes called 'unsecured loan stock'. Notwithstanding the absence of any charge, an unsecured note is properly speaking a debenture², and is chargeable with the same stamp duty³.

However, since no charge is created, such notes do not require registration under the Companies Act 2006⁴. Equally, the holders of such notes are entitled to no priority over other creditors of the company in the payment of the money due on them and may have their claims expressly postponed by the terms of issue to other classes of creditors such as trade creditors⁵.

1 The word 'debenture', which by itself popularly implies the existence of some security (see Knightsbridge Estates Trust Ltd v Byrne [1940] AC 613 at 625, [1940] 2 All ER 401 at 407-408, HL, per Viscount Maugham), should not be used alone.

1302. Trust deed securing payment of money owing on debentures.

Often a trust deed is executed by which property belonging to the company is specifically mortgaged to trustees for the debenture¹ holders further to secure the payment of the money owing on the debentures. Trustees of such a trust deed are in much the same position as any other trustees². Where the structure of a trust deed requires the bondholders, on the occurrence of a materially prejudicial event of default, to make a written request to do so, the trustee comes under a mandatory obligation, owed to the bondholders, to give the company notice of acceleration for repayment of the capital, and the trustee cannot reasonably insist on an indemnity to cover the risk of giving an invalid notice unless the risk is more than merely foreseeable³.

1303. Right of holder to copy of trust deed securing debentures.

Any holder of debentures¹ of a company² is entitled, on request and on payment of such fee as may be prescribed³, to be provided with a copy of any trust deed for securing the debentures⁴.

If default is made in complying with this requirement⁵, an offence is committed by every officer of the company who is in default⁶. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale⁷ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine⁸ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale⁹. In the case of any such default, the court¹⁰ may direct that the copy required be sent to the person requiring it¹¹.

1304. Bearer and registered debentures.

Debentures¹ may be:

- 574 (1) made payable to bearer², in which case interest coupons are attached and the principal and interest are payable respectively upon presentation and delivery of the debenture and coupons; or
- 575 (2) registered debentures³, in which case the principal and interest are payable only to the registered holders, unless they are issued with coupons payable to bearer, in which case the interest is payable on presentation and delivery of the coupons.

A bearer debenture is recognised as a negotiable instrument⁴. Where money is payable on 'presentation' of a debenture or coupon, it must be delivered in order to obtain payment⁵.

Where the bearers of some of the debentures cannot be found, it may be necessary for the company or the trustees to apply to the court for directions. The Attorney General should be made a party to the proceedings by which the application is made⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'debenture' see PARA 1299.

2 Formerly, bearer debentures were rarely issued, as the ad valorem duty payable on them was larger than the duty upon registered debentures: see Bechuanaland Exploration Co v London Trading Bank Ltd [1898] 2 QB 658. 1306. Indorsed debenture conditions.

It is usual to set out most of the provisions relating to debentures¹ in conditions indorsed on them. Such provisions generally state that the debenture is one of a series of a certain limited number, or for securing a total sum of limited amount, each for a like amount of principal; that all the debentures of the series rank pari passu as a first or other charge; and that such charge (except as regards the property, if any, specifically mortgaged) is to be a floating security², but so that the company is not to create any charge ranking in priority to, or pari passu with, the debentures of the series. The conditions also generally provide for registration of the debentures and of transfers of them at the company's office, the non-recognition of equities³, transfers, payment of interest⁴ by warrant, requirements to be observed in the case of joint holders, acceleration of payment of principal in certain specified events⁵, the service of notices, and the time and mode of repayment of the principal money secured. A power to appoint a person as receiver or as receiver and manager is usually given, and his powers are defined, and provision is made as to the disposal of money which comes into his hands⁶. Power is also usually given to a specified majority of debenture holders of a series to modify the rights of all the holders of the series⁷. In such cases, provisions are usually made for the convening and holding of meetings of debenture holders⁸.

If there is a trust deed, some reference to it in the debentures is advisable, and many of the provisions usually contained in the debenture conditions are then inserted in the trust deed⁹.

The terms of the debenture and related documents are typically complex and the courts approach their construction as in the manner of construing any commercial document: Re Golden Key Ltd (in receivership) [2009] EWCA Civ 636, [2009] All ER (D) 18 (Jul). Unless the contrary appears, the courts have to assume that parties to a commercial document intend to produce a commercial result and thus, the court takes into account the commerciality of rival constructions, if that commerciality can be identified: see Re Golden Key Ltd (in receivership) at [41] per Arden LJ, adopting the approach on the question of interpretation taken in Re Whistlejacket Capital Ltd (in receivership) [2008] EWCA Civ 575, [2008] 2 BCLC 683. In Re Golden Key Ltd (in receivership), the court held that it would be anomalous on wording of the documentation in that case (documentation which supported a 'pay as you go' construction) if commercial paper due and payable should be deferred to some later date of redemption; receivers ordered to redeem commercial paper matured on or before the date when insolvency intervened, which insolvency accelerated all non-matured claims to a set date. Cf Re Whistlejacket Capital Ltd (in receivership) (wording unclear, but court would interpret it in the light of normal practice of receivers with respect to realising assets, holding reserves and retentions and making payments; mindful of the need on insolvency to pay each class of creditor pro rata and pari passu, a receiver may need to withhold sums in hand from distribution to those whose debts are due in order to meet the pari passu obligation in relation to debts falling due in the future).

Debentures¹ and trust deeds² often provide for redemption of debentures by drawings³ and for the formation of a sinking fund, which is to be applicable to the redemption of the debentures either as they are drawn for redemption or pari passu in proportion to the amounts secured by them.

Occasionally, provisions are made to enable debentures originally payable to bearer to become registered debentures, or vice versa, with rights varied in consequence of the change⁴.

Special provisions are required where more than one series of debentures are issued and the company is only in a position to give to the holders of the later series a second security on its assets.

Formerly, the power to make a charging order was restricted to 'stocks and shares' where 'stock' bore its usual meaning of consolidated shares: Sellar v Charles Bright & Co Ltd [1904] 2 KB 446, CA. However, it was held that debentures may pass in a gift by will of 'all my stocks and shares': see Re Purnchard's Will Trusts, Public Trustee v Pelly [1948] Ch 312, [1948] 1 All ER 790; and WILLS vol 50 (2005 Reissue) PARA 586.

1309. Debenture stock.

Debenture stock¹ is generally constituted and secured by a trust deed containing a charge upon the property of the company². A stock certificate is issued to each allottee or transferee of stock stating (inter alia), in the case of registered stock³, that the person named in it is the registered proprietor or, in the case of bearer stock⁴, that the bearer is the proprietor of the amount of stock mentioned in it, and having printed on it the conditions on which the stock is issued and held⁵.

Where a debenture stock deed does not contain any direct covenant with the stockholder to pay him interest, a stockholder whose interest is in arrear is not entitled to present a winding-up petition against the company as a creditor⁶.

If an agent of a company hands to a lender a fully paid certificate of debenture stock on the security of which he borrows more than he was authorised and appropriates the excess, a lender without notice may prove for the whole sum⁷.

1310. Interest on securities.

Where, as is usual in a debenture or debenture trust deed¹, the company agrees or covenants to pay the principal sum and interest at an agreed rate, and property of the company is charged with those payments, the charge is a security both for the principal and for interest at the agreed rate until payment, and on realisation of the security the debenture holder is entitled to interest at the agreed rate, notwithstanding that the company may be wound up or that he may have recovered judgment against the company².

Even if the debenture does not so provide, the principal money, if not paid on the appointed day, will continue to carry interest at the agreed rate³.

Interest payable on debentures, although payable half-yearly, accrues from day to day⁴.

A debenture holder who, in payment of interest, accepts cheques which by arrangement are not presented, is not thereby prevented from claiming to be a secured creditor in respect of that interest⁵. If in a claim by debenture holders the amount of the principal only is certified, in the belief that the security is insufficient, and payment is made on this footing, this does not prevent the full interest being payable if the security proves sufficient⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(iv) Debentures and Debenture Stock/A. DESCRIPTION AND CONTENTS OF INSTRUMENTS OF SECURITY/1311. Liability of trustees of debentures.

1311. Liability of trustees of debentures.

Any provision contained in a trust deed for securing an issue of debentures¹, or in any contract with the holders of debentures secured by a trust deed², is void in so far as it would have the effect of exempting a trustee of the deed from, or indemnifying him against, liability for breach of trust where he fails to show the degree of care and diligence required of him as trustee, having regard to the provisions of the trust deed conferring on him any powers, authorities or discretions³. However, these provisions as to avoidance of liability do not invalidate⁴:

- 578 (1) a release otherwise validly given in respect of anything done or omitted to be done by a trustee before the giving of the release⁵; or
- 579 (2) any provision enabling such a release to be given: (a) on being agreed to by a majority of not less than 75 per cent in value of the debenture holders present and voting in person (or, where proxies are permitted, by proxy at a meeting summoned for the purpose)⁶; and (b) either with respect to specific acts or omissions or on the trustee dying or ceasing to act⁷.

Nor do the provisions as to avoidance of liability operate:

- 580 (i) to invalidate any provision in force on the relevant date⁸ so long as any person then entitled to the benefit of the provision, or afterwards given the benefit of the provision⁹, remains a trustee of the deed in question¹⁰; or
- 581 (ii) to deprive any person of any exemption or right to be indemnified in respect of anything done or omitted to be done by him while any such provision was in force¹¹.

While any trustee of a trust deed remains entitled to the benefit of a provision that has been saved thus¹², the benefit of that provision may be given either to all trustees of the deed, present and future, or to any named trustees or proposed trustees of it, by a resolution¹³ passed by a majority of not less than 75 per cent in value of the debenture holders present in person (or, where proxies are permitted, by proxy at a meeting summoned for the purpose)¹⁴.

Provisions are usually inserted in a trust deed for the remuneration of trustees, and for this remuneration to be a first charge on the proceeds of sale¹⁵. Without such a special provision, the remuneration is not payable in priority to the debenture holders out of the fund realised by the sale of the assets charged¹⁶. The question whether the trustees are entitled to remuneration after the appointment of a receiver is one of construction of the trust deed¹⁷.

The solicitor who acts for the trustees has a lien on the trust deed and other documents in his possession as solicitor for the trustees for costs incurred in connection with the trust both before and after the execution of the trust deed¹⁸, unless he has agreed to look for payment of the costs to a third party, for example the company¹⁹.

The provisions of s 750 are subject to the savings contained in s 751 (see the text and notes 8-14): see s 750(3). Notwithstanding ss 750, 751, a trustee of a trust deed for securing an issue of debentures is not chargeable with a breach of trust by reason only of the fact that he has assented to an amendment of the trust deed only for the following purposes, namely for the purposes of (Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 40(2) (amended by SI 2009/1889)):

- 2185 (1) allowing the holding of debentures in uncertificated form (Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 40(2)(a));
- 2186 (2) allowing the exercise of rights attaching to the debentures by means of a relevant system (reg 40(2)(b)); or
- 2187 (3) allowing the transfer of title to the debentures by means of a relevant system (reg 40(2)(c)), provided that he has given or caused to be given notice of the amendment in accordance with the trust deed not less than 30 days prior to its becoming effective to all persons registered as holding the debentures on a date not more than 21 days before the dispatch of the notice (reg 40(2)). 1312. Enforcement of contract to subscribe for debentures.

A contract with a company¹ to take up and pay for debentures² of the company may be enforced by an order for specific performance³. However, where debentures have been issued payable by instalments and have been forfeited, the company cannot enforce payment⁴.

No claim may be brought on an agreement to purchase debentures containing a charge on land, unless the agreement is in writing, incorporating all the expressly agreed terms of the agreement in one document or, where agreements are exchanged, in each signed by or on behalf of each party to the agreement⁵.

Where a company borrows money and agrees to give a debenture¹ to secure the amount when called upon, the agreement is valid as an equitable security², subject to any statutory requirements as to registration³ and to the law as to preference⁴.

A floating charge contained in a debenture may in certain circumstances be invalid⁵.

Under an agreement to issue debentures of a certain series to a creditor, he will be entitled to rank pari passu with the holders of the series even though no debentures are issued to him⁶.

Where directors of a company deposit incomplete mortgage bonds by way of security in pursuance of written agreements, a valid charge is created, independently of the bonds, upon the property which the bonds purport to charge⁷, and an agreement to issue a debenture may be implied from an irregularly issued debenture⁸.

1314. Issue of debentures.

An issue of debentures¹ or debenture stock² will not be valid until all conditions precedent to the exercise of the power to issue them have been performed³, unless any such condition relates to acts of internal management, in which case its non-observance does not necessarily invalidate the issue⁴. Statutory protection is also afforded to a person dealing with a company in good faith, in respect of the power of the board of directors to bind the company, or to authorise others to do so, which is deemed to be free of any limitation under the company's constitution⁵.

An issue of debentures or debenture stock is made on such terms and for such amount and for such purposes as the company thinks fit, subject to any restrictions or prohibitions contained in its constitution. Sealing debentures without delivery is not sufficient to constitute issuing them⁶; but sealing and delivering undated debentures is an issue, even though the names of the holders are omitted⁷.

The issue of a claim by debenture holders does not of itself prevent the company from issuing unissued debentures of the series in respect of some of which the proceedings are taken⁸.

A company¹ must register an allotment of debentures² as soon as practicable and in any event within two months after the date of the allotment³. Offers of debentures for subscription or sale.

1316. Offers of debentures for subscription or sale.

Offers of debentures¹ for subscription or sale are governed by the same statutory provisions as apply to offers of securities generally².

Prima facie, the terms of offer documents inviting subscriptions for debentures cannot be considered for the purpose of adding to or explaining the terms or conditions contained in the debenture itself³, and a transferee cannot rely on the offer documents for this purpose, even where the agreement for allotment expressly refers to the terms of the offer documents⁴. Nevertheless, in the case of an original allottee, the agreement for allotment may incorporate the terms of the offer documents as an additional or collateral contract⁵.

Debenture offer documents generally state that application for debentures must be accompanied by a remittance, and that, if any instalment payable in respect of the debentures is not punctually paid, the payments already made may be forfeited. Where debentures or debenture stock are allotted upon the terms that they be paid for by instalments, it is usual to issue provisional bearer scrip certificates to the subscribers, to be exchanged for definitive debentures or for stock certificates when all the instalments are paid, and to indorse upon the scrip certificates the payments of the several instalments. When the instalments are paid, the bearer of the certificate is entitled to have the debentures or stock certificate issued to him⁶. If the instalments are not fully paid before the company goes into liquidation, a holder may safely refuse to pay any further instalments without prejudicing his position as a secured creditor for previous instalments, even if the certificate provides that failure to pay any instalment when due will empower the company to forfeit previous instalments⁷; but it appears that, in the event of the security being enforced, such a holder would not be entitled to share in the distribution of the fund realised until after he has paid up in full the instalments still owing⁸.

8 In Re Smelting Corp'n [1915] 1 Ch 472, holders of partly paid debentures were held to be entitled to share in proportion to the amounts which they had paid up. This decision was based on the ground that the debentures had been issued prior to the enactment of the Companies Act 1907 s 16 (now repealed) (see now the Companies Act 2006 s 740; and PARA 1312), before which specific performance of a contract to take debentures could not be enforced, so that the unpaid instalments did not constitute a debt due to the company. It appears from the reasoning in that case that in the case of a debenture issued since the enactment of the Companies Act 1907 (repealed) a contrary principle would apply. Cf Re Rhodesia Goldfields Ltd [1910] 1 Ch 239 (where a debenture holder was indebted to the company in respect of profits received as a director and the rule in Cherry v Boulton (1839) 4 My & Cr 442 (see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 559) was held to apply).

A company which has power to borrow on debentures¹ may issue them at a discount². Thus, where a director takes some of the debentures at the rate of discount allowed to other persons, he is not liable to account for the discount³. A company cannot, however, issue debentures at a discount upon the terms that they shall be exchangeable, at the holder's option, for paid up shares in the company⁴ of the same amount as the face value of the debentures, where such an issue is a means of allotting shares at a discount⁵.

1318. Reissue of debentures.

Where a company¹ has redeemed debentures² previously issued, then unless: (1) provision to the contrary (whether express or implied) is contained in the company's articles³ or in any contract made by the company⁴; or (2) the company has, by passing a resolution⁵ to that effect or by some other act, manifested its intention that the debentures are to be cancelled⁶, the company may reissue the debentures, either by reissuing the same debentures or by issuing new debentures in their place⁷. On a reissue of redeemed debentures, the person entitled to the debentures has (and is deemed always to have had) the same priorities as if the debentures had never been redeemed⁸.

The reissue of a debenture or the issue of another debenture in its place in this way⁹ is treated as the issue of a new debenture for the purposes of stamp duty¹⁰; but it is not to be so treated for the purposes of any provision limiting the amount or number of debentures to be issued¹¹. A person lending money on the security of a debenture reissued in this way which appears to be duly stamped may give the debenture in evidence in any proceedings for enforcing his security without payment of the stamp duty or any penalty in respect of it, unless he had notice (or, but for his negligence, might have discovered) that the debenture was not duly stamped¹²; but in that case the company is liable to pay the proper stamp duty and penalty¹³.

Where any debentures which were redeemed before 1 November 1929¹⁴ have been reissued after that date and before 1 July 1948¹⁵ or are or have been reissued after that latter date, the reissue of the debentures does not prejudice, and is deemed never to have prejudiced, any right or priority which any person would have had under or by virtue of any mortgage or charge created before that date if the corresponding provisions in the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908¹⁶, as originally enacted, had been enacted¹⁷ in the Companies Act 1948 and the Companies Act 2006, instead of the corresponding provisions in those Acts¹⁸.

Under the usual modification power in a debenture trust deed the deed may be altered so as to give a right to reissue debentures¹⁹.

1319. Priority.

Subject to the necessity of registration¹, the ordinary rules regulating the priority of mortgages apply to debentures², including the ordinary equitable rules relating to marshalling and subrogation³.

If two successive securities are created by a company, both of which purport to give a first floating charge⁴, the security which is prior in date will take priority over that which is later in date, whether or not the holders of the later security have notice of the earlier one⁵. If a series of first debentures is not secured by legal mortgage and a series of second debentures is secured by a legal mortgage of specific property, the first series giving only a floating charge, then, as to the specific property, the second debentures rank in priority to the first debentures, unless the specific charge is made subject to the prior floating charge⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(iv) Debentures and Debenture Stock/B. ISSUE AND REISSUE OF DEBENTURES/1320. Priorities of debenture holders.

1320. Priorities of debenture holders.

Where debentures¹ contain a charge upon property, but nothing is stated as to their being a series or ranking pari passu in point of charge, they rank in priority in order of time of issue², even when all are issued on the same day³. As a general rule, however, debentures provide that all the debentures constituting the series are to rank pari passu as a charge upon the property charged. If so, on a division of the proceeds of realisation between the various debenture holders, some of whom have been paid interest up to the date of the crystallisation of the charge, those who have not been paid interest are not entitled to be paid arrears of interest before the proceeds are distributed; but the amount due to each holder for capital and interest must be ascertained and the proceeds divided pari passu according to the amounts so due to each⁴.

When part of a series of first debentures remains unissued, and then there is another series of debentures expressed to be subject to the previous series, any of the first debentures issued after the second series ranks in priority to the second series⁵. A holder of second debentures ranking after an issue of first debentures may not set off the debt due on his second debentures against a debt due from him to the company⁶.

C. REGISTER OF DEBENTURE HOLDERS

1321. Where register of debentures may be kept.

Any register of debenture¹ holders of a company² that is kept by the company³ must be kept available for inspection⁴ either: (1) at the company's registered office⁵; or (2) at a place specified in regulations⁶ made for the purposes of specifying where certain company records are to so kept⁷.

A company must give notice to the registrar of companies⁸ of the place where any such register is kept available for inspection, and of any change in that place⁹. If a company makes default for 14 days in complying with the requirement to give such notice¹⁰, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹¹; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹² and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹³ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁴. However, no such notice is required if the register has, at all times since it came into existence, been kept available for inspection at the company's registered office¹⁵.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(iv) Debentures and Debenture Stock/C. REGISTER OF DEBENTURE HOLDERS/1322. Inspection of register of debentures.

1322. Inspection of register of debentures.

Every register of debenture¹ holders of a company² must, except when duly closed³, be open to the inspection⁴: (1) of the registered holder of any such debentures, or any holder of shares⁵ in the company, without charge⁶; and (2) of any other person on payment of such fee as may be prescribed⁷.

Any person may require a copy of the register, or any part of it, on payment of such fee as may be prescribed⁸.

A person seeking to exercise either the right of inspection or the right to require a copy that is so conferred⁹ must make a request to the company to that effect¹⁰; and such a request must contain the following information¹¹:

- 582 (a) in the case of an individual, his name and address¹²;
- 583 (b) in the case of an organisation, the name and address of an individual responsible for making the request on behalf of the organisation¹³;
- 584 (c) the purpose for which the information is to be used¹⁴; and
- 585 (d) whether the information will be disclosed to any other person¹⁵, and if so: (i) where that person is an individual, his name and address¹⁶; (ii) where that person is an organisation, the name and address of an individual responsible for receiving the information on its behalf¹⁷; and (iii) the purpose for which the information is to be used by that person¹⁸.

Where a company receives such a request¹⁹, it must within five working days either comply with the request²⁰, or apply to the court²¹. If the company applies to the court, it must notify the person making the request²². If, on such an application, the court is satisfied that the inspection or copy is not sought for a proper purpose²³: (A) it must direct the company not to comply with the request²⁴; and (B) it may further order that the company's costs on the application be paid in whole or in part by the person who made the request, even if he is not a party to the application²⁵. If the court makes such a direction and it appears to the court that the company is or may be subject to other requests made for a similar purpose (whether made by the same person or different persons), it may direct that the company is not to comply with any such request²⁶. The order must contain such provision as appears to the court appropriate to identify the requests to which it applies²⁷. If, on such an application²⁸, the court does not direct the company not to comply with the request, the company must comply with the request immediately upon the court giving its decision or, as the case may be, upon the proceedings being discontinued²⁹.

If an inspection required under the right to inspect the register³⁰ is refused or default is made in providing a copy so required³¹, otherwise than in accordance with an order of the court, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default³²; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale³³ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine³⁴ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale³⁵. In the case of any such refusal or default the court may by order compel an immediate inspection or, as the case may be, direct that the copy required be sent to the person requesting it³⁶.

It is an offence for a person knowingly or recklessly to make, in a request to inspect the register or to require a copy to be provided³⁷, a statement that is misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular³⁸; and it is an offence for a person in possession of information obtained by exercise of either the right of inspection or the right to require a copy³⁹ to do anything that results in the information being disclosed to another person⁴⁰, or to fail to do anything with the result that the information is disclosed to another person⁴¹, knowing, or having reason to suspect, that person may use the information for a purpose that is not a proper purpose⁴². A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or both)⁴³; and (on summary conviction) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months⁴⁴ or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (or both)⁴⁵.

The right of inspection ceases when the company is being wound up⁴⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(iv) Debentures and Debenture Stock/C. REGISTER OF DEBENTURE HOLDERS/1324. Register of debenture holders kept otherwise than in legible form.

1324. Register of debenture holders kept otherwise than in legible form.

Where any register of holders of debentures of a company is kept by a company by recording the matters in question otherwise than in a legible form¹, a company registered in England and Wales² may not perform the duty to allow inspection³ of such a register in Scotland and a company registered in Scotland may not perform such duty in England and Wales⁴. Nor may a company perform the duty so to allow inspection of a register in England and Wales, in the case of a company registered in England and Wales, or in Scotland, in the case of a company registered in Scotland, elsewhere than at⁵:

- 586 (1) the registered office of the company⁶;
- 587 (2) any other office of the company at which the work of ensuring that the register is duly made up is done⁷; or
- 588 (3) if the company arranges with some other person for the carrying out of the work referred to in head (2) above to be undertaken on behalf of the company by that other person, the office of that other person at which the work is done⁸.

The normal statutory requirements relating to registers of debenture holders⁹ and annual returns¹⁰ do not apply to such a register in so far as they relate to any of the following matters¹¹:

- 589 (a) the place where the register is permitted to be kept¹²;
- 590 (b) the giving of notice to the registrar of companies¹³ of the place where the register is kept, or of any change in that place¹⁴; and
- 591 (c) the inclusion in the annual return of a statement¹⁵ of the address of the place where the register is kept¹⁶.

Where the place for inspection of such a register is in England and Wales or Scotland, the company must send to the registrar of companies notice in the prescribed form¹⁷ of the place for inspection of that register and of any change in that place¹⁸. The company is not, however, obliged to give such notice¹⁹:

- 592 (i) where a company changes from keeping the register in a legible form to keeping it otherwise than in a legible form and the place for inspection of the register immediately following the change is the same as the place where the register was kept in a legible form immediately prior to the change²⁰; or
- 593 (ii) where, since the register first came into existence, it has been kept by recording the matters in question otherwise than in legible form, and the place for inspection has been the registered office of the company²¹.

Where the place for inspection of a register is situated in England and Wales, in the case of a company registered in England and Wales, or in Scotland, in the case of a company registered in Scotland, elsewhere than at its registered office, the company must include in its annual return a statement of the address of that place²².

Where a register of holders of debentures is kept by recording the matters in question otherwise than in legible form, any reference to such register in any provision of the Companies Act 2006 or the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001²³ relating to the place where a duplicate²⁴ of such register, another register or duplicate of another register is required to be kept, is to be construed as a reference to the place for inspection of the first-mentioned register²⁵.

D EQUITIES AFFECTING DEBENTURES

1325. Freedom from equities.

Debenture conditions are usually so framed as to give the registered holder for the time being the absolute right to receive the money secured by the debentures, and similar conditions are used in the case of debenture stock¹. The usual conditions in the case of debentures make the principal money and interest payable to the registered holder without regard to any equities subsisting between the company and the original or any intermediate holder. Such a provision is binding upon the company². The conditions also usually provide that the registered holder's receipt shall be a good discharge for the money secured, and that the company shall not be bound to inquire into his title or to take notice of any trust affecting that money, or be affected by notice, express or implied, of the right or claim of any other person to that money or instrument³.

In the absence of any special conditions, the assignee of a debenture takes it subject to any equities subsisting between the company and the original holder, even though the assignment was for value and the assignee had no notice of the circumstances giving rise to such equities⁴. The company may, however, be estopped from setting up such equities against the assignee either by the form of the debenture itself⁵, or by registering the transferee as the holder⁶, by accepting notice of assignment, even though it does not register the transfer⁷, by informing the transferee that registration is unnecessary⁸, by previous contract⁹, or by a judgment previously recovered against the company for interest on the debentures¹⁰.

1326. Clogging the equity of redemption.

Debentures¹ and other mortgages or charges issued by a company are not excepted from the rule against clogging the equity of redemption². Thus, in the case of a loan to a company on the security of a mortgage of debenture stock³, an option given to the lender to purchase the stock within a certain period at a discount is a clog on the equity of redemption and void⁴. A term in a debenture providing for payment of a bonus out of the net profit of the company for an unlimited period until the amount specified has been discharged constitutes a clog on the equity⁵; but a term in a debenture giving the holder a right in a winding up to share in surplus assets is not a clog on the equity⁶. A debenture may be made irredeemable⁷.

E. MODIFICATION OF RIGHTS; MEETINGS

1328. Modification clause.

It is common to insert in debenture trust deeds, and in the conditions indorsed on debentures, provisions for calling meetings of the debenture holders and enabling a specified majority to bind the whole body of holders to a modification, compromise or release of their rights against the company or the security.

Under a power to sanction any modification or compromise of the debenture holders' rights a mortgage may be given priority over the debentures¹, or the date of payment may be postponed², or redeemable debentures may be converted into irredeemable debentures³, or the company may be permitted to redeem debentures below par at a price which is in excess of the stock exchange quotation⁴. In such cases the court will not imply a condition that the power should be exercised only in the event of some serious occasion arising⁵. The power does not, however, allow the majority of the debenture holders to authorise a sale of the company's assets and the appropriation of the proceeds of sale in redeeming debentures by the purchase at the lowest price tendered after an invitation to the debenture holders⁶; nor does it authorise the debenture holders to delegate to a committee the power of further modifying the scheme for modification to which they have agreed⁷. The extinction of rights against the company, as by accepting shares in a new company in exchange for the debentures, is neither a 'modification' nor a 'compromise' of rights⁸ unless there is some dispute or difficulty in enforcing those rights⁹.

Under a power to sanction any compromise or arrangement which the court would have jurisdiction to sanction¹⁰, guarantors of debentures may be released from their guarantee, interest may be increased, new trustees of the debenture trust deed may be appointed, and payments to a sinking fund established by the debenture trust deed may be discontinued¹¹, or debenture holders may be bound to accept preference shares in a new company, to which the assets charged by the debentures are sold, in lieu of their debentures¹². Where, however, there is no express power to compromise, a mere power given to the majority to bind all the debenture holders as if they had consented does not enable the majority to bind the whole body to an arrangement whereby the rights declared by the trust deed are altered¹³.

In connection with the modification of rights clause¹, it is usual to provide in the case of debentures, where the issue is small, that the power may be exercised by writing under the hand of the holders of a specified nominal amount of the debentures; but, where the power is contained in a debenture trust deed, provisions are usually inserted for the power to be exercised by a resolution passed at a meeting of the debenture holders². These provisions are also usually inserted in debentures where the issue is large and is not secured by a trust deed. For purposes of voting at such meetings, persons entitled to an immediate issue of debentures, but to whom certificates have not been issued, are entitled to vote³. A debenture holder may vote at a meeting as his interest directs, although, in so voting, he must act in good faith with reference to the interests of the debenture holders as a class; and a majority of debenture holders will not be allowed to oppress a minority⁴.

The rights of holders of debentures¹ or debenture stock² may be modified by a scheme sanctioned under the statutory provisions relating to arrangements and reconstruction³. Where a claim is brought to administer the trusts of a deed securing debentures or debenture stock, the court may also approve a compromise and bind absent debenture holders, if satisfied that the compromise is for their benefit and that it is expedient to exercise the power⁴; but they are not bound if the order has been obtained by fraud or non-disclosure of material facts.

F REDEMPTION OF DEBENTURES

1331. Time for redemption.

Debentures¹ of a company become redeemable at the time or on the happening of any of the events specified in the debentures or debenture conditions, or in the trust deed securing the debentures²; and the happening of any one or more of such events entitles the company to make immediate repayment and call for a reconveyance of the property charged³. It is also very common in debentures and other similar instruments that are to be repaid on a fixed date to provide that that date will be accelerated in certain events, for example, if a petition is presented for the winding up by the court of the issuer⁴.

Provision is sometimes made for redemption by means of a sinking fund, and for the debentures to be redeemed by drawings⁵. An option is often given to the company at any time after a specified date to redeem at a premium. Unless otherwise agreed, debentures are not redeemable before the date or event specified in them⁶. Where debentures are to be redeemed on or after a specified date, the company may, but is not liable to, redeem them on that date, but it must redeem them on demand after that date⁷. The word 'redeemable', as used in debentures, implies an option and not an obligation to redeem⁸.

(A) IN GENERAL

1333. Debenture holder's remedies.

If the debenture¹ gives no charge² on the company's assets³, the debenture holder, being an unsecured creditor⁴, has only the rights against the company which any unsecured creditor has against an individual debtor, and also the right to present or support a petition for its winding up⁵. As a general rule, however, the holder of a debenture or debenture stock⁶ of a company has a charge or, where the debenture stock is secured by a trust deed⁷, the trustees usually have a legal mortgage on specific assets of the company, and, if so, he or they may enforce the usual remedies of a legal or equitable mortgagee against the company in the same manner as if it were an individual⁸. One of these rights is to have a sale of the property charged, either under the power given by the charge or by statute⁹, or with the assistance of the court. If the company goes into liquidation, the rights of a secured creditor under his security are not prejudiced, and the liquidator cannot obtain an injunction to restrain a sale by the secured creditor except on the usual terms of paying the amount due, or, if it is not agreed, paying the amount claimed, into court¹⁰. Where necessary, a debenture secured by a floating charge must be used to fund the general expenses of winding up in priority to the floating charge holder and is subject to any preferential creditors¹¹. In relation to a charge which is a floating charge on its creation and which is created after 15 September 2003¹², realisations from such a charge are a prescribed part of the company's net property that must be made available for the satisfaction of unsecured debts¹³.

The right of the debenture holder to exercise the remedies otherwise open to him is subject to certain statutory restrictions¹⁴.

Payment of preferential debts on assets subject to floating charge.

1334. Payment of preferential debts on assets subject to floating charge.

Where debentures¹ of a company² are secured by a charge³ which, as created, was a floating charge⁴, then, if possession is taken⁵, by or on behalf of the holders of any of the debentures, of any property⁶ comprised in or subject to the charge, and the company is not, at that time, in course of being wound up⁷, the company's preferential debts⁸ must be paid out of assets coming to the hands of the person taking possession in priority to any claims for principal or interest in respect of the debentures⁹.

Where a receiver is appointed on behalf of the holders of any debentures of the company secured by a charge which, as created, was a floating charge¹⁰, then, if the company is not at the time in course of being wound up, its preferential debts¹¹ must be paid out of the assets coming to the hands of the receiver in priority to any claims for principal or interest in respect of the debentures¹².

Payments so made¹³ must be recouped, as far as may be, out of the assets of the company available for payment of general creditors¹⁴.

Where the charge, as created, was partly specific and partly floating, the priority of such preferential payments applies only to the assets secured by the floating charge¹⁵.

A receiver and manager is liable in damages to the preferential creditors if he exhausts the assets in carrying on the company's business on behalf of the debenture holders by paying ordinary debts without first paying the preferential debts¹⁶; or if, having collected assets, he hands them over to the company with the knowledge that it will transfer them to the debenture holder in satisfaction of his claim without any provision being made for payment of the preferential debts¹⁷. A claim in tort by a preferential creditor for damages for failing to pay his debt out of available assets is not barred by lapse of time if the receiver had sufficient assets to pay the debt at any time within six years¹⁸ before the bringing of the claim¹⁹.

6 As to the meaning of 'property' see PARA 1337 note 4.

7 A company is not in the course of being wound up until a winding-up order has been made: Re Christonette International Ltd [1982] 3 All ER 225, [1982] 1 WLR 1245. If the company is in winding up, a similar obligation to pay the company's preferential debts (if need be) out of the proceeds of a floating charge applies: see the Insolvency Act 1986 s 175(2); and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 763. As to the priority given to preferential debts in winding up over the claims of debenture holders under a floating charge see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARAS 771-772. See also note 8.

8 For these purposes, 'preferential debts' means the categories of debts listed in the Insolvency Act 1986 s 386(1), Sch 6 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 763 et seq); and, for the purposes of Sch 6, the 'relevant date' is the date of possession being taken as mentioned in the Companies Act 2006 s 754(2): see s 754(3). However, preferential debts have been significantly reduced by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 251 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 763).

9 Companies Act 2006 s 754(2). Where a company, immediately before it has ceased to trade, had transferred and sold book debts to subsidiaries and then sold the subsidiaries to a third party on the basis that some of the consideration and the proceeds of the book debts would be transferred to the bank in return for it releasing its floating charge on the book debts (ie in return for not enforcing its security), the deferred and non-deferred consideration paid before the company's liquidation fell within the Companies Act 1985 s 196 (see now the Companies Act 2006 s 754) (ie because the bank had effectively realised its security) but so much of the deferred consideration as was paid after the liquidation fell within the Insolvency Act 1986 s 175 (which provides that, in a winding up, the company's preferential debts must be paid in priority to all other debts: see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 763): Re Oval 1742 Ltd (in creditors voluntary liquidation), Customs and Excise Comrs v Royal Bank of Scotland [2007] EWCA Civ 1262, [2008] 1 BCLC 204.

10 See the Insolvency Act 1986 s 40(1). Subject to the specified exceptions given in ss 72B-72GA (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 382), the holder of a qualifying floating charge in respect of a company's property may not appoint an administrative receiver of the company; this prohibition applies to a floating charge created on or after 15 September 2003, and applies in spite of any provision of an agreement or instrument which purports to empower a person to appoint an administrative receiver (by whatever name): see s 72A; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 382. See also PARA 1338.

11 If preferential debts within the meaning given to that expression by the Insolvency Act 1986 s 386 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 763 et seq): see s 40(2). For the purposes of Sch 6, and in relation to a company in receivership (where s 40 applies), the 'relevant date' is the date of the appointment of the receiver by debenture holders: see s 387(1), (4)(a).

12 Insolvency Act 1986 s 40(2). For these purposes, 'the debentures' is a reference to 'any debentures of the company secured by a charge which, as created, was a floating charge' in s 40(1) (see the text and note 10) and not merely to debentures under which a receiver has been appointed: Re H & K (Medway) Ltd, Mackay v IRC [1997] 2 All ER 321, [1997] 1 WLR 1422. As to the form of order appointing a receiver so far as it relates to preferential creditors see PARA 1385.

1335. Effect of moratoriums on property subject to security.

Where company directors intend to make a proposal for a voluntary arrangement¹, they may take steps to obtain a moratorium for the company², and during the period for which the moratorium is in force³ no steps may be taken to enforce any security over company property and no proceedings, execution or other legal process may be commenced or continued against the company or its property except with the leave of the court and subject to such terms as the court may impose⁴. A company in respect of which a moratorium is in force may dispose of property which is subject to a security if either the holder of the security consents or the court gives leave⁵.

When a company is in administration⁶ then, without the court's permission⁷ or the administrator's consent⁸, no step may be taken to enforce security over the company's property⁹, and no legal process (including legal proceedings, execution, distress and diligence) may be instituted or continued against the company or property of the company¹⁰. The administrator of a company may dispose of or take action relating to property which is subject to a floating charge as if it were not subject to the charge¹¹.

(B) ADMINISTRATIVE RECEIVERS

1337. In general.

In relation to a company registered in England and Wales¹, 'administrative receiver' means²: (1) a receiver or manager³ of the whole (or substantially the whole) of a company's property⁴ appointed by or on behalf of the holders of any debentures⁵ of the company secured by a charge which, as created, was a floating charge⁶ (or by such a charge and one or more other securities)⁷; or (2) a person who would be such a receiver or manager but for the appointment of some other person as the receiver of part of the company's property⁸.

An administrative receiver must be a person who is qualified to act as an insolvency practitioner in relation to the company⁹. However, the acts of an individual as administrative receiver of a company are valid notwithstanding any defect in his appointment, nomination or qualifications¹⁰.

When an administration order takes effect in respect of a company¹¹, any administrative receiver of the company must vacate office¹²; and where a company is in administration¹³, any receiver of part of the company's property must vacate office if the administrator requires him to¹⁴. During the period for which such an order is in force, no administrative receiver of the company may be appointed¹⁵; and no other steps may be taken to enforce any security over the company's property, or to repossess goods in the company's possession under any hire-purchase agreement except with the consent of the administrator or the permission of the court¹⁶ and subject, where the court gives permission, to such a condition or requirement as the court may impose¹⁷.

1 See the Companies Act 2006 s 28(1) (s 28 substituted by SI 2009/1941). As to company formation and registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 78 et seq. As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5. However, since the general purpose and the nature of the statutory scheme relating to the qualifications, functions, powers and duties of administrative receivers are as appropriate to unregistered companies (including foreign companies conducting business in England and Wales) as to registered companies, the scheme of administrative receivership is not confined to appointments of receivers made over the property of registered companies: Re International Bulk Commodities Ltd [1993] Ch 77, [1993] 1 All ER 361. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1666. The Insolvency Act 1986 Pt III Ch I (ss 28-49) (Receivers and Managers (England and Wales)) does not apply to receivers appointed under Pt III Ch II (ss 50-71) (Receivers (Scotland)): see s 28(2) (as so substituted).

2 Insolvency Act 1986 s 29(2). As to administrative receivers generally see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 380 et seq.

3 As to the construction of references to receivers and managers see PARA 1336.

4 For these purposes, 'property' includes money, goods, things in action, land and every description of property wherever situated and also obligations and every description of interest, whether present or future or vested or contingent, arising out of, or incidental to, property: Insolvency Act 1986 s 436. A waste disposal licence is 'property' for the purposes of s 436: Re Mineral Resources Ltd, Environment Agency v Stout [1999] 1 All ER 746 (liquidator owed an obligation to realise for the benefit of the creditors the value of the licence in a market where people were prepared to pay for a transfer of such licences); Re Celtic Extraction Ltd (in liquidation), Re Bluestone Chemicals Ltd (in liquidation) [2001] Ch 475, [1999] 4 All ER 684, CA. In the application of the Insolvency Act 1986 to proceedings by virtue of EC Council Regulation 1346/2000 (OJ L160, 30.6.2000, p 1) on insolvency proceedings, art 3 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 46 et seq; CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 476), a reference to property is a reference to property which may be dealt with in the proceedings: Insolvency Act 1986 s 436A (added by the Insolvency Act 1986 (Amendment) (No 2) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1240, regs 3, 18).

5 As to the meaning of 'debenture' see PARA 1299.

6 For these purposes, 'floating charge' means a charge which as created was a floating charge and includes a floating charge within the Companies Act 1985 s 462 (Scottish floating charges): Insolvency Act 1986 s 251. As to the meaning of 'floating charge' generally see PARA 1269.

10 See the Insolvency Act 1986 s 232; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 159. 1338. Prohibition of appointment of administrative receiver by floating charge holder.

Subject to specified exceptions¹, the holder of a qualifying floating charge in respect of a company's property² may not appoint an administrative receiver of the company³. This prohibition applies to a floating charge created on or after 15 September 2003⁴, and applies in spite of any provision of an agreement or instrument which purports to empower a person to appoint an administrative receiver (by whatever name)⁵.

However, this prohibition does not prevent the appointment of an administrative receiver:

- 594 (1) in pursuance of an agreement which is or forms part of a capital market arrangement if a party incurs or, when the agreement was entered into was expected to incur, a debt of at least £50 million under the arrangement, and the arrangement involves the issue of a capital market investment⁶;
- 595 (2) of a project company of a project which is a public-private partnership project, and includes step-in rights⁷;
- 596 (3) of a project company of a project which is a utility project, and includes step-in rights⁸;
- 597 (4) of a project company of a project which is designed wholly or mainly to develop land which at the commencement of the project is wholly or partly in a designated disadvantaged area outside Northern Ireland, and includes step-in rights⁹;
- 598 (5) of a project company of a project which is a financed project, and includes step-in rights¹⁰;
- 599 (6) of a company by virtue of a market charge, a system-charge, or a collateral security charge¹¹;
- 600 (7) of a company which is registered as a social landlord¹²;
- 601 (8) of a company holding an appointment under the Water Industry Act 1991¹³, of a protected railway company or of a licence company¹⁴.

2 For these purposes, 'holder of a qualifying floating charge in respect of a company's property' has the same meaning as in the Insolvency Act 1986 s 8, Sch B1 para 14 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 212): see s 72A(3); and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 382. An order under s 72A(4)(a) may make provision which applies generally or only for a specified person, may make different provision for different purposes, and may make transitional provision: see s 72A(5); and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 382. In exercise of the powers so conferred, the Secretary of State has made the Insolvency Act 1986, Section 72A (Appointed Date) Order 2003, SI 2003/2095, which appoints 15 September 2003 as the relevant date for these purposes (see art 2).

Power of floating charge holder to appoint administrator.

(C) ADMINISTRATION

1339. Power of floating charge holder to appoint administrator.

The holder of a qualifying floating charge¹ in respect of a company's property may appoint an administrator of the company without a court order², provided that: (1) he has given at least two business days' written notice (the 'notice of intention to appoint') to the holder of any prior qualifying floating charge³; and (2) the holder of any such charge⁴ has consented in writing to the making of the appointment⁵. He may also apply to the court for an order appointing a person as administrator⁶.

An administrator may not be so appointed while a floating charge on which the appointment relies is not enforceable⁷ or if a provisional liquidator of the company has been appointed⁸ or an administrative receiver⁹ of the company is in office¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'floating charge' for these purposes see PARA 1337 note 6. As to the meaning of 'holder of a qualifying floating charge' for these purposes see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 212. A floating charge qualifies for these purposes if it is created by an instrument which: (1) states that the Insolvency Act 1986 s 8, Sch B1 para 14 applies to the floating charge; (2) purports to empower the holder of the floating charge to appoint an administrator of the company; or (3) purports to empower the holder of the floating charge to make an appointment which would be the appointment of an administrative receiver within the meaning given by s 29(2) (see PARA 1337): see Sch B1 para 14(2); and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 228. 3 See the Insolvency Act 1986 Sch B1 para 15(1)(a); and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 228. In order for a prior floating charge holder to require notice of intention to appoint, the prior floating charge must satisfy Sch B1 para 14(2) (see note 1); and one floating charge is prior to another for these purposes if it was created first, or if it is to be treated as having priority in accordance with an agreement to which the holder of each floating charge was party: see Sch B1 para 15; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 228.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(v) Remedies for enforcing Securities/A. REMEDIES UNDER THE SECURITY/(D) Receivers or Managers/1340. Appointment of receiver or manager.

(D) RECEIVERS OR MANAGERS

1340. Appointment of receiver or manager.

A debenture¹ or trust deed² often gives power to appoint a receiver or manager³ on specified events⁴. Such a power given in debentures of a series is a fiduciary power; and, if an appointment is made which is not for the benefit of the debenture holders, but with a view to the benefit of the company or third persons, the court will interfere and appoint its own receiver⁵. The appointment of a person as a receiver or manager of a company's property under powers contained in an instrument⁶ is, however, of no effect unless it is accepted by that person before the end of the business day⁷ next following that on which the instrument of appointment is received by him or on his behalf⁸; and, subject to this, the appointment is deemed to be made at the time at which the instrument of appointment is so received⁹. The date of the document is immaterial¹⁰. These provisions apply to the appointment of two or more persons as joint receivers or managers of a company's property under powers contained in an instrument, subject to such modifications as may be prescribed by the rules¹¹.

The power of a secured creditor to appoint a receiver under his security may be exercised, assuming that all conditions necessary for the appointment have been satisfied, at any time the creditor chooses; and, as regards timing, he owes no duty either to the company or to any guarantors to select any time other than one which suits his own convenience¹². In making any such appointment, the person making it is under no duty to refrain from so doing because this may cause loss to the company or its unsecured creditors, as, for example, where a liquidator who could do all that the receiver could do has already been appointed¹³.

2 As to trust deeds securing payment of money owing on debentures see PARA 1302.

3 As to the construction of references to receivers and managers see PARA 1336.

4 As to the statutory power of a mortgagee by deed to appoint a receiver (commonly referred to as 'LPA receivers') see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 101(1)(iii); and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 476. Cf PARA 1300. As to an invalid appointment by deed taking effect as an appointment in writing see Windsor Refrigerator Co Ltd v Branch Nominees Ltd [1961] Ch 375, [1961] 1 All ER 277, CA. The power to appoint often arises under the terms of a debenture upon failure by the company to make repayment of all sums due thereunder on demand. Such a demand need not specify the actual sum due (Bank of Baroda v Panessar [1987] Ch 335, [1986] 3 All ER 751, following Bunbury Foods Pty Ltd v National Bank of Australasia Ltd (1984) 58 ALJR 199, Aust HC; and see NRG Vision Ltd v Churchfield Leasing Ltd [1988] BCLC 624, 4 BCC 56), but must give the company sufficient time to carry out any necessary mechanics of payment in relation to sums assumed to be already at its disposal (RA Cripps & Son Ltd v Wickenden [1973] 2 All ER 606, [1973] 1 WLR 944; Bank of Baroda v Panessar). However, where the debtor makes it clear to the creditor that the required funds are not available, that admission establishes the debtor's default and the creditor does not have to wait for any minimum period before appointing a receiver: Sheppard & Cooper Ltd v TSB Bank plc (No 2) [1996] 2 All ER 654. If the power to appoint a receiver has become exercisable on the happening of a specified event, the appointment is valid notwithstanding that the reason given for the appointment at the time is not on those grounds but only adduced subsequently; and the power to appoint a receiver is valid even if the charge documents take effect only under hand so that any receiver appointed cannot execute deeds on the company's behalf: Byblos Bank SAL v Al-Khudhairy [1987] BCLC 232, CA.

Where the appointment of a person as the receiver or manager¹ of a company's property² under powers contained in an instrument³ is discovered to be invalid (whether by virtue of the invalidity of the instrument or otherwise) the court may order the person by whom or on whose behalf the appointment was made to indemnify the person appointed against any liability which arises solely by reason of the invalidity of the appointment⁴.

1342. Effect of appointment of receiver.

The appointment of a receiver¹ is one of the events which causes a floating charge to crystallise². As regards all the property comprised in the security over which the receiver is appointed, the directors' powers are of necessity paralysed. The powers exercisable by the receiver depend, however, entirely upon the combination of the precise terms of the debenture and his appointment, as supplemented, in the case of an administrative receiver (where it is still possible so to appoint)³, by certain statutory powers⁴ if not inconsistent with the terms of the debenture. The receiver's status, whether as agent for the debenture holders⁵ or as agent for the company (as is usual, and is, in the case of an administrative receiver, expressly provided for by statute⁶), depends on similar considerations⁷.

A person dealing with an administrative receiver of a company in good faith and for value is not, however, concerned to inquire whether the administrative receiver is acting within his powers⁸.

The appointment of a receiver normally has no effect upon the company's contracts, except such as cannot well subsist concurrently with the receivership, such as contracts of management. Ordinary contracts of employment, for example, will not be affected⁹, save that, if they are adopted by an administrative receiver in the carrying out of his functions, he will become personally liable on them but only to the extent of any qualifying liability¹⁰. Apart from that, if, as is usual, the receiver has powers of management, the decision whether to cause the company to fulfil existing contracts is solely a matter for his discretion, at any rate where the repudiation of the contract would not adversely affect the realisation of the assets or seriously affect the trading prospects of the company, if it is able to trade in the future¹¹. However, where there is a subsisting contractual obligation capable of enforcement by an order for specific performance in the form of a mandatory injunction the appointment of a receiver does not of itself preclude the making of an order for specific performance which otherwise ought to be made¹².

A provision in a debenture empowering the receiver to bring a claim in the name of the company whose assets are charged is merely an enabling provision, investing the receiver with the capacity to bring such a claim, and does not divest the company's directors of their power to institute proceedings on behalf of the company, provided that the proceedings do not interfere with the receiver's function of getting in the company's assets or prejudicially affect the debenture holder by imperilling the assets¹³.

So long as the receiver¹ is the agent of the company, the company remains as rateable occupier of any premises occupied by it; and the company remains liable to pay any rates². If and when the receiver ceases to be the agent of the company, he or his then principal³ may become liable to pay the rates, if he takes such possession as constitutes rateable occupation⁴.

So far as corporation tax is concerned, if and so long as the receiver is the agent of the company, the tax position of the company remains unchanged, and the company will be the person chargeable to tax. If and when the receiver is not, or ceases to be, the agent of the company, since nevertheless it remains entitled to the benefit of the income produced by the receiver's conduct of its affairs, it would appear that the company will be chargeable on it⁵.

While in theory a receiver appears to have a discretion⁶ as to whether or not to pay over VAT, there is in fact, on grounds of public policy, no such discretion⁷.

1344. Notification of appointment.

If a person obtains an order for the appointment of a receiver or manager¹ of a company's property², or appoints such a receiver or manager under powers contained in an instrument, he must within seven days of the order or of the appointment under those powers, give notice of the fact to the registrar of companies³. Where a person appointed receiver or manager of a company's property under powers contained in an instrument ceases to act as such receiver or manager, he must, on so ceasing, give the registrar notice to that effect⁴. The registrar must enter a fact of which he is given notice in this way⁵ in the register of charges⁶.

A person who makes default in complying with these requirements⁷ commits an offence⁸; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale⁹ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹⁰ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹¹.

Where a receiver or manager of the property of a company has been appointed, every invoice, order for goods or services, business letter or order form (whether in hard copy, electronic or any other form) issued by or on behalf of the company or the receiver or manager or the liquidator of the company, and all the company's websites, must contain a statement that a receiver or manager has been appointed¹². If default is made in complying with this requirement, the company, and any officer or liquidator of the company and any receiver or manager who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default, is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding one-fifth of the statutory maximum¹³.

1346. Bankrupt or person in respect of whom a debt relief order is made not to act as receiver or manager.

A person who acts as receiver or manager¹ of a company's property² on behalf of debenture³ holders while he is an undischarged bankrupt⁴, while a moratorium period under a debt relief order applies in relation to him⁵, or while a bankruptcy restrictions order or a debt relief restrictions order is in force in respect of him⁶, commits an offence⁷; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or (on summary conviction) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum⁸ (or to both)⁹. 1347. Powers of receiver appointed out of court.

The powers of a receiver¹, other than an administrative receiver², appointed out of court depend upon the provisions of the debenture³ under which he is appointed, together with any appropriate statutory powers⁴. Normally, the debenture will confer upon him power to carry on part of the business of the company, for he will have no such power unless specifically so authorised⁵. If he has such power, he will normally have, as incidental to it, power to borrow upon the security of the assets in his hands⁶; but he will require express power to borrow on such security in priority to the debenture holders' charge thereon.

1348. Getting in uncalled capital.

Unless the terms of the instrument under which he was appointed contain provisions to the contrary, an administrative receiver¹ has power to call up any uncalled capital of the company². In all other cases, if uncalled capital is included in the security, the liquidator³ is the proper person to get it in and what he receives, less the expenses of making and enforcing the call, is paid to the receiver; but the court may authorise the receiver, on giving a proper indemnity, to get in the calls in the name of the liquidator⁴.

1349. Liability of trustees etc for receiver's acts.

An administrative receiver¹ of a company is deemed to be the agent of the company unless and until it goes into liquidation². In all other cases, the question of the status of a receiver depends upon the construction of the relevant power of appointment. Where the receiver is appointed under a document which provides that the person appointed receiver is to be the agent of the company, and that the company is alone to be answerable³ for his acts, contracts and defaults, neither the trustees nor the debenture holders are personally liable in respect of contracts entered into by him, even in respect of contracts entered into after the company has gone into liquidation⁴. In such circumstances he becomes, if the company goes into liquidation, a principal⁵, unless by his acts he puts himself in the position of an agent of the debenture holder⁶.

When a receiver is declared to be the agent of the company, he has power to sue in its name⁷. Where there is no such provision, he will be the agent primarily of the debenture holders, and they will be liable on his contracts⁸, and liable to pay him reasonable remuneration⁹.

A receiver who incurs liability in respect of proper contracts is entitled to be indemnified out of the property subject to the security¹⁰.

A receiver and manager may be ordered at the instance of the claimant to disclose documents belonging to a company of which he was formerly managing director but in his possession as receiver (and so held by him on behalf of the debenture holders) in proceedings involving him and the company as co-defendants¹¹.

As in any other case of agency, this agency is determined by the liquidation of the company: see the Insolvency Act 1986 s 44(1)(a); and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 402. Cf the Law of Property Act 1925 s 109(2) (see MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 478), which provides that a receiver appointed under the powers conferred by that Act (see PARA 1340) is deemed to be the agent of the mortgagor, and the mortgagor is to be

See also Deyes v Wood [1911] 1 KB 806, CA, where the corresponding provision of the Conveyancing Act 1881 s 24(2) (now repealed), was, on the construction of the debenture, deemed to be incorporated, but it was held that the mortgage otherwise provided that the receiver was to be the agent of the debenture holder. This case was distinguished in Cully v Parsons [1923] 2 Ch 512, where a provision was inserted that a debenture holder should not in making or consenting to the appointment of a receiver incur any liability to him for his remuneration or otherwise. Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(v) Remedies for enforcing Securities/A. REMEDIES UNDER THE SECURITY/(D) Receivers or Managers/1350. Liability of a receiver other than an administrative receiver.

1350. Liability of a receiver other than an administrative receiver.

A receiver or manager¹ appointed under powers contained in an instrument² (other than an administrative receiver³) is, to the same extent as if he had been appointed by order of the court⁴:

- 602 (1) personally liable on any contract entered into by him in the performance of his functions (except in so far as the contract otherwise provides) and on any contract of employment adopted by him⁵ in the performance of those functions⁶; and
- 603 (2) entitled in respect of that liability to indemnity out of the assets⁷.

This provision does not, however, limit any right to indemnity which the receiver or manager would otherwise have, nor limit his liability on contracts entered into without authority, nor confer any right to indemnity in respect of that liability⁸.

On the termination of his agency by the liquidation of the company, he will be personally bound by any contracts made by him, and, if he contracts in the name of the company, he may be liable for breach of warranty of authority⁹. Otherwise, he is entitled to ratify contracts made by others ostensibly as agents for the company¹⁰.

A receiver for debenture holders who intends to sell the benefit of a contract may be restrained from doing so if the assignment is one which will not be valid without the consent of the other party to the contract, and that consent is withheld¹¹.

Where a receiver has received money from the company and paid it into a receivership account and the money was obtained by the company wrongfully, the receiver is not liable personally to repay the money, if, at the time when he paid it in, he had no knowledge that it had been wrongfully obtained¹². A receiver is not a debtor to the company from time to time of the amount which may ultimately prove to be the balance in his hands after payment of preferential claims and the amount due to debenture holders¹³.

A receiver who is appointed by debenture holders and is acting as their agent is liable as a trespasser if he deals with assets which are not the property of the company¹⁴.

A receiver managing mortgaged property owes duties to the mortgagor and anyone else interested in the equity of redemption, which duties include but are not necessarily confined to a duty of good faith, though the extent and scope of any duty additional to that of good faith will depend upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case¹⁵. In exercising a power of sale, a receiver owes the same equitable duty to the mortgagor and to others interested in the equity of redemption as the mortgagee to take reasonable care to obtain whatever is the true market value of the mortgaged property at the moment he chooses to sell it¹⁶. In exercising his powers of management, the primary duty of the receiver is to try and bring about a situation in which interest on the secured debt can be paid and the debt itself repaid¹⁷. Subject to that primary duty, the receiver owes a duty to manage the property with due diligence¹⁸. Due diligence does not oblige the receiver to continue to carry on a business on the mortgaged premises previously carried on by the mortgagor; but, if the receiver does carry on a business on the mortgaged premises, due diligence requires reasonable steps to be taken in order to try to do so profitably¹⁹.

The receiver's conveyance of the company's property even after liquidation is not in contravention of the provisions of the Insolvency Act 1986 prohibiting dispositions of the company's property made after the commencement of the winding up without the leave of the court²⁰, since the relevant disposition is the charge under which the receiver was appointed²¹.

5 For these purposes, the receiver or manager is not to be taken to have adopted a contract of employment by reason of anything done or omitted to be done within 14 days after his appointment: Insolvency Act 1986 s 37(2). As to contracts of employment adopted by an administrative receiver see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 402.

6 Insolvency Act 1986 s 37(1)(a). A receiver who pursues unsuccessfully a claim against a third party is not personally responsible for the costs of the successful party, although the effect of authority is that, in appropriate cases, a non-party order against a receiver or against a secured creditor could be made, especially where the non-party was the 'real party': Dolphin Quays Developments Ltd v Mills [2008] EWCA Civ 385, [2008] 4 All ER 58, [2008] 1 WLR 1829. As to non-party costs orders in respect of directors see PARA 309. Where there are grounds for believing that a claimant company, if it were unsuccessful in its proceedings against a third party, would be unable to pay the costs of that third party, the latter should take the prudent routine step of invoking the court's discretion under CPR 25.13(2)(c) (as to which see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 746) to make an order for security for costs against the company as claimant in the proceedings: Dolphin Quays Developments Ltd v Mills at [92] per Mummery LJ. 1351. Application to court for directions.

A receiver or manager¹ of a company's property² appointed under powers contained in an instrument³, or the persons by whom or on whose behalf a receiver or manager has been so appointed, may apply to the court for directions in relation to any particular matter arising in connection with the performance of the functions of the receiver or manager⁴. On such an application, the court may give such directions, or may make such order declaring the rights of persons before the court or otherwise, as it thinks just⁵.

4 Insolvency Act 1986 s 35(1). Section 35 is drafted in wide terms and should be given scope wide enough to embrace any dispute concerning a receiver or manager's remuneration. Further, s 35 should be read as a whole; it follows that all those matters which can be the subject of an application under s 35(1) can be the subject of directions or a declaration under s 35(2) (see the text and note 5) and vice versa: Morris v Lewis [1996] 3 All ER 228, [1996] 2 BCLC 400. Filing receiver's accounts.

1352. Filing receiver's accounts.

Subject to certain exceptions¹, every receiver or manager² of a company's property³ who has been appointed under powers contained in an instrument⁴ must deliver to the registrar of companies⁵ for registration the requisite accounts of his receipts and payments⁶.

The accounts must be delivered within one month (or such longer period as the registrar may allow) after the expiration of 12 months⁷ from the date of his appointment and of every subsequent period of six months, and also within one month after he ceases to act as receiver or manager⁸. The requisite accounts must be an abstract in the prescribed form⁹ showing¹⁰:

- 604 (1) receipts and payments during the relevant period of 12 or six months¹¹; or 605 (2) where the receiver or manager ceases to act, receipts and payments during the period from the end of the period of 12 or six months to which the last preceding abstract related (or, if no preceding abstract has been so delivered, from the date of his appointment) up to the date of his so ceasing, and the aggregate amount of receipts and payments during all preceding periods since his appointment¹².

A receiver or manager who makes default in complying with these provisions is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding one-fifth of the statutory maximum¹³ and (on conviction after continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹⁴ not exceeding one-fiftieth of the statutory maximum¹⁵.

Default in rendering accounts.

1353. Default in rendering accounts.

A receiver or manager¹ is under a duty, as an accounting party to the company², and also, where this is the case, as its agent, to keep and deliver to the company when required full accounts of his dealings with the company's property³. This duty, which may be enforced by proceedings taken in the ordinary way, is not displaced by the provisions described below⁴.

If a receiver or manager of a company's property:

- 606 (1) having made default in filing, delivering or making any return, account or other document, or in giving any notice, which a receiver or manager is by law required to file, deliver, make or give, fails to make good the default within 14 days after the service on him of a notice requiring him to do so⁵; or
- 607 (2) having been appointed under powers contained in an instrument⁶, has, after being required at any time by the liquidator of the company to do so, failed to render proper accounts of his receipts and payments and to vouch them and pay over to the liquidator the amount properly payable to him⁷, the court may, on an application made for the purpose⁸, make an order directing the receiver or manager, as the case may be, to make good the default within such time as may be specified in the order⁹.

In the case of a default mentioned in head (1) above, application to the court may be made by any member¹⁰ or creditor¹¹ of the company or by the registrar of companies¹²; and, in the case of a default mentioned in head (2) above, the application must be made by the liquidator¹³. In either case, the court's order may provide that all costs of and incidental to the application are to be borne by the receiver or manager, as the case may be¹⁴.

In the case of a receiver or manager¹ of the company's business or undertaking being duly appointed, or of possession being taken, by or on behalf of holders of debentures² secured by a floating charge³, then, if the company has entered into contracts of insurance against any liability to third parties, its rights against the insurers in respect of that liability are automatically transferred to and vested in the third party; but the third party retains his rights to recover any balance not covered by insurance⁴.

1355. Change of status on making of order for winding up or on administration.

Save that on the liquidation of the company the receiver, receiver and manager or administrative receiver¹ ceases to be agent of the company² and in general becomes a principal³, such liquidation has no effect on the status or powers of the receiver. It is, however, possible for the receiver and the debenture holder so to conduct themselves that the receiver becomes the agent of the debenture holder⁴.

When an administration order takes effect in respect of a company⁵, any administrative receiver of the company must vacate office⁶; and where a company is in administration⁷, any receiver of part of the company's property⁸ must vacate office if the administrator requires him to⁹. Where an administrative receiver or receiver vacates office under these provisions, his remuneration¹⁰ will be charged on and paid out of any property of the company which was in his custody or under his control immediately before he vacated office¹¹; and he need not take any further steps¹² in connection with the payment of the company's preferential debts¹³.

1356. Court's power to fix remuneration.

On an application made by the liquidator of a company¹, the court may by order fix the amount to be paid by way of remuneration to a person who, under the powers contained in an instrument, has been appointed receiver or manager² of the company's property³. The power so given is intended to be confined to cases where the remuneration can clearly be seen to be excessive; it is not intended to ensure a routine assessment of the remuneration by the court⁴. Where no such previous order has been made, the court's power so conferred extends to fixing the remuneration for any period before the making of the order or the application for it⁵, and is exercisable notwithstanding that the receiver or manager has died or ceased to act before the making of the order or the application for it⁶. Where the receiver or manager has been paid or has retained for his remuneration for any period before the making of the order any amount in excess of that so fixed for that period, the court's power extends to requiring him or his personal representatives to account for the excess or such part of it as may be specified in the order⁷; but this last power⁸ must not be exercised as respects any period before the making of the application for the order, unless in the court's opinion there are special circumstances making it proper for the power to be exercised⁹. On an application made either by the liquidator or by the receiver or manager, the court may from time to time vary or amend any such order¹⁰.

The statutory power does not extend to disbursements, the receiver's right to be indemnified in respect of them depending upon the ordinary law of agency¹¹.

1357. Vacation of office by receiver.

A receiver¹ appointed by or on behalf of debenture holders will be displaced by the appointment of a receiver by debenture holders with a higher priority². The instrument under which he was appointed may contain power to remove him, in which case he will vacate office when notice of his removal is received by him³. He is in any event liable to be displaced by the appointment of a receiver by the court; and when an administration order takes effect in respect of a company⁴, any administrative receiver of the company⁵ must vacate office⁶; and where a company is in administration⁷, any receiver of part of the company's property⁸ must vacate office if the administrator requires him to⁹.

Where at any time the receiver or manager appointed under powers contained in an instrument¹⁰, other than an administrative receiver, vacates office, his remuneration and any expenses properly incurred by him¹¹, and any indemnity to which he is entitled out of the assets of the company¹², are charged on and must be paid out of any property of the company which is in his custody or under his control at that time in priority to any charge or other security held by the person by or on whose behalf he was appointed¹³.

A debenture holder may obtain the appointment of a receiver or receiver and manager¹. He may also sue for the recovery of his principal or interest if in arrear; or present a petition for the winding up of the company²; or enforce his security by obtaining an order for sale or, in some instances, for foreclosure³; or where, as is sometimes the case, the principal money and interest is guaranteed by some other company or person, enforce the guarantee. The passing of a resolution for voluntary winding up does not prevent a debenture holder from commencing proceedings to enforce his security⁴, and the court will not restrain the claim upon the liquidator's application⁵. Where a compulsory order has been made, a claim by debenture holders cannot be begun or proceeded with except with the permission of the winding-up court, but permission is granted as a matter of course unless the same relief is given to the debenture holder in the winding up as he would obtain in the claim⁶.

Provisions may be included in debentures restraining a holder from taking action without the consent of a specified number of the holders of the debentures⁸.

(B) APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER BY THE COURT

1361. Application for appointment of receiver.

A receiver or a receiver and manager¹ may be appointed by the court². The court will normally only consider an application for such an appointment before proceedings are started after notice of the application has been served³. The application usually claims to have the debentures⁴ enforced by foreclosure or sale⁵, and asks for accounts and inquiries, which will include an account of what is due to the debenture holders upon the security of the debentures, and an inquiry as to what property is comprised in or charged by the debentures⁶.

1362. When a receiver will be appointed.

A receiver or receiver and manager¹ will be appointed by the court where the principal² or interest³ is in arrear; or where the security is in jeopardy, even if no event has happened which either under the debentures or the trust deed⁴ makes the security enforceable⁵; or where the company has sold the whole, or substantially the whole, of its undertaking and assets otherwise than in the ordinary course of business, and has ceased to be a going concern⁶; or on an order being made or a resolution being passed for the winding up of the company⁷. In some cases, the court will also appoint a receiver in place of a receiver appointed by debenture holders under a power contained in the debentures⁸.

COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(v) Remedies for enforcing Securities/B. REMEDIES ON APPLICATION TO THE COURT/(B) Appointment of Receiver by the Court/1363. Appointment of receiver.

1363. Appointment of receiver.

The written evidence in support of an application for the appointment of a receiver¹ should normally identify an individual whom the court is to be asked to appoint as receiver (the 'nominee')². If the applicant does not nominate a person to be appointed as receiver, or if the court decides not to appoint the nominee, the court may order that a suitable person be appointed as receiver, and may direct any party to nominate a suitable individual to be appointed³. A body corporate cannot be appointed⁴, nor, in the case of the appointment of an administrative receiver⁵, may any person other than an insolvency practitioner be appointed⁶.

1 As to applications for the appointment of a receiver see PARA 1361.

2 See Practice Direction--Court's power to appoint a Receiver PD 69 para 4.2; and RECEIVERS. The written evidence should also: (1) state the name, address and position of the nominee; (2) include written evidence by a person who knows the nominee, stating that he believes the nominee is a suitable person to be appointed as receiver, and the basis of that belief; and (3) be accompanied by written consent, signed by the nominee, to act as receiver if appointed: see para 4.2; and RECEIVERS.

3 See Practice Direction--Court's power to appoint a Receiver PD 69 para 4.3; and RECEIVERS. A party directed to nominate a person to be appointed as receiver must file written evidence containing the information required by para 4.2 (see note 2) and accompanied by the written consent of the nominee: see para 4.4; and RECEIVERS.

REMEDIES ON APPLICATION TO THE COURT/(B) Appointment of Receiver by the Court/1364. Receiver's security.

1364. Receiver's security.

The court may direct that before a receiver begins to act or within a specified time he must either give such security as the court may determine¹ or file² and serve³ on all parties to the proceedings evidence that he already has in force sufficient security⁴ to cover his liability for his acts and omissions as a receiver⁵. An order appointing a receiver will normally specify the date by which the receiver must give security or file and serve evidence to satisfy the court that he already has security in force⁶; and the court may terminate the appointment of the receiver if he fails to give the security or satisfy the court as to the security he has in force by the date specified⁷.

If it is important that the receiver should act at once, application is made for liberty for him so to act, and an immediate appointment is made on the claimant's undertaking to be personally answerable, pending the completion of the security, for all the liabilities of the receiver which would be covered by the security when completed⁸.

Where the applicant is a limited company, an undertaking from the company is not usually accepted, but must be given by some responsible person who signs an undertaking in the court's book. Where such an undertaking is not given, the appointment is conditional, taking effect only upon his giving security, and any disposition of the mortgaged assets pending completion of the security is not a contempt of court⁹.

If the receiver is appointed with power to take possession but the order does not direct security to be given, the appointment takes effect on the making of the order¹⁰. Where a receiver is appointed until judgment or further order and is continued after judgment, he must give further security¹¹.

Premiums paid by a receiver to a guarantee society for joining in his security are allowed in his accounts¹².

REMEDIES ON APPLICATION TO THE COURT/(B) Appointment of Receiver by the Court/1365. Official receiver or liquidator as receiver.

1365. Official receiver or liquidator as receiver.

Where application is made to the court to appoint a receiver¹ on behalf of the debenture² holders or other creditors³ of a company which is being wound up by the court, the official receiver⁴ may be appointed⁵. Although the debenture holders cannot insist upon their own nominee being appointed or retained in office as against the official receiver or liquidator, the court will not as a rule displace a receiver appointed by the debenture holders or mortgagees under their special powers, and, except under special circumstances, the Court of Appeal will not interfere when the court of first instance has refused to displace a receiver by a liquidator⁶.

The court sometimes appoints the liquidator as receiver in respect of some or all of the assets⁷; and he may be appointed in the place of a receiver appointed by the court⁸ where the assets are of an unusual character. In such a case, the official receiver may be appointed receiver of part of them, leaving the receiver originally appointed to receive the other assets⁹. The liquidator cannot obtain the discharge of the receiver unless with a view to his being appointed receiver in his place¹⁰.

In considering whether the same person shall act as receiver and liquidator, the court usually gives effect to the wishes of the parties most interested in the beneficial realisation of the company's assets¹¹.

A receiver may be appointed of land out of the jurisdiction¹. 1367. Receiver's statutory and other obligations.

A receiver or manager¹ appointed by the court is under the same statutory obligations as a receiver appointed under powers contained in an instrument². A receiver, other than an administrative receiver³, must:

- 608 (1) give notification of his appointment⁴;
- 609 (2) pay the preferential debts⁵; and
- 610 (3) deliver receivership accounts to the registrar of companies⁶.

An administrative receiver must comply with the statutory obligations in heads (1) and (2) above, and must also:

- 611 (a) give certain information as to his appointment⁷;
- 612 (b) require the submission of a statement as to the affairs of the company⁸;
- 613 (c) make a report as to specified matters⁹;
- 614 (d) furnish to a creditors' committee such information relating to the carrying out by him of his functions¹⁰; and
- 615 (e) issue a certificate of insolvency upon his forming the opinion that the relevant circumstances in which a company is deemed insolvent for the purposes of the provisions relating to VAT bad debt relief are satisfied¹¹.

An administrative receiver may be compelled to make good any default in filing, delivering or making any return, account or other document which he is by law required to file, deliver, make or give¹².

An administrative receiver is also under a non-statutory duty to keep and deliver to the company when required full accounts of his dealings with the company's property¹³. This duty is enforced by proceedings taken in the ordinary manner¹⁴.

1369. Status of receiver.

A receiver appointed by the court is an officer of the court; any interference with him as such receiver is a contempt of court¹. He is disqualified from purchasing the interests of the debenture holders on whose behalf he has been appointed².

The receiver must do his best to collect, get in and realise all the property subject to the security, except uncalled capital³. If the company is in liquidation, the liquidator⁴ is the proper person to make and enforce the calls, the proceeds of which he pays over to the receiver; but leave may be given to the receiver on giving a proper indemnity to take proceedings in the liquidator's name to enforce the calls⁵.

As to called up or uncalled share capital see PARA 1048. This power is, therefore, not conferred upon a receiver appointed by the court. 1370. Receiver's liability.

A receiver appointed by the court is personally liable on the contracts made by him as receiver¹, subject to his right to be indemnified out of the property subject to the debentures². He is not the agent of the company or of the court, or of anyone else³. A receiver may, however, by a term in the contract exclude personal liability to a person with whom he contracts⁴.

Where a receiver appointed by the court takes possession of leasehold property of the company, whether it is mortgaged by sub-demise to the trustees for debenture holders or is subject to an equitable mortgage, he is not liable for rent to the landlord⁵; and the same rule applies to chattels which have been hired by the company⁶. Even if the receiver has, by court order, sold goods upon which the landlord might have distrained, the court will not order him to pay the landlord out of the proceeds⁷, nor, in similar circumstances, will an order be made for payment of rates in default of recovery by distress⁸.

A receiver appointed by the court should not apply to the court for directions unless the circumstances are exceptional; as a rule, applications should be made by the claimant¹.

The question what proceedings a receiver should be allowed to take or continue at the expense of the company's assets is one solely for the discretion of the court, and debenture holders may not prevent a receiver from continuing a claim by the company against themselves in another capacity².

(C) APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER AND MANAGER BY THE COURT

1372. When a receiver and manager will be appointed.

Where a company on whose assets debentures¹ are charged is a going concern, the court will, at the instance of the debenture holders, appoint not merely a receiver, but a receiver and manager², provided that the company is carrying on a business which is included in the charge and which it is advisable to continue in the interests of the debenture holders for the more beneficial realisation of their security. The court will appoint a receiver and manager even where the charge does not in terms include the goodwill if it includes all the company's property or contains other words showing an intention to include the business³. If the debenture, as created, was a floating charge⁴ comprising the whole, or substantially the whole, of the company's property⁵, so that any receiver appointed under it will be an administrative receiver⁶, then, provided that there is nothing inconsistent in any of the provisions of that debenture, such receiver will have power to carry on the business of the company, and will therefore be a manager⁷. Otherwise, to justify the appointment the company's goodwill must be charged, expressly or by implication⁸. In the case, however, of a company incorporated for purposes of a public nature, and having statutory powers and duties, whether incorporated by a special Act or by charter, or under the Companies Acts, a holder of debentures or debenture stock cannot obtain the appointment of a manager⁹, but an order may be made appointing a receiver of the tolls or other money receivable by the company and charged by the debenture or debenture stock¹⁰.

A special case must be made out for the appointment of a manager by the affidavit supporting the application, and a manager is appointed only for a limited period (usually three months); and any extension of time required must be applied for before the period expires¹¹. A receiver and manager will not be allowed the expenses of management incurred after the expiration of the period of his appointment¹². Where no business is being carried on, or it is not in the interests of the debenture holders to continue it, a receiver only is appointed.

Jeopardy justifies the appointment of a manager of the company's business if there is a probability of a sale¹³.

1373. Effect of appointment on current contracts.

The appointment by the court of a receiver and manager operates as a dismissal of the company's employees¹; on his appointment they do not become his employees². An administrative receiver³ is, however, personally liable on any contract of employment adopted by him in the carrying out of his functions as such administrative receiver, but only to the extent of any qualifying liability⁴, although he is not to be taken to have adopted a contract of employment by reason of anything done or omitted to be done within 14 days after his appointment⁵.

It is the duty of a receiver and manager to complete contracts entered into by the company prior to his appointment if the completion of the contracts will assist in the preservation of the goodwill⁶, but not otherwise⁷. When a receiver and manager has partly performed a continuing contract for the sale of goods between the company and another person and fails to perform the rest of the contract, that other person may set off the damages for breach of the contract against a claim for the purchase money for goods already supplied⁸.

1374. Prior lien securities.

The court sometimes empowers a receiver and manager to borrow money for the purpose of carrying on the company's business or preserving its property, and to secure it by creating a charge having priority to the charge created by the debentures¹. Unless all the parties interested are before the court, liberty to raise money by a charge having priority over the debentures in order to preserve property in the receiver's possession is granted only where special urgency is shown². It will not be granted to enable a receiver and manager to complete a contract made prior to his appointment unless completion will assist in the preservation of the goodwill³. Where a receiver is authorised to borrow generally up to a fixed amount, and he has borrowed a part of the amount and repaid it, his original borrowing power is not diminished⁴.

1375. Right of indemnity.

Where orders are made in order to preserve the company's property and carry on the business, giving the receiver liberty to borrow in priority to the debentures, and he borrows the money from the claimant or other parties to the proceedings, and the assets when sold are insufficient to satisfy both the prior lien charges and the receiver's costs and expenses, including remuneration, the costs and expenses have priority over the prior lien charges unless the agreement for loan expressly or impliedly provides otherwise. It is doubtful whether the same rule applies where a stranger makes the advance; and the order ought to state whether the charge to be given by the receiver is to be subject to or free from his right to indemnity¹.

Expenses and liabilities incurred in good faith by a manager in the ordinary course of business are prima facie properly incurred and within the rules as to indemnity; and where he is authorised to borrow a sum not exceeding a certain limit for the general purposes of the business, the effect is to provide, at the expense of the parties interested, a special fund out of which the manager may indemnify himself. He is not, however, entitled without any further authority to incur expenses and liabilities to an unlimited extent, and to require them to be met out of the assets, since, if he finds that the fund provided by the court is not sufficient, his duty is to cause the matter to be brought before the court, so that it may increase the fund or give him leave to incur further expenses and liabilities. If he incurs expenses and liabilities exceeding the limit without such an application, he is not entitled to be indemnified against them unless he can justify it by showing special circumstances. It is not enough to show that the expenses or liabilities were incurred in good faith and in the ordinary course of business².

Where debts are properly incurred by a receiver and manager appointed by the court in carrying on the company's business, the court will see that those debts are satisfied either by the receiver himself or, in the case of his bankruptcy, or if for any other reason it is deemed advisable to do so, by payment direct to the creditors out of the funds in court available for the purpose³. Where the receiver and manager has incurred liabilities and is entitled to an indemnity for them out of the estate, but his cash account is deficient, the creditors may claim through him only to the extent of his right of indemnity against the estate (that is, the net amount of the indemnity after deducting the deficiency)⁴.

1376. Effect of possession for the purposes of the receivership.

Where the court's order appointing the receiver does not direct him to take possession, there is no change of occupation¹; but there may be a change of occupation where the company is directed to deliver possession to the receiver². Where the order appointing a receiver (other than an administrative receiver³ where the position is different⁴), does not direct him to take possession, or directs him to take possession only so far as necessary for the purposes of the receivership, the receiver is not entitled to require a supply of electricity⁵ or gas⁶ and is not protected from liability to pay arrears⁷; and in such a case the supply of electricity⁸ or gas⁹ may be cut off, unless the receiver pays arrears owing by the company¹⁰.

(D) APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR BY THE COURT

1377. Administration order made on application to court.

An application to the court¹ for an order appointing a person as administrator in respect of a company (an 'administration order')² may be made by specified persons³; and the court may make such an order, whether or not it is satisfied that the company is or is likely to become unable to pay its debts, if the administration application is made by the holder of a qualifying floating charge in respect of the company's property⁴.

However, the court is not obliged to make an administration order when one is applied for: it may also dismiss the application, adjourn the hearing or make other orders at its discretion⁵; and, where there is an administrative receiver⁶ of a company, the court must dismiss an administration application in respect of the company unless: (1) the person by or on behalf of whom the receiver was appointed consents to the making of the administration order⁷; (2) the court thinks that the security by virtue of which the receiver was appointed would be liable to be released or discharged if an administration order were made⁸; (3) the court thinks that the security by virtue of which the receiver was appointed would be avoided if an administration order were made⁹; or (4) the court thinks that the security by virtue of which the receiver was appointed would be challengeable¹⁰.

Where debentures¹ or debenture stock² are secured by a trust deed³ and the security has become enforceable, the court will, in a claim for that purpose, make an order for administration by the court of the trusts of the deed and grant the ordinary relief given in a claim for enforcing debentures. In such a case, the right of a debenture holder to begin a claim to enforce the debentures, by foreclosure or sale, may be qualified by the trust deed or conditions⁴.

Where the objects for which the money was raised by the issue of debentures cannot be carried into effect and part of it remains in the hands of the trustees, the court will, on the application even of a minority of the debenture holders, order the unspent portion to be distributed among the debenture holders after payment of expenses of saving and realising the property charged and costs⁵.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(v) Remedies for enforcing Securities/B. REMEDIES ON APPLICATION TO THE COURT/(E) Foreclosure or Sale/1379. Foreclosure.

1379. Foreclosure.

Foreclosure may be obtained in a claim or in proceedings¹. Where there is a trust deed² which does not contain a legal mortgage, the claim should be for a declaration of a charge, execution of the trusts, an account and enforcement of the charge by sale. Where there is no trust deed, foreclosure may be ordered where all the debenture holders are before the court and concur³; but foreclosure cannot be ordered in the absence of any one debenture holder⁴.

The judgment should give liberty to the defendant company, at any time before foreclosure absolute, to apply to the judge in chambers for payment and transfer to the claimant, on account of the money due to him, of any money or securities in court to the credit of the claim or in the hands of the receiver⁵.

An order for sale may also be obtained in foreclosure proceedings but, as a general rule, it is not made until after judgment has been obtained in the claim and notice has been given to all the debenture holders by circular, letter or advertisement. This rule does not apply where the claim is not a representative one⁶. Where the order is asked for on motion for judgment on admissions in the pleadings, an affidavit of the facts is required⁷. In such a case, an immediate sale will be ordered where the property is in jeopardy; but, unless all the subsequent debenture holders are parties, the order will be for sale with the approbation of the judge so that the absent parties may be brought in on the application to approve the conditional contract for sale⁸.

Where an order is made for the sale of the property charged by the debentures, the sale must generally be carried out under the directions of the court; and the purchase money will normally be ordered to be paid into court to the credit of the claim. The court may, however, direct a sale to be carried out by laying proposals before the judge in chambers for his sanction, or by proceedings altogether out of court¹.

The judge will normally require to be satisfied by evidence that all the persons interested in the property to be sold are before the court or are bound by the order for sale². Where an order for sale has been made, the court may authorise the trustees to sell where a majority of the holders of the debentures approve, if the trustees are acting in good faith and no injustice will be done to the minority³.

A sale will not be ordered in the case of a company incorporated for purposes of a public nature and having statutory powers and duties⁴.

1 See generally CPR 40.16; Practice Direction--1. Court's Powers in Relation to Land. 2. Conveyancing Counsel of the Court PD 40D para 2; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1215. An order for sale out of court generally requires the reserved bidding and the auctioneer's remuneration to be fixed by the master, and the purchase money to be paid directly into court. Where the master has by inadvertence inserted a lower figure than that fixed by the judge, there is nothing to compel the court to certify the highest bidder to be the purchaser when his bid is not as high as the reserve fixed by the judge: Re Joseph Clayton Ltd [1920] 1 Ch 257.

2 Where a contract for the sale of property is made subject to the approval of the court, that approval must be obtained before the date fixed for completion: Re Sandwell Park Colliery Co [1929] 1 Ch 277. The receiver should apply for leave to employ an agent for the sale; if he fails to do so, the agent is not entitled to any commission, though the court has a discretion to allow what seems equitable: Re National Flying Services Ltd, Cousins v National Flying Services Ltd [1936] Ch 271.

(F) PRACTICE IN DEBENTURE HOLDERS' CLAIMS

1381. Beginning a claim by debenture holders.

When a winding-up order has been made or a provisional liquidator has been appointed, no proceedings may be proceeded with or commenced against the company or its property except with the permission of the court, and subject to such terms as the court may impose¹. In either case, however, permission will almost invariably be given as a matter of course to a claim by debenture holders.

REMEDIES ON APPLICATION TO THE COURT/(F) Practice in Debenture Holders' Claims/1382. Parties.

1382. Parties.

Usually the claimant is a debenture¹ holder, proceeding on behalf of himself and all other debenture holders of the class to which he belongs²; and the defendants are the company, and any other incumbrancers on the same property, as in the case of proceedings to enforce ordinary mortgages³.

If there is a trust deed securing the debentures⁴, the trustees must also be made parties to the claim⁵; and the relief claimed must include a claim that the trusts of the deed be carried into execution under the direction of the court.

In a foreclosure claim by the holder of a mortgage of specific assets of a company which has subsequently given a floating charge⁶ by debentures on all its assets, the debenture holders should be made defendants, even when the principal money secured to them is not yet payable⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'debenture' see PARAS 1299, 1309.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(v) Remedies for enforcing Securities/B. REMEDIES ON APPLICATION TO THE COURT/(F) Practice in Debenture Holders' Claims/1383. Claim by representative.

1383. Claim by representative.

A claimant proceeding on behalf of himself and other debenture¹ holders cannot compromise or give up any of the rights of those he represents without the permission of the court². If, after judgment, he has been paid off, and there is evidence that no other debentures have been issued, all further proceedings in the claim will be stayed³. If the claimant becomes bankrupt and a trustee is appointed, his estate vests in his trustee in bankruptcy, and the claim will be stayed unless his trustee continues it⁴. If any debenture holder objects to being represented by the claimant or any defendant appointed to represent his class, he may apply in the claim to be added as a defendant, but at his own risk as to costs⁵.

Where a debenture holder is sued in a representative capacity, an order may sometimes be obtained authorising him to defend in that capacity⁶.

Trustees represent their beneficiaries⁷. Where foreclosure is sought and there are no trustees, the debenture holders who are subsequent incumbrancers must all be made parties⁸. It is not sufficient to make some of them parties as representing the whole⁹. The court may, however, direct a sale before all the persons interested are ascertained¹⁰.

The court may give the conduct of the claim to such person as it thinks fit¹¹. The conduct of the claim may be taken away from the claimant where he has an interest conflicting with the interests of the other debenture holders, as, for example, when he is or may be liable to the company; in such a case the court will give leave to add an independent debenture holder as defendant and transfer the conduct of the claim to him¹².

Often, on the hearing of an application for the appointment of a receiver, all the parties to the claim attend and agree to treat the hearing as the trial of the issues, and a judgment by consent is then taken; but, if this is not done, a claim form should be served, and, if no defence is served, or if the parties agree upon the form of the judgment, the claim may then be disposed of¹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(22) BORROWING AND SECURING MONEY/(v) Remedies for enforcing Securities/B. REMEDIES ON APPLICATION TO THE COURT/(F) Practice in Debenture Holders' Claims/1385. Form of judgment.

1385. Form of judgment.

On the trial of a debenture¹ holders' claim, the court sometimes declares that the debenture holders are entitled to a charge². A declaration of charge will be omitted from the judgment if there are debenture holders, other than those of the class which the claimant represents, who are not parties to the proceedings³, or if there is a question of priorities to be decided⁴. There is no power to make the declaration in chambers⁵.

If, in a representative claim by a debenture holder, a personal judgment against the company is asked for in order to reach property not charged, judgment cannot be given for the claimant for the whole amount secured by the debentures; but the court may declare that the debenture holders are entitled to stand in the position of judgment creditors and appoint a receiver of the uncharged property⁶.

The usual form of judgment in a debenture holders' claim directs an account of what is due to the debenture holders, an inquiry of what the property charged consists, an inquiry what other incumbrances affect the property and, if a receiver is appointed and there are preferential payments to be made, an inquiry whether there are any and what preferential debts⁷.

Special inquiries are sometimes ordered, for example, as to determining priorities between claims of debenture holders. Under an inquiry directed by the judgment in a representative claim as to the property charged by the debentures, the master may certify what uncalled capital, if uncalled capital is subject to the security, is due from the several shareholders, notwithstanding that no calls may actually be made in such a claim⁸; and, where the claimant is himself a shareholder and is found indebted in a sum of uncalled capital, he, being a party to the claim, is bound by that finding, unless it is varied by the judge⁹.

However, when he was the winding-up judge, Vaughan Williams J would not make such a declaration in a short cause unless the company by its liquidator appeared and consented (see Marwick v Lord Thurlow). It is not the practice to insert a declaration in a judgment made by consent on an application which is treated as the trial of the claim; and the usual judgment in such a case does not estop the company or its liquidator from establishing the invalidity of any of the debentures: Re Gregory Love & Co [1916] 1 Ch 203 at 209. Even where debentures¹ do not rank pari passu and, in the event, nothing is payable in respect of his debentures, the claimant is entitled to the costs of the claim except such, if any, as are incurred solely in supporting his own security².

As a general rule, the claimant in a representative claim is entitled to costs only on the standard basis³; but, where the assets are insufficient for the payment of the debentures in full, he is entitled to costs on the indemnity basis⁴. If he is unable to pay the difference between indemnity and standard basis costs, and property has been recovered or preserved more than enough to pay the debenture holders, the solicitor is entitled to a charging order for the difference on so much of the property as belongs to the debenture holders⁵.

Trustees of a debenture trust deed⁶ are entitled to be paid their costs before the funds are distributed among the debenture holders, even when they and the company appear by the same solicitor⁷. The defendant company is not entitled to costs unless the whole claim fails, nor are second debenture holders who are made defendants; both must look to the surplus⁸.

For the purposes of Part 23 of the Companies Act 2006¹, which restricts distributions, 'distribution' means every description of distribution of a company's² assets to its members³, whether in cash or otherwise, subject to the following exceptions⁴.

The following are not distributions for the purposes of that Part⁵:

- 622 (1) an issue of shares⁶ as fully or partly paid bonus shares⁷;
- 623 (2) the reduction of share capital either by extinguishing or reducing the liability of any of the members on any of the company's shares in respect of share capital not paid up⁸, or by repaying paid-up share capital⁹;

1389 Meaning of 'distribution'

NOTE 4--Progress Property, cited, reported at [2010] 1 BCLC 1, [2009] Bus LR 1544.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(23) DISTRIBUTIONS OF PROFITS AND ASSETS TO THE MEMBERS/(i) Limits of Company's Power of Distribution/1390. Restriction on distributions by company other than out of available profits.

1390. Restriction on distributions by company other than out of available profits.

A company¹ may only make a distribution² out of profits³ available for the purpose⁴. A company's profits available for distribution are its accumulated, realised profits⁵, so far as not previously utilised by distribution or capitalisation⁶, less its accumulated, realised losses⁷, so far as not previously written off in a reduction or reorganisation of capital duly made⁸, and subject to special provisions⁹ for investment and other companies¹⁰.

A company must not apply an unrealised profit in paying up debentures¹¹ or any amounts unpaid on its issued shares¹².

Where the directors¹³ of a company are, after making all reasonable inquiries, unable to determine whether a particular profit made before the relevant date¹⁴ is realised or unrealised, they may treat the profit as realised¹⁵; and where they are, after making all reasonable inquiries, unable to determine whether a particular loss made before the relevant date is realised or unrealised, they may treat the loss as unrealised¹⁶.

2 As to the meaning of 'distribution' see PARA 1389.

3 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 23 (ss 829-853) (see the text and notes 1-2, 4-16; and PARAS 1389, 1391 et seq), references to profit or losses of any description are to profits or losses of that description made at any time, and, except where the context otherwise requires, are to profits or losses of a revenue or capital character: s 853(1), (2).

4 Companies Act 2006 s 830(1).

5 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 23, references to 'realised profits' and 'realised losses', in relation to a company's accounts, are to such profits or losses of the company as fall to be treated as realised in accordance with principles generally accepted at the time when the accounts are prepared, with respect to the determination for accounting purposes of realised profits or losses: s 853(4). Section 853(4) is without prejudice to (1) the construction of any other expression (where appropriate) by reference to accepted accounting principles or practice; or (2) any specific provision for the treatment of profits or losses of any description as realised: s 853(5). As to the circumstances in which a reserve arising from the reduction of capital may be treated as a realisable profit for these purposes see PARA 1196.

6 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 23, 'capitalisation', in relation to a company's profits, means any of the following operations (whenever carried out): (1) applying the profits in wholly or partly paying up unissued shares in the company to be allotted to members of the company as fully or partly paid bonus shares; or (2) transferring the profits to capital redemption reserve: s 853(3). Restriction on distribution of assets by public companies.

1393. Restriction on distribution of assets by public companies.

Subject to special provisions¹ for investment and other companies², a public company³ may only make a distribution⁴:

- 628 (1) if the amount of its net assets⁵ is not less than the aggregate of its called-up share capital⁶ and undistributable reserves⁷; and
- 629 (2) if, and to the extent that, the distribution does not reduce the amount of those assets to less than that aggregate⁸.

A public company must not include any uncalled share capital⁹ as an asset in any accounts relevant for the purposes of these provisions¹⁰.

3 As to the meaning of 'public company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 102.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 831(1). As to the meaning of 'distribution' see PARA 1389.

5 For this purpose, a company's 'net assets' means the aggregate of the company's assets less the aggregate of its liabilities: Companies Act 2006 s 831(2). 'Liabilities' here includes (1) where the relevant accounts are Companies Act accounts, provisions of a kind specified for these purposes by regulations under s 396 (see PARA 728); (2) where the relevant accounts are IAS accounts, provisions of any kind: s 831(3). As to the meaning of 'Companies Act accounts' see PARAS 717, 776; and as to the meaning of 'IAS accounts' see PARAS 717, 776.

In relation to companies other than those which are subject to the small companies regime under Pt 15 (ss 380-474) (see PARA 693 et seq), the specified provisions for the purposes of s 831(3)(a) (see head (1) above) are (a) provisions within the Large and Medium-sized Companies and Groups (Accounts and Reports) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/410, Sch 9 para 2 (ie any amount retained as reasonably necessary for the purpose of providing for any liability the nature of which is clearly defined and which is either likely to be incurred, or certain to be incurred but uncertain as to amount or as to the date on which it will arise: see Sch 9 para 2); and (b) in the case of an insurance company, any amount included under liabilities items Ba (fund for future appropriations), C (technical provisions) and D (technical provisions for linked liabilities) in a balance sheet drawn up in accordance with Sch 3 (see PARA 701): regs 2(4), 12(c), Sch 9 para 5.

6 As to the meaning of 'called-up share capital' see PARA 1048.

7 Companies Act 2006 s 831(2)(a). A company's undistributable reserves are (1) its share premium account; (2) its capital redemption reserve; (3) the amount by which its accumulated, unrealised profits (so far as not previously utilised by capitalisation) exceed its accumulated, unrealised losses (so far as not previously written off in a reduction or reorganisation of capital duly made); (4) any other reserve that the company is prohibited from distributing (a) by any enactment (other than one contained in the Companies Act 2006 Pt 23 (ss 829-853)); or (b) by its articles: s 831(4). The reference in s 831(4)(c) (see head (3) above) to capitalisation does not include a transfer of profits of the company to its capital redemption reserve: s 831(4). As to the meaning of 'share premium account' see PARA 1146; as to the meaning of 'capital redemption reserve' see PARA 1236; as to the meanings of 'profit' and 'loss' see PARA 1390 note 3; as to the meaning of 'capitalisation' generally for the purposes of Pt 23 see PARA 1390 note 6; as to the meaning of 'enactment' see PARA 17 note 2; and as to the meaning of 'articles' under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 228 note 2.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 831(2)(b). No reserve apparently thrown up by any alteration in the accounts due to fluctuations in the rate of exchange required to convert share capital expressed in any currency other than the currency in which the accounts are drawn is a reserve capable of distribution or capitalisation: Re Scandinavian Bank Group plc [1988] Ch 87 at 107, [1987] 2 All ER 70 at 79 per Harman J.

9 As to the meaning of 'uncalled share capital' see PARA 1048 note 11.

10 Companies Act 2006 s 831(5).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(23) DISTRIBUTIONS OF PROFITS AND ASSETS TO THE MEMBERS/(i) Limits of Company's Power of Distribution/1394. Distributions by investment companies out of accumulated revenue profits.

1394. Distributions by investment companies out of accumulated revenue profits.

An investment company¹ may make a distribution² out of its accumulated, realised revenue profits³ if the following conditions are met⁴. It may make such a distribution only:

- 630 (1) if, and to the extent that, its accumulated, realised revenue profits, so far as not previously utilised by a distribution or capitalisation⁵, exceed its accumulated revenue losses⁶, whether realised⁷ or unrealised, so far as not previously written off in a reduction or reorganisation of capital duly made⁸;
- 631 (2) if the amount of its assets is at least equal to one and a half times the aggregate of its liabilities to creditors⁹, and if, and to the extent that, the distribution does not reduce that amount to less than one and a half times that aggregate¹⁰.

The company must not include any uncalled share capital¹¹ as an asset in any accounts relevant for the purposes of these provisions¹².

The following conditions must also be met¹³:

- 632 (a) the company's shares¹⁴ must be listed on a recognised UK investment exchange¹⁵;
- 633 (b) during the relevant period¹⁶ it must not have distributed any capital profits otherwise than by way of the redemption or purchase of any of the company's own shares¹⁷ or have applied any unrealised profits or any capital profits, realised or unrealised, in paying up debentures¹⁸ or amounts unpaid on its issued shares¹⁹;
- 634 (c) it must have given notice to the registrar²⁰ of intention to carry on business as an investment company²¹ either before the beginning of the relevant period, or as soon as reasonably practicable after the date of its incorporation²².

For these purposes an 'investment company' means a public company that has given notice (which has not been revoked) to the registrar of its intention to carry on business as an investment company, and has since the date of that notice complied with the following requirements²³:

- 635 (i) that the business of the company consists of investing its funds mainly in securities, with the aim of spreading investment risk and giving members²⁴ of the company the benefit of the results of the management of its funds²⁵;
- 636 (ii) that the statutory condition²⁶ is met as regards holdings in other companies²⁷, namely that that none of the company's holdings in companies²⁸, other than those that are for the time being investment companies, represents more than 15 per cent by value of the company's investments²⁹;
- 637 (iii) that distribution of the company's capital profits is prohibited by its articles³⁰;
- 638 (iv) that the company has not retained, otherwise than in compliance with the statutory provisions restricting distributions³¹, in respect of any accounting reference period more than 15 per cent of the income it derives from securities³².

Such notice to the registrar may be revoked at any time by the company on giving notice to the registrar that it no longer wishes to be an investment company within the meaning of these provisions³³; and on giving such a notice, the company ceases to be such a company³⁴.

The Secretary of State³⁵ may by regulations³⁶ extend the above provisions, with or without modifications, to other companies whose principal business consists of investing their funds in securities, land or other assets with the aim of spreading investment risk and giving their members the benefit of the results of the management of the assets³⁷.

9 For this purpose a company's liabilities to creditors include (1) in the case of Companies Act accounts, provisions of a kind specified for these purposes by regulations under the Companies Act 2006 s 396 (see PARA 728); (2) in the case of IAS accounts, provisions for liabilities to creditors: s 832(4). As to the meaning of 'Companies Act accounts' see PARAS 717, 776; and as to the meaning of 'IAS accounts' see PARAS 717, 776.

In relation to companies other than those which are subject to the small companies regime under Pt 15 (ss 380-474) (see PARA 693 et seq), the specified provisions for the purposes of s 832(4)(a) (see head (1) above) are provisions within the Large and Medium-sized Companies and Groups (Accounts and Reports) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/410, Sch 9 para 2 (ie any amount retained as reasonably necessary for the purpose of providing for any liability the nature of which is clearly defined and which is either likely to be incurred, or certain to be incurred but uncertain as to amount or as to the date on which it will arise: see Sch 9 para 2): regs 2(4), 12(c), Sch 9 para 6.

14 As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1042.

15 Companies Act 2006 s 832(5)(a). For these purposes, 'recognised UK investment exchange' means a recognised investment exchange within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII (ss 285-313) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 684), other than an overseas investment exchange within the meaning of that Part (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 710): Companies Act 2006 s 832(6)(a).

16 For these purposes, the 'relevant period' is the period beginning with (1) the first day of the accounting reference period immediately preceding that in which the proposed distribution is to be made; or (2) where the distribution is to be made in the company's first accounting reference period, the first day of that period, and ending with the date of the distribution: Companies Act 2006 s 832(6)(b).

17 In accordance with the Companies Act 2006 Pt 18 Ch 3 (ss 684-689) (see PARA 1229 et seq) or Pt 18 Ch 4 (ss 690-708) (see PARA 1234 et seq).

27 Companies Act 2006 s 833(2)(b).

28 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 834, 'company' and 'shares' are to be construed in accordance with the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992 s 99 (unit trust schemes: see CAPITAL GAINS TAXATION vol 5(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 257) and s 288 (interpretation: see CAPITAL GAINS TAXATION vol 5(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 173): Companies Act 2006 s 834(5).

29 Companies Act 2006 s 834(1). For this purpose, holdings in companies that are members of a group (whether or not including the investing company), and are not for the time being investment companies, are treated as holdings in a single company (s 834(2)(a)); and where the investing company is a member of a group, money owed to it by another member of the group is treated as a security of the latter held by the investing company, and is accordingly treated as, or as part of, the holding of the investing company in the company owing the money (s 834(2)(b)). 'Group' means a company and all companies that are its 51% subsidiaries (within the meaning of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 838: see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 952): Companies Act 2006 s 834(5).

The condition in s 834(1) does not apply (1) to a holding in a company acquired before 6 April 1965 that on that date represented not more than 25% by value of the investing company's investments; or (2) to a holding in a company that, when it was acquired, represented not more than 15% by value of the investing company's investments, so long as no addition is made to the holding: s 834(3). For the purposes of s 834(3): (a) 'holding' means the shares or securities (whether or one class or more than one class) held in any one company; (b) an addition is made to a holding whenever the investing company acquires shares or securities of that one company, otherwise than by being allotted shares or securities without becoming liable to give any consideration, and if an addition is made to a holding that holding is acquired when the addition or latest addition is made to the holding; and (c) where in connection with a scheme of reconstruction a company issues shares or securities to persons holding shares or securities in a second company in respect of and in proportion to (or as nearly as may be in proportion to) their holdings in the second company, without those persons becoming liable to give any consideration, a holding of the shares or securities in the second company and a corresponding holding of the shares or securities so issued are to be regarded as the same holding: s 834(4). 'Scheme of reconstruction' has the same meaning as in the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992 s 136 (see CAPITAL GAINS TAXATION vol 5(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 329): Companies Act 2006 s 834(5).

30 Companies Act 2006 s 833(2)(c). As to the meaning of 'articles' under the Companies Acts see PARA 228 note 2. The Companies Act 2006 s 833(2)(c) does not, however, require an investment company to be prohibited by its articles from redeeming or purchasing its own shares in accordance with Pt 18 Ch 3 (see PARA 1229 et seq) or Pt 18 Ch 4 (see PARA 1234 et seq) out of its capital profits: s 833(3).

- 640 (2) provisions of the specified⁸ kinds⁹;
- 641 (3) share capital and reserves, including undistributable reserves¹⁰.

The relevant accounts are the company's last annual accounts¹¹, except that¹²:

- 642 (a) where the distribution would be found to contravene the statutory provisions restricting distributions by reference to the company's last annual accounts, it may be justified by reference to interim accounts¹³ that enable a reasonable judgment to be made as to the amounts of the items mentioned in heads (1) to (3) above¹⁴; and
- 643 (b) where the distribution is proposed to be declared during the company's first accounting reference period¹⁵, or before any accounts have been circulated in respect of that period, it may be justified by reference to initial accounts¹⁶ that enable a reasonable judgment to be made as to the amounts of the above-mentioned items¹⁷.

The statutory requirements as regards the company's last annual accounts¹⁸, interim accounts¹⁹ and initial accounts²⁰ must be complied with, as and where applicable²¹; and if any such applicable requirement is not complied with, the accounts may not be relied on for these purposes and the distribution is accordingly treated as contravening the statutory provisions restricting distributions²².

1396. Requirements where last annual accounts used.

If the company's¹ last annual accounts² constitute the only accounts relevant for justifying the distribution³, the accounts must have been properly prepared in accordance with the Companies Act 2006⁴, or have been so prepared subject only to matters that are not material for determining⁵ whether the distribution would contravene the statutory provisions⁶ restricting distributions⁷.

Unless the company is exempt from audit⁸ and the directors⁹ take advantage of that exemption, the auditor¹⁰ must have made his report¹¹ on the accounts¹². If that report was qualified¹³, the auditor must have stated in writing, either at the time of his report or subsequently¹⁴, whether in his opinion the matters in respect of which his report is qualified are material for determining whether a distribution would contravene the statutory restrictions on distributions¹⁵; and a copy of that statement must, in the case of a private company¹⁶, have been circulated to members¹⁷, or, in the case of a public company¹⁸, have been laid before the company in general meeting¹⁹. An auditor's statement is sufficient for the purposes of a distribution if it relates to distributions of a description that includes the distribution in question, even if at the time of the statement it had not been proposed²⁰.

1399. Application of provisions to successive distributions etc.

In determining whether a proposed distribution¹ may be made by a company² in a case where one or more previous distributions have been made in pursuance of a determination made by reference to the same relevant accounts³, or relevant financial assistance⁴ has been given, or other relevant payments have been made, since those accounts were prepared, the statutory provisions restricting distributions⁵ apply as if the amount of the proposed distribution was increased by the amount of the previous distributions, financial assistance and other payments⁶. The financial assistance and other payments that are relevant for this purpose are⁷:

644 (1) financial assistance lawfully given by the company out of its distributable profits⁸;

645 (2) prohibited financial assistance given by the company⁹ in a case where the giving of that assistance reduces the company's net assets¹⁰ or increases its net liabilities¹¹;

- 646 (3) payments made by the company in respect of the purchase by it of shares¹² in the company, except a payment lawfully made otherwise than out of distributable profits¹³;
- 647 (4) payments of any specified description¹⁴ to be made out of distributable profits¹⁵.

For this purpose a company's liabilities include any amount retained as reasonably necessary for the purposes of providing for any liability the nature of which is clearly defined, and which is either likely to be incurred or certain to be incurred but uncertain as to amount or as to the date on which it will arise: s 840(5).

Treatment in relevant accounts of realised losses and profits and revaluation of fixed assets.

1400. Treatment in relevant accounts of realised losses and profits and revaluation of fixed assets.

The following provisions have effect for the purposes of the statutory provisions¹ restricting distributions². The following are treated as realised losses³:

- 648 (1) in the case of Companies Act accounts⁴, provisions of a kind specified for these purposes by regulations⁵, except revaluation provisions⁶;
- 649 (2) in the case of IAS accounts⁷, provisions of any kind, except revaluation provisions⁸.

Where on the revaluation of a fixed asset, an unrealised profit⁹ is shown to have been made, and on or after the revaluation, a sum is written off or retained for depreciation of that asset over a period, an amount equal to the amount by which that sum exceeds the sum which would have been so written off or retained for the depreciation of that asset over that period, if that profit had not been made, is treated as a realised profit¹⁰ made over that period¹¹. In determining¹² whether a company has made a profit or loss in respect of an asset where there is no record of the original cost of the asset, or where a record cannot be obtained without unreasonable expense or delay, its cost is taken to be the value ascribed to it in the earliest available record of its value made on or after its acquisition by the company¹³.

In relation to companies other than those which are subject to the small companies regime under the Companies Act 2006 Pt 15, the specified provisions for the purposes of s 841(2)(a) are: (1) provisions within the Large and Medium-sized Companies and Groups (Accounts and Reports) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/410, Sch 9 para 2 (ie any amount retained as reasonably necessary for the purpose of providing for any liability the nature of which is clearly defined and which is either likely to be incurred, or certain to be incurred but uncertain as to amount or as to the date on which it will arise: see Sch 9 para 2); and (2) in the case of an insurance company, any amount included under liabilities items Ba (fund for future appropriations), C (technical provisions) and D (technical provisions for linked liabilities) in a balance sheet drawn up in accordance with Sch 3 (see PARA 701): regs 2(4), 12(d), Sch 9 para 8 (reg 12(d), Sch 9 para 8 both added by SI 2009/1581). The Small Companies and Groups (Accounts and Directors' Report) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/409, reg 12(d), Sch 7 para 6, and the Large and Medium-sized Companies and Groups (Accounts and Reports) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/410, reg 12(d), Sch 9 para 8 apply in relation to financial years beginning on or after 6 April 2008 which have not ended before 1 October 2009 (ie before the date of coming into force of the Companies Act 2006 (Accounts, Reports and Audit) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1581: see reg 1(2)): see reg 1(4).

6 Companies Act 2006 s 841(2)(a). A 'revaluation provision' means a provision in respect of a diminution in value of a fixed asset appearing on a revaluation of all the fixed assets of the company, or of all of its fixed assets other than goodwill: s 841(3). For the purpose of s 841(2), (3) any consideration by the directors of the value at a particular time of a fixed asset is treated as a revaluation provided (1) the directors are satisfied that the aggregate value at that time of the fixed assets of the company that have not actually been revalued is not less than the aggregate amount at which they are then stated in the company's accounts; and (2) it is stated in a note to the accounts (a) that the directors have considered the value of some or all of the fixed assets of the company without actually revaluing them; (b) that they are satisfied that the aggregate value of those assets at the time of their consideration was not less than the aggregate amount at which they were then stated in the company's accounts; and (c) that accordingly, by virtue of this provision, amounts are stated in the accounts on the basis that a revaluation of fixed assets of the company is treated as having taken place at that time: s 841(4). For the purposes of Pt 23, 'fixed assets' means assets of a company which are intended for use on a continuing basis in the company's activities: s 853(1), (6). 1401. Treatment in accounts of realised profits and loss of long term insurance company business.

The following provisions have effect for the purposes of the statutory provisions restricting distributions¹ as they apply in relation to an authorised insurance company², other than an insurance special purpose vehicle³, carrying on long-term business⁴:

- 650 (1) an amount included in the relevant part of the company's balance sheet⁵ that represents a surplus in the fund or funds maintained by it in respect of its long-term business⁶, and that has not been allocated to policy holders or, as the case may be, carried forward unappropriated in accordance with asset identification rules made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000⁷, is treated as a realised profit⁸;
- 651 (2) a deficit in the fund or funds⁹ maintained by the company in respect of its long-term business is treated as a realised loss¹⁰.

Subject to heads (1) and (2) above, any profit or loss arising in the company's long-term business is to be left out of account¹¹.

1 Ie for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 23 (ss 829-853): see PARA 1389 et seq; the text and notes 2-11; and PARA 1402 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'authorised insurance company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 701 note 4.

3 For these purposes, 'insurance special purpose vehicle' means a special purpose vehicle within the meaning of European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/68 (OJ L323, 9.12.05, p 1) of 16 November 2005 on reinsurance and amending EEC Council Directive 73/239 (OJ L228, 16.8.73, p 3) and EEC Council Directive 92/49 (OJ L228, 11.8.92, p 1) as well as EC Council Directive 98/78 (OJ L330, 5.12.98, p 1) and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.02, p 1) (ie any undertaking, whether incorporated or not, other than an existing insurance or reinsurance undertaking, which assumes risks from insurance or reinsurance undertakings and which fully funds its exposure to such risks through the proceeds of a debt issuance or some other financing mechanism where the repayment rights of the providers of such debt or other financing mechanism are subordinated to the reinsurance obligations of such a vehicle: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/68 (OJ L323, 9.12.05, p 1) art 2.1(p)): Companies Act 2006 s 843(8) (added by SI 2007/3253).

4 Companies Act 2006 s 843(1) (amended by SI 2007/3253). For these purposes, 'long-term business' means business that consists of effecting or carrying out contracts of long-term insurance; but this definition must be read with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 84), any relevant order under s 22 and Sch 2 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARAS 84-85): Companies Act 2006 s 843(7).

5 For these purposes, the relevant part of the balance sheet is that part of the balance sheet that represents accumulated profit or loss: Companies Act 2006 s 843(3)(a). As to the meanings of 'profit' and 'loss' see PARA 1390 note 3; and as to the meaning of 'balance sheet' see PARA 715.

6 For these purposes, a surplus in the fund or funds maintained by the company in respect of its long-term business means an excess of the assets representing that fund or those funds over the liabilities of the company attributable to its long-term business, as shown by an actuarial investigation: Companies Act 2006 s 843(3)(b). An 'actuarial investigation' means an investigation made into the financial condition of an authorised insurance company in respect of its long-term business (1) carried out once in every period of 12 months in accordance with rules made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt X (ss 138-164) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 447 et seq); or (2) carried out in accordance with a requirement imposed under s 166 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 448), by an actuary appointed as actuary to the company: Companies Act 2006 s 843(6).

8 Companies Act 2006 s 843(2). As to the meaning of 'realised profit' see PARA 1390 note 5.

9 For this purpose a deficit in any such fund or funds means an excess of the liabilities of the company attributable to its long-term business over the assets representing that fund or those funds, as shown by an actuarial investigation: Companies Act 2006 s 843(4).

Treatment in accounts of company's development costs.

1402. Treatment in accounts of company's development costs.

Subject to the following exceptions, where development costs are shown or included as an asset in a company's¹ accounts, any amount shown or included in respect of those costs is treated²:

- 652 (1) in relation to distributions³ to be made out of profits⁴ available for the purpose⁵, as a realised loss⁶; and
- 653 (2) in relation to distributions by investment companies out of accumulated revenue profits⁷, as a realised revenue loss⁸.

This does not, however, apply to any part of that amount representing an unrealised profit made on revaluation of those costs⁹. Nor does it apply¹⁰ if:

- 654 (a) there are special circumstances in the company's case justifying the directors¹¹ in deciding that the amount there mentioned is not to be treated as so required¹²;

- 655 (b) it is stated in a note to the accounts¹³ that the amount is not to be so treated¹⁴; and
- 656 (c) the note explains the circumstances relied upon to justify the decision of the directors to that effect¹⁵.

1403. Saving for provision in articles operative before the commencement of the Companies Act 1980.

Where immediately before the relevant date¹ a company² was authorised by a provision of its articles³ to apply its unrealised profits⁴ in paying up in full or in part unissued shares⁵ to be allotted to members⁶ of the company as fully or partly paid bonus shares⁷, that provision continues, subject to any alteration of the articles, as authority for those profits to be so applied after that date⁸.

1 For this purpose, the relevant date is: (1) for companies registered in Great Britain, 22 December 1980; (2) for companies registered in Northern Ireland, 1 July 1983: Companies Act 2006 s 848(2).

(iii) Distributions in Kind

1404. Distributions in kind.

The following provisions apply for determining the amount of a distribution¹ consisting of or including, or treated as arising in consequence of, the sale, transfer or other disposition by a company² of a non-cash asset³ where at the time of the distribution the company has profits⁴ available for distribution⁵, and if the amount of the distribution were to be determined in accordance with these provisions, the company could make the distribution without contravening the statutory provisions⁶ restricting distributions⁷. The amount of the distribution, or the relevant part of it, is taken to be⁸:

- 657 (1) in a case where the amount or value of the consideration for the disposition is not less than the book value of the asset, zero⁹;
- 658 (2) in any other case, the amount by which the book value of the asset exceeds the amount or value of any consideration for the disposition¹⁰.

Where a company makes a distribution consisting of or including, or treated as arising in consequence of, the sale, transfer or other disposition by the company of a non-cash asset, and any part of the amount at which that asset is stated in the relevant accounts represents an unrealised profit¹¹, that profit is treated as a realised profit¹²:

- 659 (a) for the purpose of determining the lawfulness of the distribution¹³, whether before or after the distribution takes place¹⁴; and
- 660 (b) for the purpose of the application, in relation to anything done with a view to or in connection with the making of the distribution, of any provision of regulations¹⁵ under which only realised profits are to be included in or transferred to the profit and loss account¹⁶.

- 3 As to the meaning of 'non-cash asset' see PARA 564 note 6.
- 4 As to the meaning of 'profit' see PARA 1390 note 3.

5 For these purposes, the company's profits available for distribution are treated as increased by the amount (if any) by which the amount or value of any consideration for the disposition exceeds the book value of the asset: Companies Act 2006 s 845(3). 'Book value', in relation to an asset, means (1) the amount at which the asset is stated in the relevant accounts; or (2) where the asset is not stated in those accounts at any amount, zero: s 845(4).

(iv) Unlawful Distributions

1405. Consequences of unlawful distribution under statute.

Where a distribution¹, or part of one, made by a company² to one of its members³ is made in contravention of the statutory provisions restricting distributions⁴, then if at the time of the distribution the member knows or has reasonable grounds for believing that it is so made⁵, he is liable to repay it, or that part of it, as the case may be, to the company, or, in the case of a distribution made otherwise than in cash⁶, to pay the company a sum equal to the value of the distribution, or part, at that time⁷. This does not, however, apply in relation to financial assistance given by a company in contravention of the statutory prohibition⁸ or any payment made by a company in respect of the redemption or purchase by the company of shares⁹ in itself¹⁰; and the liability to repay is without prejudice to any obligation otherwise imposed on a member of a company to repay a distribution unlawfully made to him¹¹.

Liability of directors, auditors and shareholders where improper dividend is paid.

1407. Liability of directors, auditors and shareholders where improper dividend is paid.

Directors¹ and auditors² who are parties to the payment of an improper dividend are liable to claims for recovery, or, in the case of winding up, for misfeasance³; and the amount improperly paid may be recovered from them with interest⁴. Directors are accountable, because of their trustee-like responsibilities, for the full amount paid out to the shareholders and not just for the difference between the unlawful dividend and any dividend which could lawfully have been paid⁵. In an appropriate case, the payment of an improper dividend may justify the disqualification of a director⁶.

Where directors have paid improper dividends, shareholders who have received the dividend with knowledge that it was improper are bound to indemnify the directors against their liability in respect of the payment⁷. A shareholder who knows all the relevant facts and who has been paid an improper dividend cannot maintain a claim against the company and its directors to make the directors liable for paying such a dividend unless he has first returned the dividend to the company, although he may be ordered to repay that dividend on a counterclaim by the company⁸. Shareholders who receive an improperly-declared dividend with knowledge that it is improper hold the dividend on constructive trust for the company⁹. Improper dividends which are innocently received by shareholders, even if directors, cannot be recovered, at any rate where there is no winding up¹⁰.

(v) Declaration and Payment of Dividends

1408. Meaning of 'dividend'.

The ordinary meaning of 'dividend' is a share of profits, whether at a fixed rate or otherwise, allocated to the holders of shares in a company¹. The term is generally used with reference to trading or other companies², and to payments made to members of a company as such and not by way of remuneration for services³. Although it usually implies a share of profits periodically payable, it may also refer to such shares of profits as are divided only occasionally and are usually called 'bonuses' or 'bonus dividends'⁴. The terms 'preference dividend', 'preferential dividend', and 'cumulative preferential dividend' refer to shares having preferential rights⁵. An 'interim dividend' is a dividend declared at some date between ordinary general meetings⁶.

A voucher or written authority for payment to a shareholder of the amount of a dividend on his shares is usually described as a dividend warrant⁷.

1409. Right to dividends.

The general rights of shareholders with reference to dividends, and the manner in which they are to be declared and paid, are usually stated in the articles of association¹. The model articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006² contain provisions relating to dividends³, in particular with respect to the procedure for declaring dividends⁴ and manner of payment⁵.

1 As to a company's articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq. As to model articles of association prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006, and their application generally, see PARA 229. Different versions of model articles have been so prescribed for use by private companies limited by shares (see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 2, Sch 1), private companies limited by guarantee (see reg 3, Sch 2), and public companies (see reg 4, Sch 3). As to the meanings of 'company limited by guarantee', 'company limited by shares', 'limited company', 'private company' and 'public company' see PARA 102.

2 Ie the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229.

3 The Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, Sch 1 arts 30-35, Sch 3 arts 70-77 relate to dividends and other distributions. In particular, they give power to declare dividends, including interim dividends (see PARA 1414), for the payment of non-cash distributions (see PARA 1420), and for the payment of dividends interest free (see PARA 1415). Under the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, entitlement to a dividend or other distribution payable in respect of a share may be waived by giving the company notice in writing to that effect; but if the share has more than one holder, or more than one person is entitled to the share, whether by reason of the death or bankruptcy of one or more joint holders, or otherwise, the notice is not effective unless it is expressed to be given, and signed, by all the holders or persons otherwise entitled to the share: see Sch 1 art 35, Sch 3 art 77.

The default articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985 ('legacy articles'), ie the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, have not been revoked and may, in their amended form, continue to be used by companies after the commencement of the Companies Act 2006: see PARA 230. The Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, Schedule, Table A arts 102-108 (disapplied by Table C art 1 in relation to companies limited by guarantee and not having a share capital) relate to dividends.

1410. Provision for different amounts to be paid on shares.

If under the articles dividends are payable on shares, without qualifying words, this means without regard to the amount paid up on them¹, and it is not competent for a company to pay a dividend to shareholders in proportion to the amount paid up on the shares held by them². If so authorised by its articles³, a company⁴ may, however, pay a dividend in proportion to the amount paid up⁵ on each share⁶ where a larger amount is paid up on some shares than on others⁷.

Under the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, in relation to a public company, and except as otherwise provided by the articles or the rights attached to shares, all dividends must be (1) declared and paid according to the amounts paid up on the shares on which the dividend is paid; and (2) apportioned and paid proportionately to the amounts paid up on the shares during any portion or portions of the period in respect of which the dividend is paid. If, however, any share is issued on terms providing that it ranks for dividend as from a particular date, that share ranks for dividend accordingly: Sch 3 art 71(1), (2) For the purposes of calculating dividends, no account is to be taken of any amount which has been paid up on a share in advance of the due date for payment of that amount: Sch 3 art 71(3).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(23) DISTRIBUTIONS OF PROFITS AND ASSETS TO THE MEMBERS/(v) Declaration and Payment of Dividends/1411. Guarantee by vendor of business.

1411. Guarantee by vendor of business.

A guarantee given by the vendor on the sale of a business to a company guaranteeing the payment of dividends on its shares during a certain period is valid and enforceable¹. In such a case there is no implied contract on the company's part to carry on business² during the whole of the period, so as to disentitle it to enforce the guarantee if it discontinues; and, if there are several businesses, the discontinuance of one does not release the vendor³. In a proper case such a guarantee may be released by the company⁴. In a bona fide case payments under such a guarantee are not assets of the company which may be claimed by the creditors⁵, although it will be otherwise in the case of a guarantee fund furnished out of the purchase money payable to the vendor⁶. A guarantor of the dividends on preference shares is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the preference shareholders, but is not entitled to claim against the company as a creditor for sums paid under such a guarantee, and any provision to this effect in the guarantee is ultra vires the company⁷.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(23) DISTRIBUTIONS OF PROFITS AND ASSETS TO THE MEMBERS/(v) Declaration and Payment of Dividends/1412. Court's interference as to dividends.

1412. Court's interference as to dividends.

If the directors have fairly come to a conclusion as to what proportion of the profits available for distribution should be distributed as dividend, then prima facie the court will not interfere¹. The court will not compel directors to declare a dividend against their judgment², but, at the instance of an individual shareholder, it will restrain the payment of an improper dividend³. Thus payment of a dividend may be restrained if proper provision has not been made for expenses, which ought to be paid out of income⁴, or if the dividend is proposed to be paid out of any moneys not available for that purpose⁵.

Where, after properly investigating the company's financial position, the directors make an estimate of the available profits and declare a dividend on that basis, the court will not review the decision on the ground that their estimates were erroneous, if the view taken was one which reasonable persons might take⁶. Where, however, directors act without proper investigation or professional assistance, the burden lies on them to show that the payment was fairly made out of profits available for that purpose⁷. Therefore, if it would be evident on proper accounts that there were no profits available for distribution, the directors have no power to declare and pay it, and the shareholders' receipt of the dividend does not protect the directors; for they cannot bind the company by an act which is ultra vires⁸. The court will not interfere at the instance of an unsecured creditor⁹, or at the instance of a holder of debenture stock unless his security is presently enforceable¹⁰.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(23) DISTRIBUTIONS OF PROFITS AND ASSETS TO THE MEMBERS/(v) Declaration and Payment of Dividends/1413. Discretion as to reserve fund.

1413. Discretion as to reserve fund.

If the directors have power, as is usual, to set aside out of the profits a sum for or towards a reserve fund, their discretion cannot be questioned on the ground that it reduces the amount available for dividend, whether on ordinary or preference shares¹. If they have no such express power, the company has an implied power to the same effect; for there is no principle which compels a company while a going concern to divide the whole of its profits among the shareholders². The power may, however, be negated by the articles³. Subject to any provisions in the articles, the questions what portion of the profits available for distribution should be divided and what portion retained, are questions of internal management which the shareholders must decide for themselves⁴. The court cannot control or review their decision, and it makes no difference whether the undivided balance is retained to the credit of the profit and loss account, or carried to the credit of a reserve fund, or appropriated to any other use of the company, though a power to invest would not justify speculating in stocks and shares. The company⁵ may invest the undivided money on such securities as the directors, subject to the control of a general meeting, may select⁶. As a rule, a reserve fund formed out of profits retains its character of profits, and is capable of future division as such⁷. If the formation of a reserve fund is forbidden, the articles may be altered to authorise it⁸.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(23) DISTRIBUTIONS OF PROFITS AND ASSETS TO THE MEMBERS/(v) Declaration and Payment of Dividends/1414. Declaration of dividends.

1414. Declaration of dividends.

Before any dividend is declared, there must be profits in an amount necessary to sustain the dividend in existence in the company itself¹. By declaring a dividend, the directors effectively release funds due to the shareholders from the directors' power to retain those funds to pay creditors and carry on the business². A power to pay interim dividends³ is usually vested by the articles in the directors⁴. The directors may pay an interim dividend, if, after making proper inquiries and subject to any statutory constraints, the profits available for distribution will be sufficient⁵. In such a case the court will not interfere with the directors' discretion at the instance of a shareholder⁶. A directors' declaration of an interim dividend may be rescinded before payment has been made⁷.

Under the model articles, the company may by ordinary resolution declare a dividend in accordance with the respective rights of the members, but no dividends may exceed the amount recommended by the directors⁸.

A failure to declare dividends where profits are available, and there is an understanding between the members as to participation in the financial returns of the business, may be unfairly prejudicial conduct meriting a petition⁹.

Under the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, if the company's share capital is divided into different classes, no interim dividend may be paid on shares carrying deferred or non-preferred rights if, at the time of payment, any preferential dividend is in arrear: reg 2, Sch 1 art 30(5); reg 4, Sch 3 art 70(5). If the directors act in good faith, they do not incur any liability to the holders of shares conferring preferred rights for any loss they may suffer by the lawful payment of an interim dividend on shares with deferred or non-preferred rights: Sch 1 art 30(7); Sch 3 art 70(7).

1415. Payment of dividends.

Upon the declaration of a dividend for the payment of which no time is stipulated, the sums due for dividend become debts immediately due from the company to the shareholders¹, and the shareholders may sue the company for the dividend. Nevertheless, the relation of trustee and beneficiary is not created, and time immediately begins to run² under the Limitation Act 1980, the period of limitation being six years³. If, however, the articles contain the usual power of the directors to manage the company's business⁴, they normally specify, when recommending a final dividend, the date on which the dividend is to be paid⁵. In this case a shareholder has no right to enforce payment until the due date for payment arrives⁶.

The articles sometimes provide that amounts due from any member in respect of calls may be deducted from any dividends payable to him⁷; but, even in the absence of such a provision, calls and dividends may be set off⁸ before a winding up commences⁹.

In the absence of special provision to the contrary¹⁰, dividends must be paid in money¹¹ and not in shares or securities¹². The articles usually provide that dividends shall not bear interest against the company¹³.

In the articles, the 'distribution recipient' means, in respect of a share in respect of which a dividend or other sum is payable (1) the holder of the share; or (2) if the share has two or more joint holders, whichever of them is named first in the register of members; or (3) if the holder is no longer entitled to the share by reason of death or bankruptcy, or otherwise by operation of law, the transmittee: Sch 1 arts 1, 31(2); Sch 3 arts 1, 72(2). 7 In relation to a public company, if a share is subject to the company's lien, and the directors are entitled to issue a lien enforcement notice in respect of it, they may, under the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, instead of issuing a lien enforcement notice, deduct from any dividend or other sum payable in respect of the share any sum of money which is payable to the company in respect of that share to the extent that they are entitled to require payment under a lien enforcement notice: Sch 3 art 73(1). Money so deducted must be used to pay any of the sums payable in respect of that share: Sch 3 art 73(2). The company must notify the distribution recipient in writing of the fact and amount of any such deduction, of any non-payment of a dividend or other sum payable in respect of a share resulting from any such deduction and of how the money deducted has been applied: Sch 3 art 73(3).

In the absence of a provision such as this in the articles, a shareholder may impliedly agree to payment by cheque sent through the post: see Thairllwall v Great Northern Rly Co [1910] 2 KB 509.

The Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, Schedule, Table A art 106 provides that any dividend or other moneys payable in respect of shares may be paid by cheque sent by post to the registered address of the person entitled, and makes provision for payment of dividends to joint holders.

1418. Payment of dividends on preference shares.

The question whether preference shareholders are entitled to be paid their arrears of dividends in priority to the holders of other shares out of any profit distributed by the company, or merely to rank in priority in respect of any profits distributed in the current year, depends on whether their dividends are cumulative or non-cumulative¹. Where cumulative preference shares of the same class have been issued at different times and the arrears of dividend due on them are of varying amounts, the fund available for dividend must be distributed pro rata among the holders of those shares according to the respective amounts of the arrears on the shares held by them². Holders of preference shares may obtain an injunction to restrain a proposed payment of an interim dividend in excess of that authorised by the articles³ or of any ordinary dividend in prejudice of their rights⁴. Where business is carried on⁵ abroad, holders of preference shares are entitled, in the absence of express stipulation, to their full dividend without deducting any income tax payable there⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(23) DISTRIBUTIONS OF PROFITS AND ASSETS TO THE MEMBERS/(v) Declaration and Payment of Dividends/1419. Treatment of unclaimed dividends.

1419. Treatment of unclaimed dividends.

Under the model articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006¹, all dividends or other sums which are payable in respect of shares, and which are unclaimed after having been declared or become payable, may be invested or otherwise made use of by the directors for the benefit of the company until claimed². The payment of any such dividend or other sum into a separate account does not, however, make the company a trustee in respect of it³. If 12 years have passed from the date on which a dividend or other sum became due for payment, and the distribution recipient⁴ has not claimed it, the distribution recipient is no longer entitled to that dividend or other sum and it ceases to remain owing by the company⁵.

The articles sometimes provide that a dividend, unclaimed within a specified period from its declaration, may be forfeited by a resolution of the directors⁶; such an article will only be enforced, if at all, on its being strictly complied with⁷.

1420. Dividends in specie and capitalisation of profits.

Articles of association¹ usually provide that the company² declaring a dividend³ may resolve that the dividend be paid wholly or partly by the distribution of specific assets such as paid up shares⁴ or debentures⁵ in that or any other company⁶. Further, they usually provide⁷ that any undivided profits available for dividend⁸ may be capitalised and distributed among the shareholders⁹ on the footing that they become entitled to the profits as capital, and that any undivided profits distributed may be applied in paying up in full unissued shares¹⁰ or debentures¹¹ of the company or towards payment of the amount unpaid on any issued shares¹² or debentures. In the absence of such express authority, dividends may not be paid otherwise than in cash¹³; and, although profits may to some extent be capitalised without any such provisions in the articles¹⁴, the provisions in question enable the company definitely to determine whether the fund distributed is to be regarded as capital or income¹⁵.

6 Under the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, subject to the terms of issue of the share in question, the company may, by ordinary resolution on the recommendation of the directors, decide to pay all or part of a dividend or other distribution payable in respect of a share by transferring non-cash assets of equivalent value (including, without limitation, shares or other securities in any company): Sch 1 art 34(1), Sch 3 art 76(1). In the case of a public company, if the shares in respect of which such a non-cash distribution is paid are uncertificated, any shares in the company which are issued as a non-cash distribution in respect of them must be uncertificated: Sch 3 art 76(2). For the purposes of paying a non-cash distribution, the directors may make whatever arrangements they think fit, including, where any difficulty arises regarding the distribution, (1) fixing the value of any assets; (2) paying cash to any distribution recipient on the basis of that value in order to adjust the rights of recipients; and (3) vesting any assets in trustees: Sch 1 art 34(2), Sch 3 art 76(3). See also the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, Schedule, Table A art 105. For an example of such a distribution see Pool v Guardian Investment Trust Co [1922] 1 KB 347.

7 Under the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, subject to the articles the directors may, if they are so authorised by an ordinary resolution (1) decide to capitalise any profits of the company (whether or not they are available for distribution) which are not required for paying a preferential dividend, or any sum standing to the credit of the company's share premium account or capital redemption reserve; and (2) appropriate any sum which they so decide to capitalise (a 'capitalised sum') to the persons who would have been entitled to it if it were distributed by way of dividend (the 'persons entitled') and in the same proportions: Sch 1 art 36(1), Sch 3 art 78(1). Capitalised sums must be applied on behalf of the persons entitled, and in the same proportions as a dividend would have been distributed to them: Sch 1 art 36(2), Sch 3 art 78(2). Any capitalised sum may be applied in paying up new shares of a nominal amount equal to the capitalised sum which are then allotted credited as fully paid to the persons entitled or as they may direct: Sch 1 art 36(3), Sch 3 art 78(3). A capitalised sum which was appropriated from profits available for distribution may be applied (a) in the case of a private company, in paying up new debentures of the company which are then allotted credited as fully paid to the persons entitled or as they may direct (Sch 1 art 36(4)); (b) in the case of a public company, in or towards paying up any amounts unpaid on existing shares held by the persons entitled, or in paying up new debentures of the company which are then allotted credited as fully paid to the persons entitled or as they may direct (Sch 3 art 78(4)). Subject to the articles the directors may: (i) apply capitalised sums in accordance with Sch 1 art 36(3), (4) or, as the case may be, Sch 3 art 78(3), (4), partly in one way and partly in another; (ii) make such arrangements as they think fit to deal with shares or debentures becoming distributable in fractions under these provisions (including the issuing of fractional certificates or the making of cash payments); and (iii) authorise any person to enter into an agreement with the company on behalf of all the persons entitled which is binding on them in respect of the allotment of shares and debentures to them under these provisions: Sch 1 art 36(5), Sch 3 art 78(5).

(24) ANNUAL RETURNS

(i) Duty on Company to Deliver Annual Returns

1421. Duty to deliver annual returns to registrar.

Every company¹ must deliver to the registrar² successive annual returns each of which is made up to a date not later than the date that is from time to time the company's return date³, that is⁴:

- 661 (1) the anniversary of the company's incorporation⁵; or
- 662 (2) if the company's last return duly delivered⁶ was made up to a different date, the anniversary of that date⁷.

Each return must contain the information required by or under the relevant statutory provisions⁸ and must be delivered to the registrar within 28 days after the date to which it is made up⁹.

If a company fails to deliver an annual return before the end of the period of 28 days after a return date, an offence is committed¹⁰ by:

- 663 (a) the company¹¹;
- 664 (b) every director¹² of the company¹³, and, in the case of a private company¹⁴ with a secretary¹⁵ or a public company¹⁶, every secretary of the company¹⁷; and
- 665 (c) every other officer¹⁸ of the company who is in default¹⁹.

It is, however, a defence for a director or secretary charged with such an offence to prove that he took all reasonable steps to avoid the commission or continuation of the offence²⁰. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale²¹ and, for continued contravention, a daily default fine²² not exceeding one-tenth of level 5 on the standard scale²³. The contravention continues until such time as an annual return made up to that return date is delivered by the company to the registrar²⁴. In the case of continued contravention, an offence is also committed by every officer of the company who did not commit an offence under these provisions in relation to the initial contravention but is in default in relation to the continued contravention²⁵.

The former name of a director who is an individual is a required particular in relation to an annual return only if the director was known by the name for business purposes during the return period: Companies Act 2006 s 855A(2) (as so added). The former name of a secretary who is an individual is a required particular in relation to an annual return only if the secretary was known by the name for business purposes during the return period: s 855A(4) (as so added). Where all the partners in a firm are joint secretaries, the required particulars are the particulars that would be required to be entered in the register of secretaries if the firm were a legal person and the firm had been appointed secretary: s 855A(5) (as so added).

13 Companies Act 2006 s 855(1)(d) (substituted by SI 2008/3000). In relation to annual returns made up to a date earlier than 1 October 2009, the address of the place where any register of members or debenture holders not kept at the company's registered office is kept must be included: see the Companies Act 2006 s 855(1)(d), (e) (as originally enacted).

14 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 24 (ss 854-858), 'traded company' means a company any of whose shares are shares admitted to trading on a regulated market (so that 'non-traded company' means a company none of whose shares are shares admitted to trading on a regulated market): s 855(4) (added by SI 2008/3000). As to the meaning of 'regulated market' see PARA 334 note 11.

15 Companies Act 2006 s 855(1)(f) (added by SI 2008/3000). For the purposes of Pt 24, 'return period', in relation to an annual return, means the period beginning immediately after the date to which the last return was made up (or, in the case of the first return, with the incorporation of the company) and ending with the date to which the return is made up: Companies Act 2006 s 855(4). As to the meaning of 'last return' under the Companies Acts see PARA 1421 note 6.

The Secretary of State¹ may by regulations² make further provision as to the information to be given in a company's³ annual return⁴. The regulations may:

(25) SCHEMES OF ARRANGEMENT AND RECONSTRUCTION

(i) Schemes of Arrangement

A. INTRODUCTION

1425. Meaning of 'arrangement' and application of statutory provisions.

The provisions of Part 26 of the Companies Act 2006¹ apply² where a compromise or arrangement is proposed between a company³ and:

- 685 (1) its creditors⁴, or any class of them; or
- 686 (2) its members⁵, or any class of them⁶.

For these purposes, 'arrangement' includes a reorganisation of the company's share capital⁷ by the consolidation of shares of different classes⁸ or by the division of shares into shares of different classes, or by both of those methods⁹. The word 'arrangement' should not be limited to something analogous in some sense to 'compromise'¹⁰.

A scheme of arrangement sanctioned under Part 26 of the Companies Act 2006 is not a contract or notice within the meaning of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977¹¹ because, although it might bind the parties to the same extent as if they had made a contract, it was a statutory procedure involving the proposal of the scheme, its approval by the statutory majorities of creditors and its sanction by the court¹².

1 le the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 26 (ss 895-901): see the text and notes 2-9; and PARA 1426 et seq.

2 The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 26 have effect subject to Part 27 (ss 902-941) (mergers and divisions of public companies: see PARA 1449 et seq) where that Part applies (see ss 902, 903; and PARAS 1449-1450); s 895(3).

3 In the Companies Act 2006 s 900 (powers of court to facilitate reconstruction or amalgamation: see PARA 1434), 'company' means a company within the meaning of the 2006 Act (see PARA 24); and elsewhere in Pt 26

'company' means any company liable to be wound up under the Insolvency Act 1986: Companies Act 2006 s 895(2)(a), (b). As to winding up in general see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 432 et seq. The court's statutory jurisdiction to approve an arrangement extends to a foreign company, by virtue of a foreign company being an 'unregistered company' which the court has jurisdiction to wind up under the Insolvency Act 1986: Re Drax Holdings Ltd, Re InPower Ltd [2003] EWHC 2743 (Ch), [2004] 1 All ER 903, [2004] 1 WLR 1049. See also Re Odhams Press Ltd [1925] WN 10; Re Barclays Bank Ltd (1918) 62 Sol Jo 752; and see PARA 1432. 'Compromise' implies some element of accommodation on each side; and 'arrangement' implies some element of give and take: Re NFU Development Trust Ltd at 140, 1555 per Brightman J. See also Re Equitable Life Assurance Society [2002] EWHC 140 (Ch) at [31], [86], [2002] 2 BCLC 510 at [31], [86] per Lloyd J; and Re T & N Ltd (No 3) [2006] EWHC 1447 (Ch) at [49], [2007] 1 All ER 851 at [49], [2007] 1 BCLC 563 at [49] per David Richards J (the great majority of schemes of arrangement involving members do not involve a compromise). A scheme of arrangement which did no more than expropriate the interest of a member or creditor would not be a compromise or arrangement for these purposes but beyond that it is neither necessary nor desirable to attempt a definition of 'arrangement': see Re NFU Development Trust Ltd; and Re Savoy Hotel Ltd [1981] Ch 351 at 359, [1981] 3 All ER 646 at 652 per Nourse J. As members' schemes such as that in Re Savoy Hotel Ltd show, the give and take need not be between the members and the company, but may be between the members and a third party purchaser, with the company's only function being to register the transfer of shares and thereby terminate the existing members' status as members: see Re T & N Ltd (No 3) at [50] per David Richards J. Nevertheless, it is not a necessary element of an arrangement for these purposes that it should alter the rights existing between the company and the creditors or members with whom it is made, although no doubt in most cases it will alter those rights: see Re T & N Ltd (No 3) at [53] per David Richards J.

The word 'arrangement' in the Companies Act 2006 Pt 26 has a very wide meaning; it is generally accepted that an arrangement can contain provisions which could be contained in a contract, and it is clear that a contract can contain provisions for subsequent amendments binding on the parties: see Re Cape plc [2006] EWHC 1316 (Ch), [2006] 3 All ER 1222, [2007] 2 BCLC 546 (decided under the Companies Act 1985 s 425).

B. REQUIRED PROCEDURE FOR CONVENING NECESSARY MEETINGS

1426. Court order to hold meeting of creditors or members.

The court¹ may, on an application² under these provisions, order a meeting of the creditors or class of creditors³, or of the members of the company or class of members⁴, as the case may be, to be summoned in such manner as the court directs⁵. Such an application may be made by:

- 687 (1) the company;
- 688 (2) any creditor or member of the company;
- 689 (3) if the company is being wound up, the liquidator⁶; or
- 690 (4) if the company is in administration⁷, the administrator⁸.

The application for an order to summon meetings is made by the issue of a Part 8 claim form⁹ out of the Companies Court or a Chancery district registry or out of a county court office¹⁰. The claim form must be supported by written evidence, including statutory information about the company and the terms of the proposed compromise or arrangement¹¹; and the form must seek:

- 691 (a) directions for convening a meeting of creditors or members or both, as the case requires;
- 692 (b) the sanction of the court to the compromise or arrangement, if it is approved at the meeting or meetings, and a direction for a further hearing for that purpose; and
- 693 (c) a direction that the claimant files¹² a copy of a report to the court by the chairman of the meeting or of each meeting¹³.

The parties are responsible for service of documents in such proceedings¹⁴. Where the application is made by the company concerned, or by a liquidator or administrator of the company, there need be no defendant to the claim unless the court so orders¹⁵.

The order directing a meeting to be summoned usually appoints someone, for example, the liquidator, to act as chairman of the meeting, and directs him to report the result to the court¹⁶. It also directs that advertisements are to be made and that notices convening the meeting, enclosing a copy of the proposed compromise or arrangement, and a form of proxy¹⁷, are to be sent. Where a class of creditors to be summoned consists of holders of bearer securities, the only practicable method of summoning them is to give public notice of the meeting by advertisement in selected newspapers. Where the company is not in winding up and a petition for winding up is not pending, the court cannot, after ordering meetings to be summoned and before approving the scheme, stay an execution on a judgment recovered before the order¹⁸.

Any challenge to the outcome of a members' meeting must be supported by cogent evidence that there has been a failure to comply with the statutory requirements¹⁹. Similarly cogent evidence is required before a court will consider disenfranchising a member of a class who is entitled to vote²⁰.

Meaning of 'creditor'.

1427. Meaning of 'creditor'.

Every person having a pecuniary claim against the company, whether actual or contingent, is a creditor.

Thus, debenture holders or other secured creditors can be bound by a scheme¹, and also foreign and Commonwealth creditors when their rights are in question in England².

The assignor of a lease to the company whom the company has indemnified against liability under the lease is barred by a scheme under which the assets and liabilities of the company giving the indemnity are to be transferred to another company, and cannot assert any claim to have the assets of the former company impounded to meet any claim arising under the indemnity³.

An actual or potential claimant for contribution is a contingent creditor and thus a creditor for these purposes, with the right to recover contribution accruing when the contribution claimant was held liable in respect of relevant damage by judgment or arbitration award or when he compromised the claim⁴. However, a person who recovers judgment against the company in a claim for unliquidated damages subsequent to the scheme being approved is not bound by it⁵.

1428. Class meetings: class composition.

The court has no jurisdiction to sanction a scheme where the meeting of creditors or members has not been properly constituted¹.

It is necessary for different classes of those affected by the scheme, that is, those persons whose rights are not so dissimilar as to make it impossible for them to consult together with a view to their common interest, to have separate meetings². In determining whether creditors fall into separate classes, it is necessary first to determine whether the rights to be released or varied under the scheme are so distinct that the scheme has to be treated as a compromise or arrangement with more than one class of creditor; and secondly, whether the new rights which the scheme gives to those whose rights are to be released or varied leads to such a conclusion³. It is not practical, nor is it required, to hold separate meetings of shareholders who have the same class rights but different interests or motives in connection with the scheme⁴; and the court will take care lest by ordering separate meetings the court gives a veto to a minority group⁵. Rights, not interests, are the governing factor in the composition of classes and it is the extent to which the relevant rights are dissimilar which will determine the composition of classes in any particular case⁶. In considering the rights of creditors which are to be affected by the scheme, it is essential to identify the correct comparator⁷.

The differing interests within a class is a factor relevant to the court's discretion to sanction a scheme⁸.

Thus where there were matured and unmatured policy holders of an insurance company, a dissentient holder of a matured policy was not bound by a resolution passed at a meeting to which all the policy holders were summoned, as he was a member of the class of matured policy holders⁹; and, for this purpose, holders of shares partly paid with the uncalled balance paid in advance of calls and carrying interest are a different class from holders of fully paid shares¹⁰. Where a separate meeting of one class has not been held but is ordered to be convened on the application to sanction the scheme, the court, after the holding of that meeting, will sanction the scheme without requiring fresh meetings of the other classes¹¹.

Where there are several classes of creditors or contributories, and the scheme does not affect the rights of some particular class, it is not the practice, nor is it necessary, for notice of any meeting to be sent to the members of that class¹².

1429. Information to be made available for the purposes of the meeting.

Where a meeting of creditors or members or of any class of creditors or members is summoned¹, every notice summoning the meeting that is sent to a creditor² or member³ must be accompanied by a statement complying with the following provisions⁴ and every notice summoning the meeting that is given by advertisement must either include such a statement, or state where and how creditors or members entitled to attend the meeting may obtain copies of such a statement⁵. The statement must⁶:

- 694 (1) explain the effect of the compromise or arrangement⁷; and 695 (2) in particular, state any material interests of the directors⁸ of the company⁹, whether as directors or as members or as creditors of the company or otherwise¹⁰, and the effect on those interests of the compromise or arrangement, in so far as it is different from the effect on the like interests of other persons¹¹.

Where the compromise or arrangement affects the rights of debenture¹² holders of the company, the statement must give the like explanation as respects the trustees of any deed for securing the issue of the debentures as it is required to give as respects the company's directors¹³. Where a notice given by advertisement states that copies of an explanatory statement can be obtained by creditors or members entitled to attend the meeting, every such creditor or member is entitled, on making application in the manner indicated by the notice, to be provided by the company with a copy of the statement free of charge¹⁴.

If a company makes default in complying with any requirement of the above provisions, an offence is committed¹⁵ by the company, and by every officer¹⁶ of the company who is in default¹⁷; but a person is not guilty of such an offence if he shows that the default was due to the refusal of a director or trustee for debenture holders to supply the necessary particulars of his interests¹⁸.

It is the duty of any director of the company, and of any trustee for its debenture holders, to give notice to the company of such matters relating to himself as may be necessary for the above purposes¹⁹; and any person who makes default in complying with this requirement commits an offence²⁰.

11 Companies Act 2006 s 897(2)(b)(ii). A statement of the effect on the directors' interests is not required if the effect is the same as on the similar interests of other persons: City Property Investment Trust Corp'n Ltd, Petitioners 1951 SC 570, Ct of Sess. Failure to comply with this requirement in summoning a shareholders' meeting was held not sufficient to invalidate proceedings where all shares in the company were held by the bank which had originated the proposed scheme: Re Clydesdale Bank Ltd 1950 SC 30, Ct of Sess. The court did not refuse to sanction a scheme where there was a failure to disclose material but small interests of directors as trustees (Second Scottish Investment Trust Co Ltd, Petitioners 1962 SLT (Notes) 78, Ct of Sess), or a failure to disclose information which did not require to be disclosed in the statutory accounts (Re National Bank Ltd [1966] 1 All ER 1006, [1966] 1 WLR 819).

If, prior to the relevant class meetings, a director's material interests alter in such a way as possibly to affect the attitude of those receiving the statement, it is the duty of the directors to communicate the alteration to those to whom the original circular was sent: Re Jessel Trust Ltd [1985] BCLC 119. Disclosure is not limited to changes in a directors' interests; and all changes of circumstances which are material, in the sense that a reasonable shareholder would be likely to be affected in his voting by a new fact which becomes known to the board between the issuing of a circular and the holding of a scheme meeting, ought to be disclosed to the persons entitled to vote: Re MB Group plc [1989] BCLC 672 at 680 per Harman J. Otherwise the company will have to satisfy the court that no reasonable shareholder would have changed his decision as to how to act on the scheme if the changes had been disclosed: Re Minster Assets plc [1985] BCLC 200. 14 Companies Act 2006 s 897(4). Failure to comply with this requirement cannot be cured by sending the statement to all members entitled to attend the meeting (City Property Investment Trust Corp'n Ltd, Petitioners 1951 SC 570, Ct of Sess), or by sending each shareholder a copy of the petition (Re Rankin and Blackmore Ltd 1950 SC 218, Ct of Sess). A scheme was sanctioned under the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908 (repealed) (which contained no provision corresponding to the Companies Act 2006 s 897) in a case where advertisements were not inserted owing to an oversight, but notices were sent to and received by all except one of the shareholders: see Re Anglo-Spanish Tartar Refineries Ltd (1924) 68 Sol Jo 738.

C. REQUIRED MAJORITIES

1430. Majorities required at meetings.

The majority required is a majority in number representing 75 per cent in value of those present and voting at the meeting in person or by proxy¹. Where the debentures are registered, only the registered holder or his proxy may vote.

In the absence of any improper motive there is nothing to prevent a creditor who is also a shareholder from voting at a meeting of creditors or shareholders²; but the court will not sanction a scheme³ when the required majority is made up of persons not acting in good faith in the interest of the class to which they belong, as, for example, where their votes are given to rid themselves of their liability for amounts unpaid on their shares⁴. If, owing to insufficient notice or conflicting interests, there is a doubt whether the resolutions passed at any meeting really represent the views of the bulk of the members of the class, the court may direct another meeting to be called⁵.

Where a person has two claims against a company and votes in respect of one only, he is not thereby estopped from ranking in a scheme of arrangement in respect of both claims⁶.

Persons who enter into a secret bargain with a creditor by which, in return for a guarantee of payment of his claim, he agrees to support a scheme, are guilty of conspiracy⁷.

1 See the Companies Act 2006 s 899(1); and PARA 1431. As to proxies see PARA 1426 note 12; as to voting at meetings see PARA 653 et seq; and as to voting by proxy see PARA 662. Where, in the case of a company limited by guarantee, each member has precisely the same stake in the company, the position is the same as if each member owned a single share in it, and a three-fourths' majority of votes satisfies the requirements set out in the text: Re NFU Development Trust Ltd [1973] 1 All ER 135, [1972] 1 WLR 1548. As to the meaning of 'company limited by guarantee' under the Companies Acts see PARA 102. As to shares generally see PARA 1055.

A majority of those present and voting does not mean an absolute majority of shareholders of the class: see eg Re TDG plc [2008] EWHC 2334 (Ch), [2009] 1 BCLC 445, [2009] All ER (D) 274 (Feb). As to the conduct of the meeting see Re Abbey National plc [2004] EWHC 2776 (Ch), [2005] 2 BCLC 15.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(25) SCHEMES OF ARRANGEMENT AND RECONSTRUCTION/(i) Schemes of Arrangement/D. COURT SANCTION/1431. Court sanction for compromise or arrangement.

D. COURT SANCTION

1431. Court sanction for compromise or arrangement.

If a majority in number¹ representing 75 per cent in value of the creditors² or class of creditors³, or members⁴ or class of members, as the case may be, of the company⁵, present and voting either in person or by proxy at the meeting summoned⁶ agree a compromise or arrangement⁷, the court⁸ may, on an application⁹ under these provisions, sanction the compromise or arrangement¹⁰. Such an application may be made by:

- 696 (1) the company;
- 697 (2) any creditor or member of the company;
- 698 (3) if the company is being wound up, the liquidator¹¹; or
- 699 (4) if the company is in administration¹², the administrator¹³.

A compromise or arrangement sanctioned by the court is binding on all creditors or the class of creditors or on the members or class of members, as the case may be¹⁴, and on the company or, in the case of a company in the course of being wound up, on the liquidator and contributories of the company¹⁵. The interests of creditors must always be safeguarded¹⁶; but in the case of a scheme which involves the application of the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 for facilitating such reconstructions or amalgamations¹⁷, the protection of creditors is to be left to the procedure under such provisions¹⁸.

The courts do not, as a rule, make costs orders against objecting shareholders or creditors when their objections are not frivolous and have been of assistance to the court¹⁹.

2 As to the meaning of 'creditor' for these purposes see PARA 1427.

3 The fact that a creditor may fall into more than one class does not mean that separate classes are inappropriate: Re British Aviation Insurance Co Ltd [2005] EWHC 1621 (Ch), [2006] 1 BCLC 665. See also Re Hawk Insurance Co Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 241, [2001] 2 BCLC 480 (it is dissimilarity in legal rights, not interests or motives that matter when considering whether all members and creditors are able to consult together; where dissimilar rights are thus identified, separate meetings must be held); applied in Re Telewest Communications plc, Re Telewest Finance (Jersey) Ltd [2004] EWHC 924 (Ch), [2005] 1 BCLC 752. In Re Mytravel Group plc [2004] EWCA Civ 1734, [2005] 2 BCLC 123, one group of creditors was excluded altogether as they stood to receive nothing if the appropriate comparator (ie an insolvent winding-up) was allowed to occur; reversing in part Re Mytravel Group plc [2004] EWHC 2741 (Ch), [2005] 1 WLR 2365, [2005] 2 BCLC 123 (it was of the essence of a reconstruction that substantially the same shareholders should be involved in both old and new companies; in the instant case where that substantial identity was not present, what might be said to be reconstructed was not so much the company as its debts. The court would therefore decline to order the meetings on the basis of the scheme proposed).

Section 323 (representation of corporations at meetings: see PARA 661) applies to a meeting of creditors under this provision as to a meeting of the company (references to a member of the company being read as references to a creditor): s 899(5) (added by SI 2008/948).

7 As to the meaning of 'arrangement' see PARA 1425.

8 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 212 note 1.

9 As to the procedure for making such an application see the text and notes 14-20.

10 Companies Act 2006 s 899(1). See PARA 1432. The court must not, however, sanction the compromise or arrangement unless the relevant requirements of Pt 27 (ss 902-941) (mergers and divisions of public companies: see PARA 1449 et seq) have been complied with: s 903(1). Even where the scheme involves the purchase by an outsider of all the issued shares of the company, it is not necessarily one which falls within Pt 28 Ch 3 (ss 974-991) (see PARA 1480 et seq) and which thus requires approval by a 90% majority: Re National Bank Ltd [1966] 1 All ER 1006, [1966] 1 WLR 819. Cf PARA 1429. Instead, it may be approved as a scheme within the Companies Act 2006 Pt 26 (ss 985-901) (see PARA 1425 et seq). The process by which a compromise or arrangement becomes binding on the company and its creditors is a three-stage process consisting of: (1) the application to the court under s 896 (summoning of class meetings to consider proposal: see PARAS 1426-1429); (2) the scheme proposals being put to the meeting or meetings of creditors for approval by the requisite majority (see PARA 1430); and (3) if the scheme proposals had been approved, the application to the court under s 899(1) (obtaining the court's sanction to the arrangement: see the text and notes 1-10; and PARA 1432 et seq): Re Hawk Insurance Co Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 241, [2001] 2 BCLC 480. The court will not deprive creditors of the protection afforded by these provisions by sanctioning on the liquidator's application a conditional agreement of compromise under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 167 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 578): Re Trix Ltd, Re Ewart Holdings Ltd [1970] 3 All ER 397, [1970] 1 WLR 1421.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(25) SCHEMES OF ARRANGEMENT AND RECONSTRUCTION/(i) Schemes of Arrangement/D. COURT SANCTION/1432. Compromises or arrangements sanctioned.

1432. Compromises or arrangements sanctioned.

Any kind of compromise or arrangement may be sanctioned by the court¹, including jurisdiction to sanction a scheme which contains provision for future amendment, either of the arrangement itself or of agreements and other documents to be made pursuant to it².

In exercising its power of sanction the court must be satisfied³:

- 700 (1) that the provisions of the statute had been complied with⁴;

- 701 (2) that the classes of creditors or members have been fairly represented by those who attended the meeting and that the statutory majority approving the scheme is acting in good faith in the interest of the class it professes to represent and is not coercing the minority in order to promote interests adverse to those of the class whom they purported to represent⁵; and
- 702 (3) that the arrangement was such as an intelligent and honest person, a member of the class concerned and acting in respect of his interest, might reasonably approve⁶.

The court may sanction arrangements containing the following provisions: that first mortgage debenture holders are to be postponed to other debentures or charges about to be issued or created⁷; that, in place of debentures guaranteed by a third party, debentures without a guarantee are to be issued to the holders and the guarantor released⁸; that debenture holders and other creditors of the company are to accept, in satisfaction of their debts, shares in a company to be formed⁹; that debentures, the interest on which is to be payable only out of the company's profits, are to be taken in satisfaction of debentures, the interest on which is payable whether profits are made or not¹⁰; that debentures repayable at periods of from three to five years shall be converted into debenture stock repayable only in a certain limited number of events¹¹; or that shares in a company shall be sub-divided and that each shareholder shall surrender some of the shares resulting from the sub-division to another company whose undertaking is to be merged in that of the company whose shares they hold¹².

The court may approve an arrangement which is to be binding after liquidation¹³. Arrangements may be entered into for the purpose of reconstructing the company, staying any pending winding-up proceedings, or distributing assets amongst creditors¹⁴. They may also involve reduction of the company's capital, but, if so, the proceedings must comply with the other requirements of the Companies Act 2006 applicable in such cases¹⁵. They may be concerned solely with the rights of classes of shareholders among themselves¹⁶. Where a company in winding up is to continue to carry on its business, the arrangement should provide for the liquidation to be stayed, the liquidator discharged and the assets handed over by him to the company¹⁷.

An arrangement may be sanctioned under which the company's undertaking is to be transferred to a new company and members of the company are to receive fully paid or partly paid shares in the new company in the proportions specified in the scheme¹⁸. In such a case the court usually requires, as a condition of its sanction, provisions to be made for dissentient members to have the same rights as they would have had if the sale had been effected under the provision¹⁹ permitting a liquidator to accept shares etc as consideration for the sale of the company's property²⁰; and, where the arrangement involves a sale of the company's undertaking to a new company in the manner contemplated by that provision, that provision must be complied with²¹. An agreement which is an element of an arrangement sanctioned by the court is binding on a company even if such an agreement might otherwise be an ultra vires return of capital and void²².

An arrangement need not expressly reserve the rights of any creditors against sureties for the company's debts, as those rights are unaffected²³. In case of ambiguity the provisions of an arrangement should be construed in the sense in which an ordinary business person would understand them²⁴.

The court has no jurisdiction to sanction a compromise or arrangement of which the company disapproves, and hence, unless it is proposed as part of the compromise or arrangement that a general meeting of the company should be convened to obtain such approval, the court will not convene meetings to sanction a compromise or arrangement of which the board of the company disapproves²⁵.

The court must not sanction the compromise or arrangement under the provisions relating to arrangements and reconstructions²⁶ unless the relevant requirements of Part 27 of the Companies Act 2006²⁷ have been complied with²⁸.

1 The sanctioned under the Companies Act 2006 s 899: see PARA 1431. The procedure under s 899 with its built-in safeguards should be adopted where what is proposed is in fact a compromise or arrangement rather than other procedures (eg under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 167: see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 578): Re Trix Ltd, Re Ewart Holdings Ltd [1970] 3 All ER 397, [1970] 1 WLR 1421. An arrangement should ordinarily provide that it may be modified with the court's approval; and the court has often acted on such a clause: see Re Canning Jarrah Timber Co (Western Australia) Ltd [1900] 1 Ch 708, CA.

Registration of order sanctioning compromise or arrangement.

1433. Registration of order sanctioning compromise or arrangement.

The court's¹ order sanctioning a compromise or arrangement² has no effect until a copy of it has been delivered to the registrar³.

If the order amends either the company's⁴ articles⁵, or any resolution or agreement affecting the company's constitution⁶, the copy of the order so delivered to the registrar by the company must be accompanied by a copy of the company's articles, or the resolution or agreement in question, as amended⁷. Every copy of the company's articles issued by the company after the order is made must be accompanied by a copy of the order, unless the effect of the order⁸ has been incorporated into the articles by amendment⁹. If a company makes default in complying with these requirements an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer¹⁰ of the company who is in default¹¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 212 note 1.

2 I.e. the order under the Companies Act 2006 s 899: see PARA 1431. As to the meaning of 'arrangement' see PARA 1425.

As to the delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 141; and as to the requirements generally for the proper delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 142. An order under s 899 in relation to a non-profit registered provider of social housing which is a registered company is effective only if the Regulator of Social Housing has first consented, and does not take effect until a copy of the consent is delivered to the registrar of companies: see the Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 s 160(1), (3); and HOUSING. A copy of any order under the Companies Act 2006 s 899 in respect of a compromise or arrangement to which Pt 27 (ss 902-941) (mergers and divisions of public companies: see PARA 1449 et seq) applies is subject to the disclosure requirements in s 1078: see PARA 144.

Although the sanction of the court is necessary for the scheme to become binding (see PARA 1431), and it takes effect when the order expressing that sanction is delivered to the registrar, it is not accurate to say that the court (rather than the liquidators who proposed the scheme or the creditors who agreed to it) makes the scheme by its order: Kempe v Ambassador Insurance Co [1998] 1 WLR 271, [1998] 1 BCLC 234, PC.

4 As to the meaning of 'company' for these purposes see PARA 1425 note 3.

5 As to the meaning of 'articles' under the Companies Acts see PARA 228 note 2. For these purposes, in the case of a company not having articles, references to its articles are to be read as references to the instrument constituting the company or defining its constitution: Companies Act 2006 s 901(4)(b). As to the meaning of a 'company's constitution' under the Companies Acts see PARA 227.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(25) SCHEMES OF ARRANGEMENT AND RECONSTRUCTION/(i) Schemes of Arrangement/D. COURT SANCTION/1434. Provisions for facilitating reconstruction and amalgamation.

1434. Provisions for facilitating reconstruction and amalgamation.

Where application is made to the court¹ to sanction a compromise or arrangement² and it is shown that:

- 703 (1) the compromise or arrangement is proposed for the purposes of, or in connection with, a scheme for the reconstruction³ of any company⁴ or companies, or the amalgamation⁵ of any two or more companies; and
- 704 (2) under the scheme the whole or any part of the undertaking or the property⁶ of any company concerned in the scheme (a 'transferor company') is to be transferred to another company (the 'transferee company'), the following provisions apply⁷. The court may, either by the order sanctioning the compromise or arrangement or by a subsequent order⁸, make provision for all or any of the following matters⁹:

- 705 (a) the transfer to the transferee company of the whole or any part of the undertaking and of the property or liabilities¹⁰ of any transferor company¹¹;
- 706 (b) the allotting or appropriation by the transferee company of any shares¹², debentures¹³, policies or other like interests in that company which under the compromise or arrangement are to be allotted or appropriated by that company to or for any person¹⁴;
- 707 (c) the continuation by or against the transferee company of any legal proceedings pending by or against any transferor company¹⁵;
- 708 (d) the dissolution, without winding up, of any transferor company¹⁶;
- 709 (e) the provision to be made for any persons who, within such time and in such manner as the court directs, dissent from the compromise or arrangement¹⁷;
- 710 (f) such incidental, consequential and supplemental matters as are necessary to secure that the reconstruction or amalgamation is fully and effectively carried out¹⁸.

If an order under these provisions provides for the transfer of property or liabilities, the property is by virtue of the order transferred to, and vests in, the transferee company, and the liabilities are, by virtue of the order, transferred to and become liabilities of that company¹⁹. If the order so directs, the property vests freed from any charge that is by virtue of the compromise or arrangement to cease to have effect²⁰.

If a scheme by inadvertence orders or prohibits an act which otherwise the parties could not bind themselves to do or not do, it is to that extent a nullity²¹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(25) SCHEMES OF ARRANGEMENT AND RECONSTRUCTION/(i) Schemes of Arrangement/D. COURT SANCTION/1435. Meanings of 'reconstruction' and 'amalgamation'.

1435. Meanings of 'reconstruction' and 'amalgamation'.

Neither 'reconstruction' nor 'amalgamation'¹ has a precise legal meaning².

Where an undertaking is being carried on by a company and is in substance transferred, not to an outsider, but to another company consisting substantially of the same shareholders with a view to its being continued by the transferee company, there is a reconstruction³. It is nonetheless a reconstruction because all the assets do not pass to the new company, or all the shareholders of the transferor company are not shareholders in the transferee company, or the liabilities of the transferor company are not taken over by the transferee company⁴.

Amalgamation is a blending of two or more existing undertakings into one undertaking, the shareholders of each blending company becoming substantially the shareholders in the company which is to carry on the blended undertakings⁵. There may be amalgamation either by the transfer of two or more undertakings to a new company, or by the transfer of one or more undertakings to an existing company⁶. Strictly 'amalgamation' does not, it seems, cover the mere acquisition by a company of the share capital of other companies which remain in existence and continue their undertakings⁷, but the context in which the term is used may show that it is intended to include such an acquisition⁸.

The question whether a winding up is for the purposes of reconstruction or amalgamation depends upon the whole of the circumstances of the winding up⁹.

1437. Sale of undertaking with a view to winding up.

A sale of the company's undertaking with a view to winding up may be made and carried out by the company before liquidation, or by the liquidator after the winding-up resolution¹; or the agreement may be made by the company to be carried out by the liquidator. In any such scheme of reorganisation, if the agreement for sale contains provisions for the distribution of shares or other consideration among the members of the selling company, the sale must be carried out in accordance with the statutory provisions which govern the transfer or sale of the whole or part of the business of a company which is or is proposed to be wound up²; and any clause in the articles of the company is invalid in so far as it purports to authorise the distribution of such shares or consideration otherwise than in accordance with the statutory provisions or to deprive a dissenting shareholder of his rights under those provisions³.

1 As to the powers of a liquidator in a voluntary winding up see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARAS 959-960.

2 le the sale must be carried out in accordance with the Insolvency Act 1986 s 110: see PARA 1438 et seq.

As to the meaning of 'articles' under the Companies Acts see PARA 228 note 2.

The case may be different where the sale is of part of the assets only: see Wall v London and Northern Assets Corpn [1898] 2 Ch 469, CA. It has long been usual for companies to state in their memoranda that one of the objects is to sell the undertakings or any part of them for any consideration, and in particular for shares or other securities of any other company having similar objects, and to provide in their memoranda and articles for the distribution of such shares in specie among the members. Such a power was held to be valid, even when the whole of the company's assets were sold, and the winding up, which is required before the proceeds of the sale may be distributed amongst the shareholders, was not resolved upon at the same time: Cotton v Imperial and Foreign Agency and Investment Corpn [1892] 3 Ch 454. Hence dissentient members were deprived of the rights which they would have possessed on a statutory reconstruction under the provisions now re-enacted in the Insolvency Act 1986 s 111 (see PARA 1438) to have their interests bought out. The fact that a resolution for voluntary winding up was passed at the time when the sale was sanctioned was held to be immaterial in Doughty v Lomagunda Reefs Ltd [1902] 2 Ch 837 (on appeal [1903] 1 Ch 673, CA). See also Re Paterson, Laing and Bruce Ltd (1902) 18 TLR 515. It was further held that, unless there was something in the memorandum or articles to qualify the meaning of 'shares', a company could, under the power of sale in its memorandum, accept partly paid shares in another company: Mason v Motor Traction Co Ltd [1905] 1 Ch 419. Where the memorandum expressly gave power to sell for fully paid or partly paid shares, the Court of Appeal, without deciding that such a power was illegal, held that an agreement with another company which provided for the distribution of the partly paid shares of the purchasing company among the shareholders of the selling company, and the proceeds of sale of the shares not taken up being applied in reduction of the purchase money, was not within the power: Manners v St David's Gold and Copper Mines Ltd [1904] 2 Ch 593, CA. An agreement under which the proceeds of the partly paid shares unclaimed were to be distributed rateably amongst the members who might have claimed them was also held to be ultra vires in Bisgood v Nile Valley Co Ltd [1906] 1 Ch 747. In a somewhat similar case the agreement was held to be valid (Fuller v White Feather Reward Ltd [1906] 1 Ch 823), but the Court of Appeal in Bisgood v Henderson's Transvaal Estates Ltd [1908] 1 Ch 743, CA subsequently approved Bisgood v Nile Valley Co Ltd [1906] 1 Ch 747 and overruled Cotton v Imperial and Foreign Agency and Investment Corpn [1892] 3 Ch 454 and Fuller v White Feather Reward Ltd [1906] 1 Ch 823, in so far as those cases decided that it was possible for a company to evade the provisions now embodied in the Insolvency Act 1986 ss 110, 111 (see PARA 1438).

Sale in voluntary winding up.

1438. Sale in voluntary winding up.

Where a company (the 'transferor company') is proposed to be or is being wound up voluntarily and the whole or part of its business or property is proposed to be transferred or sold to another company (the 'transferee company'), whether or not the latter is a company registered under the Companies Act 2006¹, the liquidator of the company being, or proposed to be, wound up (the 'transferor company') may, with the requisite sanction², receive, in compensation or part compensation for the transfer or sale, shares, policies or other like interests in the transferee company for distribution³ among the members of the transferor company⁴. Alternatively, the liquidator may, with that sanction, enter into any other arrangement⁵ whereby the members of the transferor company may, in lieu of receiving cash, shares, policies or other like interests, or in addition thereto, participate in the profits of, or receive any other benefit from, the transferee company⁶. Any such sale or arrangement is binding on the members of the transferor company⁷.

If a member of the transferor company who did not vote in favour of the special resolution sanctioning the arrangement expresses his dissent from it in writing, addressed to the liquidator and left at the company's registered office within seven days after the passing of the resolution, he may require the liquidator either to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect or to purchase his interest at a price to be determined by agreement or by arbitration in the manner specified⁸.

The Insolvency Act 1986 s 110(1)(b), (2)(b), (4)(b) (added by SI 2001/1090) applies these provisions to limited liability partnerships (see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 244).

2 See PARA 1441. The sanction so required is: (1) in the case of a members' voluntary winding up (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 939 et seq), that of a special resolution of the company, conferring either a general authority on the liquidator or an authority in respect of any particular arrangement; and (2) in the case of a creditors' voluntary winding up (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 939 et seq), that of either the court or of the liquidation committee: Insolvency Act 1986 s 110(3). A special resolution is not invalid for these purposes by reason that it is passed before or concurrently with a resolution for voluntary winding up or for appointing liquidators; but, if an order is made within a year for winding up the company by the court, the special resolution is not valid unless sanctioned by the court: s 110(6).

The statutory power of sale¹ may be exercised even though the company's constitution² contains no express power of sale³. The transferor company⁴ may sell to another company, whether or not a company within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006⁵, but the transferor company cannot sell to an individual under that power⁶, except perhaps to an agent or trustee for a company to be formed⁷. The sale binds both the shareholders and the creditors of the transferor company⁸, although mortgagees may be entitled under the terms of their mortgage to prevent a sale of its assets⁹.

1440. Agreement for sale.

The agreement for sale¹ may validly provide that the transferor company shall call up its unpaid capital and transfer the amount so realised to the transferee company², or that shares in the transferee company shall be allotted either to the liquidator or directly to the members of the transferor company, and as either partly or fully paid up³. However, except with the consent of the members of the transferor company, a liability to pay cash cannot be imposed on those members by allotting them shares credited as partly paid up⁴.

Even if he has not served notice of dissent, a member of the transferor company cannot be compelled to accept shares in the transferee company. If he has served no such notice, he is not entitled to receive compensation for his interest in the transferor company⁵; but, if the shares which he declines to accept are sold, he is entitled to the net proceeds of sale⁶.

If members of the transferor company accept such shares, they become liable for the amount not credited as paid on them, the shareholder sometimes being required to make a payment of parts of the amount on application and on allotment⁷.

The agreement for sale is not invalid because it provides that part of the purchase money shall be paid to the directors and secretary of the transferor company as compensation for loss of office, although proper disclosure of the proposed payment must be made to the shareholders⁸.

The court has no power to authorise a sale to a transferee company in consideration of its agreeing to pay the creditors of the transferor company by instalments⁹; nor may it authorise an agreement or resolution compelling the members of that company to pay a premium upon the shares of the transferee company¹⁰.

1441. Special resolution conferring authority.

It is necessary to pass a special resolution conferring a general or special authority on the liquidator¹, authorising him to accept compensation for a transfer otherwise than in cash; it is not enough to pass special resolutions for voluntary winding up and for distributing the proceeds of any sale². A special resolution sanctioning a transfer is not invalid because it is passed before or concurrently with a resolution to wind up the company or to appoint liquidators³. If, however, an order is made within a year to wind up the company by the court, the special resolution is not valid unless sanctioned by the court⁴. The court's sanction must be obtained at or after the making of the winding-up order and cannot be previously obtained in the voluntary winding up⁵.

A special resolution passed at a meeting is invalid unless the notice convening the meeting distinctly states that it is intended to proceed under the statutory provision relating to the acceptance of shares as consideration for the sale of company property⁶. A special resolution is invalid so far as it authorises the liquidator to pay for the underwriting of the transferee company's shares out of the transferor company's assets⁷, unless the statutory requirements as to underwriting are complied with⁸.

1442. Time limit for acceptance.

A special resolution¹ directing shares in the transferee company to be offered to members of the transferor company and fixing a reasonable limit of time for acceptance is *intra vires*². In the absence of such a stipulation, a reasonable time must be allowed, and, if the time is not reasonable, the members are not bound by it³. A contract for sale does not create a contractual relation between a member of the transferor company and the transferee company; and, if he applies for shares in the transferee company in pursuance of the scheme, he may withdraw his offer before it is accepted⁴.

1443. Distribution of proceeds.

The consideration for the sale must be distributed among the members of the transferor company in proportion to their rights and interests, under its regulations, in the company's assets remaining after payment of its liabilities, and any persons prejudicially affected by any other mode of distribution can only be bound by their individual consents¹. Where the liquidator disposes of all the shares in the transferee company without reserving any for a member of the transferor company who is entitled to them, the court has no jurisdiction to award damages against the liquidator in the winding up of the transferor company².

The question as to the validity of the sale cannot be decided in the winding-up proceedings; it can be decided only in proceedings instituted by a non-assenting shareholder suing on behalf of himself and all other shareholders³.

A proper contract with regard to the fully or partly paid shares in the new company, and a return of the allotments, must be delivered to the registrar⁴.

Arbitration as to amount payable.

1447. Arbitration as to amount payable.

A provision in the articles purporting to exclude a reference to arbitration¹ and providing that the sum payable to a dissentient member shall be such sum as the liquidator can obtain by selling the shares to which the dissentient member, but for his dissent, would have been entitled is not binding on dissentient members²; nor is a provision which purports to authorise a sale, in the case of a voluntary winding up, of the undertaking and assets of the company for shares under the statutory power but which omits the statutory provision³ in favour of dissentient shareholders⁴.

The amount payable to a dissentient shareholder is not determined by the price to be paid in shares by the transferee company. The value of a dissentient member's interest depends on the value of his proportionate share of the assets of the transferor company⁵. A commission to examine witnesses abroad may be granted in order to ascertain the value of those assets⁶. The court will not, however, allow a shareholder to examine officers of the company in order to obtain evidence for use on the arbitration⁷.

Interest is not payable on the amount awarded until payment is demanded in writing, but it is payable from that time until the date of payment of the amount awarded⁸.

1448. Dissentient member's rights.

If the liquidator elects to purchase a dissentient member's interest¹, the purchase money must be paid before the company is dissolved and must be raised by the liquidator in such manner as may be determined by special resolution². Unless provision is made to satisfy money payable to a dissentient member, an injunction will be granted to restrain the liquidator from parting with the assets without providing for that member's claim³.

A dissentient member is not entitled to have his name omitted from the list of contributories even if he transfers his shares to the liquidator⁴, but the transfer relieves him from liability as to the costs of the liquidation⁵.

Where a scheme is eminently unfair, a dissentient minority may stop it by obtaining a compulsory winding-up order⁶.

(26) MERGERS AND DIVISIONS OF PUBLIC COMPANIES

(i) Framework of Statutory Provisions

1449. Application to specified mergers and divisions: third and sixth company law directives.

The Companies Act 2006 Part 27 on 'Mergers and Divisions of Public Companies'¹ seeks to implement the Third Company Law Directive relating to particular types of mergers of public limited liability companies², and the Sixth Company Law Directive relating to the division of public limited liability companies³.

The Companies Act 2006 Part 27 applies where:

- 711 (1) a compromise or arrangement is proposed between a public company⁴ and its creditors or any class of them⁵, or its members⁶ or any class of them⁷, for the purposes of, or in connection with, a scheme for the reconstruction of any company⁸ or companies or the amalgamation of any two or more companies⁹;
- 712 (2) the scheme involves a merger¹⁰ or a division¹¹; and
- 713 (3) the consideration for the transfer (or each of the transfers) envisaged is to be shares¹² in the transferee company (or one or more of the transferee companies) receivable by members of the transferor company (or transferor companies), with or without any cash payment to members¹³.

In this context, a 'new company' means a company formed for the purposes of, or in connection with, the scheme¹⁴; and an 'existing company' means a company other than one formed for the purposes of, or in connection with, the scheme¹⁵.

The Companies Act 2006 Part 27 does not apply where the company in respect of which the compromise or arrangement is proposed is being wound up¹⁶.

1451. Implementation of the cross-border mergers Directive.

In addition to the Third Company Law Directive relating to particular types of mergers of public limited liability companies¹, and the Sixth Company Law Directive relating to the division of public limited liability companies², the Directive on cross-border mergers of limited liability companies³ aims to facilitate the carrying-out of cross-border mergers between various types of limited liability company governed by the laws of different member states⁴.

For the purpose of implementing the Directive, the Companies (Cross-Border Mergers) Regulations 2007⁵ have been made. The Regulations provide a framework whereby companies may engage in a cross-border merger⁶. 'Cross-border merger' means a merger by absorption, a merger by absorption of a wholly-owned subsidiary, or a merger by formation of a new company⁷. The merger must involve at least one company formed and registered in the United Kingdom⁸, and at least one company formed and registered in an EEA state⁹ other than the United Kingdom¹⁰. Certain pre-merger requirements must be met¹¹. The court¹² may, on the joint application of all the merging companies, make an order approving the completion of the cross-border merger¹³, the consequences of a cross-border merger being that: (1) the assets and liabilities of the transferor companies are transferred to the transferee company; (2) the rights and obligations arising from the contracts of employment of the transferor companies are transferred to the transferee company; (3) the transferor companies are dissolved; and (4) in the case of a merger by absorption or a merger by formation of a new company, the members of the transferor companies except the transferee company (if it is a member of a transferor company) become members of the transferee company¹⁴. Employee participation in the merger is provided for¹⁵.

A draft of the proposed terms of the scheme¹ must be drawn up and adopted by the directors² of the merging companies³. The draft terms must give particulars of at least the following matters:

- 716 (1) in respect of each transferor company and the transferee company, its name⁴, the address of its registered office⁵, and whether it is a company limited by shares⁶ or a company limited by guarantee⁷ and having a share capital⁸;

- 718 (3) the terms relating to the allotment of shares in the transferee company¹¹;
- 719 (4) the date from which the holding of shares in the transferee company will entitle the holders to participate in profits, and any special conditions affecting that entitlement¹²;
- 720 (5) the date from which the transactions of a transferor company are to be treated for accounting purposes as being those of the transferee company¹³;
- 721 (6) any rights or restrictions attaching to shares or other securities in the transferee company to be allotted under the scheme to the holders of shares or other securities in a transferor company to which any special rights or restrictions attach, or the measures proposed concerning them¹⁴;
- 722 (7) any amount of benefit paid or given or intended to be paid or given to any expert¹⁵, or to any director of a merging company¹⁶, and the consideration for the payment of benefit¹⁷.

The directors of each of the merging companies must deliver a copy of the draft terms to the registrar¹⁸. The registrar must publish in the Gazette¹⁹ notice of receipt by him from that company of a copy of the draft terms²⁰; and that notice must be published at least one month²¹ before the date of any meeting of that company summoned for the purpose of approving the scheme²².

1455. Circumstances in which meetings not required.

In the case of a merger by absorption¹ where 90 per cent or more (but not all) of the relevant securities² of the transferor company (or, if there is more than one transferor company, of each of them) are held by or on behalf of the transferee company³, it is not necessary for the scheme to be approved at a meeting of the members⁴, or any class of members, of the transferee company if the court⁵ is satisfied that the following conditions have been complied with⁶:

- 723 (1) the first condition is that publication of notice of receipt of the draft terms by the registrar⁷ took place in respect of the transferee company at least one month⁸ before the date of the first meeting of members, or any class of members, of the transferor company summoned for the purpose of agreeing to the scheme⁹;
- 724 (2) the second condition is that the members of the transferee company were able during the period beginning one month before, and ending on, that date to inspect at the registered office¹⁰ of the transferee company copies of the documents¹¹ relating to that company and the transferor company (or, if there is more than one transferor company, each of them)¹², and to obtain copies of those documents or any part of them on request free of charge¹³;
- 725 (3) the third condition is that one or more members of the transferee company, who together held not less than 5 per cent of the paid-up¹⁴ capital of the company which carried the right to vote at general meetings of the company (excluding any shares in the company held as treasury shares¹⁵) would have been able, during that period, to require a meeting of each class of members to be called for the purpose of deciding whether or not to agree to the scheme¹⁶, and no such requirement was made¹⁷.

In the case of a merger by absorption where all of the relevant securities¹⁸ of the transferor company (or, if there is more than one transferor company, of each of them) are held by or on behalf of the transferee company¹⁹, it is not necessary for the scheme to be approved at a meeting of the members, or any class of members, of any of the merging companies²⁰ if the court is satisfied that the following conditions have been complied with²¹:

- 726 (a) the first condition is that publication of notice of receipt of the draft terms by the registrar took place in respect of all the merging companies at least one month before the date of the court's order²²;
- 727 (b) the second condition is that the members of the transferee company were able during the period beginning one month before, and ending on, that date to inspect at the registered office of that company copies of the documents²³ relating to that company and the transferor company (or, if there is more than one transferor company, each of them)²⁴, and to obtain copies of those documents or any part of them on request free of charge²⁵;
- 728 (c) the third condition is that one or more members of the transferee company, who together held not less than 5 per cent of the paid-up capital of the company which carried the right to vote at general meetings of the company (excluding any shares in the company held as treasury shares) would have been able, during that period, to require a meeting of each class of members to be called for the purpose of deciding whether or not to agree to the scheme²⁶, and no such requirement was made²⁷.

In the case of any merger by absorption, it is not necessary for the scheme to be approved by the members of the transferee company if the court is satisfied that the following conditions have been complied with²⁸:

- 729 (i) the first condition is that publication of notice of receipt of the draft terms by the registrar took place in respect of that company at least one month before the date of the first meeting of members, or any class of members, of the transferor company (or, if there is more than one transferor company, any of them) summoned for the purposes of agreeing to the scheme²⁹;
- 730 (ii) the second condition is that the members of that company were able during the period beginning one month before, and ending on, the date of any such meeting to inspect at the registered office of that company copies of the documents³⁰ relating to that company and the transferor company (or, if there is more than one transferor company, each of them)³¹, and to obtain copies of those documents or any part of them on request free of charge³²;
- 731 (iii) the third condition is that one or more members of that company, who together held not less than 5 per cent of the paid-up capital of the company which carried the right to vote at general meetings of the company (excluding any shares in the company held as treasury shares) would have been able, during that period, to require a meeting of each class of members to be called for the purpose of deciding whether or not to agree to the scheme³³, and no such requirement was made³⁴.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(26) MERGERS AND DIVISIONS OF PUBLIC COMPANIES/(ii) Merger of UK Companies/1457. Directors of merging companies to publish explanatory report.

1457. Directors of merging companies to publish explanatory report.

The directors¹ of each of the merging companies² must draw up and adopt a report³. The report must consist of: (1) a statement⁴ explaining the effect of the compromise or arrangement⁵; and (2) in so far as that statement does not deal with the following matters, a further statement setting out the legal and economic grounds for the draft terms, and in particular for the share exchange ratio⁶, and specifying any special valuation difficulties⁷.

8 The requirement in the Companies Act 2006 s 908 is subject to s 915 (circumstances in which reports not required): s 908(3). The requirements of s 908 do not apply in the case of a merger by absorption where all of the relevant securities of the transferor company (or, if there is more than one transferor company, of each of them) are held by or on behalf of the transferee company: see s 915(1), (4). As to the meaning of 'merger by absorption' see PARA 1452. As to the meaning of 'relevant securities' see PARA 1453 note 10.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(26) MERGERS AND DIVISIONS OF PUBLIC COMPANIES/(ii) Merger of UK Companies/1458. Expert's report to be drawn up on behalf of merging companies.

1458. Expert's report to be drawn up on behalf of merging companies.

An expert's report must be drawn up on behalf of each of the merging companies¹. The report required is a written report on the draft terms² to the members³ of the company⁴, and must: (1) indicate the method or methods used to arrive at the share exchange ratio⁵; (2) give an opinion as to whether the method or methods used are reasonable in all the circumstances of the case, indicate the values arrived at using each such method and (if there is more than one method) give an opinion on the relative importance attributed to such methods in arriving at the value decided on⁶; (3) describe any special valuation difficulties that have arisen⁷; (4) state whether in the expert's opinion the share exchange ratio is reasonable⁸; and (5) in the case of a valuation made by a person⁹ other than himself¹⁰, state that it appeared to him reasonable to arrange for it to be so made or to accept a valuation so made¹¹.

The expert must be a person who is eligible for appointment as a statutory auditor¹², and meets the independence requirement¹³. The court¹⁴ may on the joint application of all the merging companies approve the appointment of a joint expert to draw up a single report on behalf of all those companies¹⁵. If no such appointment is made, there must be a separate expert's report to the members of each merging company drawn up by a separate expert appointed on behalf of that company¹⁶. The expert (or each of them) has the right of access to all such documents of all the merging companies¹⁷, and the right to require from the companies' officers all such information¹⁸, as he thinks necessary for the purposes of making his report¹⁹.

In certain circumstances these requirements do not apply²⁰; and if certain conditions are met agreement may be reached to dispense with an expert's report²¹.

7 Companies Act 2006 s 909(5)(c).

8 Companies Act 2006 s 909(5)(d).

9 As to the meaning of 'person' see PARA 311 note 2.

10 Where it appears to an expert (1) that a valuation is reasonably necessary to enable him to draw up his report (Companies Act 2006 s 935(1)(a)); and (2) that it is reasonable for that valuation, or part of it, to be made by (or for him to accept a valuation made by) another person who appears to him to have the requisite knowledge and experience to make the valuation or that part of it (s 935(1)(b)(i)), and meets the independence requirement in s 936 (see note 13) (s 935(1)(b)(ii)), he may arrange for or accept such a valuation, together with a report which will enable him to make his own report (s 935(1)). Where any valuation is made by a person other than the expert himself, the latter's report must state that fact and must also state the former's name and what knowledge and experience he has to carry out the valuation (s 935(2)(a)), and describe so much of the undertaking, property and liabilities as was valued by the other person, and the method used to value them, and specify the date of the valuation (s 935(2)(b)). As to the meaning of 'undertaking' see PARA 26 note 2. As to the meaning of 'property' see PARA 1452 note 3. As to the meaning of 'liabilities' see PARA 1452 note 4.

12 Companies Act 2006 s 909(4)(a). The appointment referred to is one under s 1212 (see PARA 969): see s 909(4)(a).

13 Companies Act 2006 s 909(4)(b). The independence requirement is that in s 936: see s 909(4)(b). A person meets the independence requirement for the purposes of s 909 or s 924 (see PARA 1471) or s 935 (see note 10) only if:

2188 (1) he is not an officer or employee of any of the companies concerned in the scheme (s 936(1)(a)(i)), or a partner or employee of such a person, or a partnership of which such a person is a partner (s 936(1)(a)(ii));

2189 (2) he is not an officer or employee of an associated undertaking of any of the companies concerned in the scheme (s 936(1)(b)(i)), or a partner or employee of such a person, or a partnership of which such a person is a partner (s 936(1)(b)(ii)); and

2190 (3) there does not exist between the person or an associate of his (s 936(1)(c)(i)), and any of the companies concerned in the scheme or an associated undertaking of such a company (s 936(1)(c)(ii)), a connection of any such description as may be specified by regulations made by the Secretary of State (s 936(1)(c)).

An auditor of a company is not regarded as an officer or employee of the company for this purpose: s 936(2). For these purposes, the 'companies concerned in the scheme' means every transferor and existing transferee company (s 936(3)(a)); 'associated undertaking', in relation to a company, means a parent undertaking or subsidiary undertaking of the company (s 936(3)(b)(i)), or a subsidiary undertaking of a parent undertaking of the company (s 936(3)(b)(ii)); and 'associate' has the meaning given by s 937 (s 936(3)(c)). Regulations under s 936 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): ss 936(4), 1289. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. As to the making of orders and regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. At the date at which this volume states the law no such order or regulations had been made. As to the scheme see PARA 1449. As to the meaning of 'officer' see PARA 607. As to the meanings of 'parent undertaking' and 'subsidiary undertaking' see PARA 26.

In relation to an individual, 'associate' means that individual's spouse or civil partner or minor child or step-child (s 937(1), (2)(a)), any body corporate of which that individual is a director (s 937(1), (2)(b)), and any employee or partner of that individual (s 937(1), (2)(c)). In relation to a body corporate, 'associate' means any body corporate of which that body is a director (s 937(1), (3)(a)), any body corporate in the same group as that body (s 937(1), (3)(b)), and any employee or partner of that body or of any body corporate in the same group (s 937(1), (3)(c)). In relation to a partnership that is a legal person under the law by which it is governed, 'associate' means any body corporate of which that partnership is a director (s 937(1), (4)(a)), any employee of or partner in that partnership (s 937(1), (4)(b)), and any person who is an associate of a partner in that partnership (s 937(1), (4)(c)). In relation to a partnership that is not a legal person under the law by which it is governed, 'associate' means any person who is an associate of any of the partners: s 937(1), (5). For these purposes, in relation to a limited liability partnership, for 'director' read 'member': s 937(1), (6). As to the meaning of 'civil partner' see PARA 1512 note 9. As to the construction of references to any relationship between two persons see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (amended by the Family Law Reform Act 1987 s 33(1), Sch 2 PARA 73, Sch 3 PARA 1); Family Law Reform Act 1987 s 1 (amended by the Adoption and Children Act 2002 s 139(1), Sch 3 paras 50, 51); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 125; STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1382. 19 Companies Act 2006 s 909(6).

20 The requirement in the Companies Act 2006 s 909 is subject to s 915: see s 909(7). The requirements of s 909 do not apply in the case of a merger by absorption where all of the relevant securities of the transferor company (or, if there is more than one transferor company, of each of them) are held by or on behalf of the transferee company: see s 915(1), (4). As to the meaning of 'merger by absorption' see PARA 1452. As to the meaning of 'relevant securities' see PARA 1453 note 10.

21 The requirement in the Companies Act 2006 s 909 is subject to s 918A: see s 909(7) (amended by SI 2008/690). If all members holding shares in, and all persons holding other securities of, the companies involved in the merger, being shares or securities that carry a right to vote in general meetings of the company in question, so agree, the requirement of the Companies Act 2006 s 909 does not apply: s 918A(1) (s 918A added by SI 2008/690). For these purposes the members, or holders of other securities, of a company (Companies Act 2006 s 918A(2)(a) (as so added)), and whether shares or other securities carry a right to vote in general meetings of the company (s 918A(2)(b) (as so added)), are determined as at the date of the application to the court under s 896 (see PARA 1426) (s 918A(2) (as so added)). As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1042. As to general meetings see PARA 629.

1459. Circumstances where merging company must prepare supplementary accounting statement.

If the last annual accounts¹ of any of the merging companies² relate to a financial year³ ending more than seven months⁴ before the first meeting of the company summoned for the purposes of approving the scheme⁵, the directors⁶ of that company must prepare a supplementary accounting statement⁷. That statement must consist of: (1) a balance sheet dealing with the state of affairs of the company as at a date not more than three months before the draft terms were adopted⁸ by the directors⁹; and (2) where the company would be required¹⁰ to prepare group accounts if that date were the last day of a financial year, a consolidated balance sheet dealing with the state of affairs of the company and the undertakings¹¹ that would be included in such a consolidation¹².

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(26) MERGERS AND DIVISIONS OF PUBLIC COMPANIES/(iii) Division of UK Companies/1467. Circumstances in which meetings etc not required.

1467. Circumstances in which meetings etc not required.

In the case of a division¹ where all of the shares² or other securities of the transferor company carrying the right to vote at general meetings³ of the company are held by or on behalf of one or more existing transferee companies⁴, it is not necessary for the scheme⁵ to be approved by a meeting of the members⁶, or any class of members, of the transferor company if the court⁷ is satisfied that the following conditions have been complied with⁸:

744 (1) the first condition is that publication of notice of receipt of the draft terms by the registrar⁹ took place in respect of all the companies involved in the division at least one month¹⁰ before the date of the court's order¹¹;

745 (2) the second condition is that the members of every company involved in the division were able during the period beginning one month before, and ending on, that date to inspect at the registered office¹² of their company copies of the documents¹³ relating to every company involved in the division¹⁴, and to obtain copies of those documents or any part of them on request free of charge¹⁵;

- 746 (3) the third condition is that one or more members of the transferor company, who together held not less than 5 per cent of the paid-up¹⁶ capital of the company (excluding any shares in the company held as treasury shares¹⁷) would have been able, during that period, to require a meeting of each class of members to be called for the purpose of deciding whether or not to agree to the scheme¹⁸, and no such requirement was made¹⁹;
- 747 (4) the fourth condition is that the directors²⁰ of the transferor company have sent to every member who would have been entitled to receive notice of a meeting to agree to the scheme (had any such meeting been called)²¹, and to the directors of every existing transferee company²², a report of any material change in the property²³ and liabilities²⁴ of the transferor company between the date when the terms were adopted by the directors²⁵ and the date one month before the date of the court's order²⁶.

In the case of a division, it is not necessary for the scheme to be approved by the members of a transferee company if the court is satisfied that the following conditions have been complied with in relation to that company²⁷:

- 748 (a) the first condition is that publication of notice of receipt of the draft terms by the registrar took place in respect of that company at least one month before the date of the first meeting of members of the transferor company summoned for the purposes of agreeing to the scheme²⁸;
- 749 (b) the second condition is that the members of that company were able during the period beginning one month before, and ending on, that date to inspect at the registered office of that company copies of the documents²⁹ relating to that company and every other company involved in the division³⁰, and to obtain copies of those documents or any part of them on request free of charge³¹;
- 750 (c) the third condition is that one or more members of that company, who together held not less than 5 per cent of the paid-up capital of the company which carried the right to vote at general meetings of the company (excluding any shares in the company held as treasury shares) would have been able, during that period, to require a meeting of each class of members to be called for the purpose of deciding whether or not to agree to the scheme³², and no such requirement was made³³.

Conditions (a) and (b) above are subject to the power³⁴ of the court to exclude certain requirements³⁵.

For these purposes the members, or holders of other securities, of a company (s 933(3)(a)), and whether shares or other securities carry a right to vote in general meetings of the company (s 933(3)(b)), are determined as at the date of the application to the court under s 896 (see PARA 1426) (s 933(3)). COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(26) MERGERS AND DIVISIONS OF PUBLIC COMPANIES/(iii) Division of UK Companies/1471. Expert's report to be drawn up on behalf of companies involved in division.

1471. Expert's report to be drawn up on behalf of companies involved in division.

An expert's report must be drawn up on behalf of each company involved in the division¹. The report required is a written report on the draft terms² to the members of the company³, and must:

- 758 (1) indicate the method or methods used to arrive at the share exchange ratio⁴;
- 759 (2) give an opinion as to whether the method or methods used are reasonable in all the circumstances of the case, indicate the values arrived at using each such method and (if there is more than one method) give an opinion on the relative importance attributed to such methods in arriving at the value decided on⁵;
- 760 (3) describe any special valuation difficulties that have arisen⁶;
- 761 (4) state whether in the expert's opinion the share exchange ratio is reasonable⁷; and
- 762 (5) in the case of a valuation made by a person other than himself⁸, state that it appeared to him reasonable to arrange for it to be so made or to accept a valuation so made⁹.

The expert must be a person who is eligible for appointment as a statutory auditor¹⁰, and meets the independence requirement¹¹. The court¹² may on the joint application of the companies involved in the division approve the appointment of a joint expert to draw up a single report on behalf of all those companies¹³. If no such appointment is made, there must be a separate expert's report to the members of each company involved in the division drawn up by a separate expert appointed on behalf of that company¹⁴. The expert (or each of them) has the right of access to all such documents of the companies involved in the division¹⁵, and the right to require from the companies' officers¹⁶ all such information¹⁷, as he thinks necessary for the purposes of making his report¹⁸.

knowledge and experience to make the valuation or that part of it (s 935(1)(b)(i)), and meets the independence requirement in s 936 (see PARA 1458 note 13) (s 935(1)(b)(ii)), he may arrange for or accept such a valuation, together with a report which will enable him to make his own report (s 935(1)). Where any valuation is made by a person other than the expert himself, the latter's report must state that fact and must also state the former's name and what knowledge and experience he has to carry out the valuation (s 935(2)(a)), and describe so much of the undertaking, property and liabilities as was valued by the other person, and the method used to value them, and specify the date of the valuation (s 935(2)(b)). 1478. Date and consequences of compromise or arrangement.

Where the court¹ sanctions the compromise or arrangement², it must in the order sanctioning the compromise or arrangement³, or in a subsequent order⁴ under the powers of the court to facilitate reconstruction or amalgamation⁵, fix a date on which the transfer (or transfers) to the transferee company (or transferee companies) of the undertaking⁶, property⁷ and liabilities⁸ of the transferor company is (or are) to take place⁹. Any such order that provides for the dissolution of the transferor company must fix the same date for the dissolution¹⁰.

If it is necessary for the transferor company to take steps to ensure that the undertaking, property and liabilities are fully transferred, the court must fix a date, not later than six months¹¹ after the date fixed for the transfer¹², by which such steps must be taken¹³. In that case, the court may postpone the dissolution of the transferor company until that date¹⁴; and may postpone or further postpone that date if it is satisfied that the steps mentioned cannot be completed by the date (or latest date) fixed¹⁵.

(27) THE PANEL ON TAKEOVERS AND MERGERS; ITS CODE

(i) Introduction

1480. The Panel on Takeovers and Mergers and the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers.

In 1959 the Governor of the Bank of England set up the City Working Party, consisting of representatives of the Accepting Houses Committee, the Association of Investment Trust Companies, the Association of Unit Trust Managers, the British Insurance Association, the Committee of London Clearing Bankers, the Confederation of British Industry, the Issuing Houses Association, the National Association of Pension Funds, and the Stock Exchange, London, for the purpose of considering good business practice in the conduct of takeovers and mergers.

This body produced the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Code'), which of necessity at the time represented a code of business ethics, not a code of law¹. The current version of this Code is issued on the authority of the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')².

The Panel is an independent body, established in 1968, whose main functions are to issue and administer the Code and to supervise and regulate takeovers and other matters to which the Code applies in accordance with the rules set out in the Code. It has been designated as the supervisory authority to carry out certain regulatory functions in relation to takeovers pursuant to the Takeovers Directive³. Its statutory functions are set out in and under Chapter 1 of Part 28 of the Companies Act 2006⁴. Rules are set out in the Code (with related Notes and Appendices) and the Rules of Procedure of the Hearings Committee. These rules may be changed from time to time, and rules may also be set out in other documents as specified by the Panel⁵. The Listing Rules impose additional requirements⁶.

The Panel assumes overall responsibility for the policy, financing and administration of the Panel's functions and for the functioning and operation of the Code. The Panel operates through a number of committees and is directly responsible for those matters which are not dealt with through one of its committees⁷. The Panel comprises up to 34 members, comprising the Chairman, who is appointed by the Panel; up to two deputy chairmen, who are appointed by the Panel; up to 20 other members, who are appointed by the Panel; and individuals appointed by a number of financial bodies⁸. The Panel has an Executive which carries out the day-to-day work of takeover supervision and regulation; it is headed by the Director General who is assisted by deputies, assistants, secretaries and various members of permanent and seconded staff⁹.

The Companies Act 2006 puts the Panel on a statutory footing for the first time. The Panel is to have the functions conferred on it by or under Chapter 1 of Part 28 of the Act¹⁰. It may do anything that it considers necessary or expedient for the purposes of, or in connection with, its functions¹¹. The Panel may make arrangements for any of its functions to be discharged by: (1) a committee or sub-committee of the Panel; or (2) an officer or member of staff of the Panel, or a person acting as such¹².

1481. The Takeovers Directive.

The Takeovers Directive¹ lays down measures coordinating the laws, regulations, administrative provisions, codes of practice and other arrangements of the member states, including arrangements established by organisations officially authorised to regulate the markets (known as 'rules'), relating to takeover bids² for the securities of companies governed by the laws of member states, where all or some of those securities are admitted to trading on a regulated market³ in one or more member states (known as a 'regulated market')⁴. The Directive does not apply to takeover bids for securities issued by companies, the object of which is the collective investment of capital provided by the public⁵, or to takeover bids for securities issued by the member states' central banks⁶.

For the purpose of implementing the Directive, member states must ensure that the following principles are complied with⁷:

- 774 (1) all holders of the securities of an offeree company of the same class must be afforded equivalent treatment; moreover, if a person acquires control of a company, the other holders of securities must be protected⁸;
- 775 (2) the holders of the securities of an offeree company must have sufficient time and information to enable them to reach a properly informed decision on the bid; where it advises the holders of securities, the board of the offeree company must give its views on the effects of implementation of the bid on employment, conditions of employment and the locations of the company's places of business⁹;

- 776 (3) the board of an offeree company must act in the interests of the company as a whole and must not deny the holders of securities the opportunity to decide on the merits of the bid¹⁰;
- 777 (4) false markets must not be created in the securities of the offeree company, of the offeror company¹¹ or of any other company concerned by the bid in such a way that the rise or fall of the prices of the securities becomes artificial and the normal functioning of the markets is distorted¹²;
- 778 (5) an offeror must announce a bid only after ensuring that he/she can fulfil in full any cash consideration, if such is offered, and after taking all reasonable measures to secure the implementation of any other type of consideration¹³;
- 779 (6) an offeree company must not be hindered in the conduct of its affairs for longer than is reasonable by a bid for its securities¹⁴.

With a view to ensuring compliance with these principles, member states must ensure that the minimum requirements set out in the Directive are observed¹⁵, but may lay down additional conditions and provisions more stringent than those of the Directive for the regulation of bids¹⁶.

Member states must designate the authority or authorities competent to supervise bids for the purposes of the rules which they make or introduce pursuant to the Directive¹⁷. The Directive makes provision for protection of minority shareholders, the mandatory bid and the equitable price¹⁸, information concerning bids¹⁹, time allowed for acceptance²⁰, disclosure²¹, obligations of the board of the offeree company²², the publication of information²³, pre-bid defences²⁴, other rules applicable to the conduct of bids²⁵, information for and consultation of employees' representatives²⁶, the right of squeeze-out²⁷, the right of sell-out²⁸, and sanctions²⁹.

Five years after 20 May 2006³⁰, the Commission must examine the Directive in the light of the experience acquired in applying it and, if necessary, propose its revision³¹. To that end, member states must provide the Commission annually with information on the takeover bids which have been launched against companies the securities of which are admitted to trading on their regulated markets; and that information must include the nationalities of the companies involved, the results of the offers and any other information relevant to the understanding of how takeover bids operate in practice³².

1 I.e. European Parliament and Council Directive 2004/25 (OJ L142, 30.4.2004, p 12) on takeover bids.

2 'Takeover bid' or 'bid' means a public offer (other than by the offeree company itself) made to the holders of the securities of a company to acquire all or some of those securities, whether mandatory or voluntary, which follows or has as its objective the acquisition of control of the offeree company in accordance with national law: European Parliament and Council Directive 2004/25 (OJ L142, 30.4.2004, p 12) art 2(1)(a). 'Offeree company' means a company, the securities of which are the subject of a bid: art 2(1)(b). 'Securities' means transferable securities carrying voting rights in a company: art 2(1)(e).

7 Provision for the purpose of implementing the Directive in the United Kingdom was originally made by the Takeovers Directive (Interim Implementation) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/1183 (revoked). Provision is now contained in the Companies Act 2006 Pt 28 (ss 942-992) (see PARAS 1480 et seq, 1482 et seq) and in rules made by the Takeover Panel which give effect to certain provisions of the Takeovers Directive (see s 943; and PARA 1487). COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(27) THE PANEL ON TAKEOVERS AND MERGERS; ITS CODE/(ii) The Panel on Takeovers and Mergers/C. RULE-MAKING POWERS/1487. Provision for the Panel to make rules.

C. RULE-MAKING POWERS

1487. Provision for the Panel to make rules.

The Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')¹ must make rules giving effect to certain provisions of the Takeovers Directive².

Rules made by the Panel may also make other provision: (1) for or in connection with the regulation of: (a) takeover bids³; (b) merger transactions; and (c) transactions (not falling within heads (a) or (b) above) that have or may have, directly or indirectly, an effect on the ownership or control of companies⁴; (2) for or in connection with the regulation of things done in consequence of, or otherwise in relation to, any such bid or transaction; (3) about cases where (a) any such bid or transaction is, or has been, contemplated or apprehended; or (b) an announcement is made denying that any such bid or transaction is intended⁵.

The provision that may be made under heads (1), (2) and (3) above includes, in particular, provision for a matter that is, or is similar to, a matter provided for by the Panel in the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers⁶ as it had effect immediately before the passing of the Companies Act 2006⁷.

In relation to rules made by virtue of the provision on fees and charges⁸, functions under the above provision⁹ may be discharged either by the Panel itself or by a committee of the Panel (but not otherwise)¹⁰. In relation to rules of any other description, the Panel must discharge its functions¹¹ by a committee of the Panel¹².

Rules may: (i) make different provision for different purposes; (ii) make provision subject to exceptions or exemptions; (iii) contain incidental, supplemental, consequential or transitional provision; (iv) authorise the Panel to dispense with or modify the application of rules in particular cases and by reference to any circumstances¹³.

Rules must be made by an instrument in writing¹⁴. Immediately after an instrument containing rules is made, the text must be made available to the public, with or without payment, in whatever way the Panel thinks appropriate¹⁵. A person is not to be taken to have contravened a rule if he shows that at the time of the alleged contravention the text of the rule had not been made available as required above¹⁶.

The production of a printed copy of an instrument purporting to be made by the Panel on which is endorsed a certificate signed by an officer of the Panel authorised by it for that purpose and stating: (A) that the instrument was made by the Panel; (B) that the copy is a true copy of the instrument; and (C) that on a specified date the text of the instrument was made available to the public as required¹⁷, is evidence of the facts stated in the certificate¹⁸. A certificate purporting to be so signed¹⁹ is to be treated as having been properly signed unless the contrary is shown²⁰. A person who wishes in any legal proceedings to rely on an instrument by which rules are made may require the Panel to endorse a copy of the instrument with such a certificate²¹.

1488. Rules governing hearings and appeals.

Rules¹ must provide for a decision of the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')² to be subject to review by a committee of the Panel (the 'Hearings Committee') at the instance of such persons affected by the decision as are specified in the rules³. Rules may also confer other functions on the Hearings Committee⁴.

Rules must provide for there to be a right of appeal against a decision of the Hearings Committee to an independent tribunal (the 'Takeover Appeal Board') in such circumstances and subject to such conditions as are specified in the rules⁵.

Rules may contain (1) provision as to matters of procedure in relation to proceedings before the Hearings Committee (including provision imposing time limits); (2) provision about evidence in such proceedings; (3) provision as to the powers of the Hearings Committee dealing with a matter referred to it; (4) provision about enforcement of decisions of the Hearings Committee and the Takeover Appeal Board⁶.

Rules must contain provision (a) requiring the Panel, when acting in relation to any proceedings before the Hearings Committee or the Takeover Appeal Board, to do so by an officer or member of staff of the Panel (or a person acting as such); (b) preventing a person who is or has been a member of a committee of the Panel⁷ from being a member of the Hearings Committee or the Takeover Appeal Board; (c) preventing a person who is a member of a committee of the Panel⁸, of the Hearings Committee or of the Takeover Appeal Board from acting as mentioned in head (a) above⁹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(27) THE PANEL ON TAKEOVERS AND MERGERS; ITS CODE/(ii) The Panel on Takeovers and Mergers/C. RULE-MAKING POWERS/1489. Rules on fees etc.

1489. Rules on fees etc.

Rules may provide for fees or charges to be payable to the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')¹ for the purpose of meeting any part of its expenses².

For the purpose of meeting any part of the expenses of the Panel, the Secretary of State³ may by regulations⁴ provide for a levy to be payable to the Panel (1) by specified⁵ persons or bodies, or persons or bodies of a specified description; or (2) on transactions, of a specified description, in securities on specified markets⁶.

The power to specify (or to specify descriptions of) persons or bodies must be exercised in such a way that the levy is payable only by persons or bodies that appear to the Secretary of State (a) to be capable of being directly affected by the exercise of any of the functions of the Panel; or (b) otherwise to have a substantial interest in the exercise of any of those functions⁷.

In determining the rate of the levy payable in respect of a particular period, the Secretary of State (i) must take into account any other income received or expected by the Panel in respect of that period; (ii) may take into account estimated as well as actual expenses of the Panel in respect of that period⁸.

The Panel must (A) keep proper accounts in respect of any amounts of levy received⁹; (B) prepare, in relation to each period in respect of which any such amounts are received, a statement of account relating to those amounts in such form and manner as is specified in the regulations¹⁰. Those accounts must be audited, and the statement certified, by persons appointed by the Secretary of State¹¹.

An amount payable by any person or body¹² is a debt due from that person or body to the Panel, and is recoverable accordingly¹³.

1 As to the Panel generally see PARA 1480.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 957(1). A reference in ss 957, 958 to expenses of the Panel is to any expenses that have been or are to be incurred by the Panel in, or in connection with, the discharge of its functions, including in particular: (1) payments in respect of the expenses of the Takeover Appeal Board; (2) the cost of repaying the principal of, and of paying any interest on, any money borrowed by the Panel; (3) the cost of maintaining adequate reserves: s 957(2). See also the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers Introduction para 13. As to appeals and the Takeover Appeal Board see PARA 1488.

3 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

4 Regulations under the Companies Act 2006 s 958 may in particular: (1) specify the rate of the levy and the period in respect of which it is payable at that rate; (2) make provision as to the times when, and the manner in which, payments are to be made in respect of the levy: s 958(3). Regulations under s 958: (a) are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament) if s 958(7) (see below) applies to them; (b) otherwise, they are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): ss 958(6), 1289, 1290. This provision applies to: (i) the first regulations under s 958; (ii) any other regulations under s 958 that would result in a change in the persons or bodies by whom, or the transactions on which, the levy is payable: s 958(7). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made.

If a draft of an instrument containing regulations under s 958 would, apart from this subsection, be treated for the purposes of the Standing Orders of either House of Parliament as a hybrid instrument, it is to proceed in that House as if it were not such an instrument: s 958(8).

5 For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in regulations: Companies Act 2006 s 958(1). As to regulations see note 4.

1490. Power to give rulings on the interpretation, application or effect of rules.

The Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')¹ may give rulings on the interpretation, application or effect of rules².

To the extent and in the circumstances specified in rules, and subject to any review or appeal³, a ruling has binding effect⁴.

1 As to the Panel generally see PARA 1480.

Rules¹ may contain provision conferring power on the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')² to give any direction that appears to the Panel to be necessary in order (1) to restrain a person from acting (or continuing to act) in breach of rules; (2) to restrain a person from doing (or continuing to do) a particular thing, pending determination of whether that or any other conduct of his is or would be a breach of rules; (3) otherwise to secure compliance with rules³.

1492. Sanctions for contravention of rules etc.

Rules¹ may contain provision conferring power on the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')² to impose sanctions on a person who has: (1) acted in breach of rules; or (2) failed to comply with a direction³.

Where such rules⁴ confer power on the Panel to impose a sanction of a kind not provided for by the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers⁵ as it had effect immediately before the passing of the Companies Act 2006⁶ the Panel must prepare a statement (a 'policy statement') of its policy with respect to: (a) the imposition of the sanction in question; and (b) where the sanction is in the nature of a financial penalty, the amount of the penalty that may be imposed⁷.

An element of the policy must be that, in making a decision about any such matter, the Panel has regard to the following factors⁸: (i) the seriousness of the breach or failure in question in relation to the nature of the rule or direction contravened; (ii) the extent to which the breach or failure was deliberate or reckless; (iii) whether the person on whom the sanction is to be imposed is an individual⁹.

The Panel may at any time revise a policy statement¹⁰. The Panel must prepare a draft of any proposed policy statement (or revised policy statement) and consult such persons about the draft as the Panel considers appropriate¹¹. The Panel must publish, in whatever way it considers appropriate, any policy statement (or revised policy statement) that it prepares¹².

In exercising, or deciding whether to exercise, its power to impose a sanction¹³ in the case of any particular breach or failure, the Panel must have regard to any relevant policy statement published and in force at the time when the breach or failure occurred¹⁴.

Takeovers and Mergers/D. APPLICATION AND ENFORCEMENT OF RULES/1493. Failure to comply with rules about bid documentation.

1493. Failure to comply with rules about bid documentation.

Where a takeover bid¹ is made for a company² that has securities³ carrying voting rights⁴ admitted to trading on a regulated market⁵ in the United Kingdom⁶ and where an offer document⁷ published in respect of the bid does not comply with offer document rules⁸, an offence is committed (1) by the person making the bid; and (2) where the person making the bid is a body of persons, by any director⁹, officer¹⁰ or member¹¹ of that body who caused the document to be published¹².

A person commits such an offence¹³ only if (a) he knew that the offer document did not comply, or was reckless as to whether it complied; and (b) he failed to take all reasonable steps to secure that it did comply¹⁴.

Where a response document¹⁵ published in respect of the bid does not comply with response document rules¹⁶, an offence is committed by any director or other officer of the company referred to above¹⁷ who (i) knew that the response document did not comply, or was reckless as to whether it complied; and (ii) failed to take all reasonable steps to secure that it did comply¹⁸.

Where an offence is committed under head (2) above¹⁹ or under heads (i) and (ii) above²⁰ by a company or other body corporate (the 'relevant body') (A) head (2) above has effect as if the reference to a director, officer or member of the person making the bid included a reference to a director, officer or member of the relevant body; (B) heads (i) and (ii) above have effect as if the reference to a director or other officer of the company²¹ included a reference to a director, officer or member of the relevant body²².

A person guilty of such an offence²³ is liable on conviction on indictment or on summary conviction, to a fine²⁴.

Nothing in the provisions above²⁵ affects any power of the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers in relation to the enforcement of its rules²⁶.

1495. Order by court to secure compliance with requirement imposed by rules.

If, on the application of the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')¹, the court² is satisfied (1) that there is a reasonable likelihood that a person will contravene³ a rule-based requirement⁴; or (2) that a person has contravened a rule-based requirement or a disclosure requirement⁵, the court may make any order it thinks fit to secure compliance with the requirement⁶.

Except as provided above⁷, no person has a right to seek an injunction⁸ to prevent a person from contravening (or continuing to contravene) a rule-based requirement or a disclosure requirement⁹.

A statement made by a person in response to (a) a requirement¹⁰ by the Panel to produce documents or information; or (b) an order made by the court¹¹ to secure compliance with such a requirement, may not be used against him in criminal proceedings in which he is charged with a relevant offence¹².

1496. No action for breach of statutory duty etc.

Contravention¹ of a rule-based requirement² or a disclosure requirement³ does not give rise to any right of action for breach of statutory duty⁴.

Contravention of a rule-based requirement does not make any transaction void or unenforceable or (subject to any provision made by rules⁵) affect the validity of any other thing⁶.

1 For these purposes, 'contravention' means failure to comply: Companies Act 2006 s 956(3).

2 As to the meaning of 'rule-based requirement' see PARA 1495 note 4; definition applied by the Companies Act 2006 s 956(3).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(27) THE PANEL ON TAKEOVERS AND MERGERS; ITS CODE/(ii) The Panel on Takeovers and Mergers/D. APPLICATION AND ENFORCEMENT OF RULES/1497. Panel's decisions subject to judicial review.

1497. Panel's decisions subject to judicial review.

Having regard to the fact that the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')¹ performs a public duty, its decisions have been subject to judicial review on the grounds of illegality, irrationality or procedural impropriety². However, save for cases where there has been a breach of natural justice, it has been the practice that the court will allow contemporary decisions of the Panel to take their course and will intervene, if at all, later and in retrospect by means of declaratory orders³ to prevent the Panel from repeating any error or to relieve individuals of the disciplinary consequences of any erroneous finding on breaches of the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Code')⁴.

Nevertheless, because the Companies Act 2006 placed both the Panel and the Code on a statutory basis for the first time⁵, including some scope for the review and appeal of Panel decisions⁶, it seems, on general principles, that these statutory avenues must be exhausted before an application for judicial review may be made by a person so aggrieved.

4 R v Panel on Takeovers and Mergers, ex p Datafin plc [1987] QB 815, [1987] 1 All ER 564, CA. It remains to be seen whether a different approach will be taken by the courts, when asked to consider applications for judicial review of the Panel's conduct, in light of the statutory basis upon which the Panel is now founded (see European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/25 (OJ L142, 30.4.2004, p 12) on takeover bids (see PARA 1481) and the Companies Act 2006 Pt 28 Ch 1 (ss 942-965) (see PARAS 1480 et seq, 1499 et seq)). The test of whether particular acts or decisions of a body, such as the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers, whose constitution, functions and powers are sui generis, should be subject to judicial review is whether, considering the matter in the round, something has gone wrong with that body's procedure such as to cause real injustice and require the intervention of the court: R v Panel on Takeovers and Mergers, ex p Guinness plc [1990] 1 QB 146, [1989] 1 All ER 509, CA (decision whether to adjourn a hearing essentially a matter for the exercise of judicial discretion by the court or tribunal seised of the matter; and, where a right of appeal from the decision-making body existed but was not exercised, the court would grant relief by way of judicial review only in exceptional circumstances). E. DUTIES OF PANEL

1498. Panel's duties in general.

The City Code on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Code')¹ is issued on behalf of the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')² and the Code is kept under review by the Panel and its committees³. The Code is designed principally to ensure that shareholders are treated fairly and are not denied an opportunity to decide on the merits of a takeover and that shareholders of the same class are afforded equivalent treatment by an offeror⁴. The Code also provides an orderly framework within which takeovers are conducted and it is also designed to promote, in conjunction with other regulatory regimes, the integrity of the financial markets⁵.

The Code is not concerned with the financial or commercial advantages or disadvantages of a takeover⁶. These are matters for the company and its shareholders; nor is the Code concerned with those issues, such as competition policy, which are the responsibility of government and other bodies⁷.

The Code has been developed since 1968 to reflect the collective opinion of those professionally involved in the field of takeovers as to appropriate business standards and as to how fairness to shareholders and an orderly framework for takeovers can be achieved⁸. Following the implementation of the Takeovers Directive⁹ by means of the Companies Act 2006¹⁰, the rules set out in the Code have a statutory basis in relation to the United Kingdom and comply with the relevant requirements of the Directive¹¹. The Panel's duties arise specifically with respect to the functioning and operating of the Code and to this end it now has the relevant statutory rule-making power¹².

as a supervisory authority for the purposes of the Takeovers Directive³; (3) any other person or body that exercises functions of a public nature, under legislation in any country or territory outside the United Kingdom⁴, that appear to the Panel to be similar to its own functions or those of the Financial Services Authority⁵.

1501. Directors' obligations in the context of takeover bid or possible bid.

It has been long established under company law that a director occupies a fiduciary position towards the company of which he is a director¹, but it is equally well established that he owes no fiduciary duty towards any individual shareholder in the company². Accordingly, the general law is virtually silent³ as to the duties of a board of directors when faced by a takeover bid for the company beyond the duty to be honest and not to mislead⁴, or as to the duties of the intending acquirer, beyond the duty not to misuse confidential information⁵. Where there are rival bids, directors are not under a duty to advise shareholders to accept the higher offer but, if they decide to advise the shareholders on the merits of the competing bids, they must provide sufficient information and advice to enable shareholders to reach an informed decision and must refrain from giving misleading advice or exercising their fiduciary powers in ways which would prevent shareholders from being able to make an uninhibited choice⁶. Where directors in the exercise of their powers have to consider rival bidders, the interests of the company are the interests of the current shareholders⁷.

There are steps which a company threatened by a takeover bid may take in order to hamper one bidder or prefer another, such as the issue of additional shares⁸, the alteration of voting rights attached to a particular class of shares⁹, or the reduction of the company's capital¹⁰. Some of these steps, particularly the issue of shares, might successfully be challenged as contravening the directors' duty only to exercise powers for the purposes for which they are conferred¹¹, but in many cases the issue could only be set aside, if at all, after considerable litigation, which would deter the making of the offer.

In practice, many of these matters are constrained by the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers¹², and now the Takeovers Directive¹³, and it is a general principle of both the Code and of the Directive that the board of an offeree company must act in the interests of the company as a whole and must not deny the holders of securities the opportunity to decide on the merits of the bid¹⁴. This obligation is reinforced by a director's general duty¹⁵ to act in the way he considers, in good faith, would be most likely to promote the success of the company for the benefit of its members as a whole, having regard (inter alia) to the likely consequences of any decision in the long term, the interests of the company's employees, and the need to act fairly as between members of the company. More specifically, the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers and the Takeovers Directive both require, in certain circumstances, prior shareholder approval of any specified acts which may result in any offer, or bona fide possible offer, being frustrated or the shareholders being denied the opportunity to decide on its merits¹⁶.

2 See PARA 534 et seq.

3 Provisions of the general law which are relevant to takeover bids include the prohibition on insider dealing contained in the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt V (ss 52-64) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE) and the requirements of the rules contained in the Market Conduct Sourcebook (see the Business Standards section of the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance), which provide guidance on the prevention of market abuse. Company law provisions of relevance include the Companies Act 2006 s 218 (shareholder approval required for payment for loss of office on a transfer of undertaking or property: see PARA 580) and s 678 (prohibiting financial assistance for the acquisition of shares in a public company: see PARA 1224); and see eg R v Sinclair [1968] 3 All ER 241, [1968] 1 WLR 1246, CA (conspiracy to cheat and defraud by using company's assets in a manner known to be not in the company's best interests and prejudicial to minority shareholders); Selangor United Rubber Estates Ltd v Cradock (No 3) [1968] 2 All ER 1073, [1968] 1 WLR 1555 (breach of the Companies Act 1948 s 54 (repealed)).

1502. Scope of the Takeovers and Mergers Code.

In determining whether or not the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Code')¹ applies, it is the nature of the company which is the offeree or potential offeree company, or in which control may change or be consolidated, that is relevant². The Code applies to offers for all listed and unlisted public companies (and, where appropriate, statutory and chartered companies) considered by the Panel on Takeovers and Mergers³ to be resident in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man⁴. The Code also applies to offers for certain private companies considered to be so resident and there is also scope for shared jurisdiction between the United Kingdom and other EEA registered and traded companies⁵.

1 As to the Code generally see PARA 1480.

2 See the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers Introduction para 3. As to transactions in particular see PARA 1503.

3 As to the Panel generally see PARA 1480.

4 See the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers Introduction para 3. Generally this means companies or societas Europaea incorporated in and having their registered offices or central management in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man if any of their securities are admitted to trading on a regulated market in the United Kingdom or on any stock exchange in the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man. As to the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man see also PARAS 1482, 1486.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(27) THE PANEL ON TAKEOVERS AND MERGERS; ITS CODE/(iii) The City Code on Takeovers and Mergers/1503. Transactions to which the Code applies.

1503. Transactions to which the Code applies.

Generally the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Code')¹ is concerned with regulating takeover bids and merger transactions of the relevant companies², however effected, including by means of statutory merger or scheme of arrangement³. The Code is also concerned with regulating other transactions (including offers by a parent company for shares in its subsidiary, dual holding company transactions, new share issues, share capital reorganisations and offers to minority shareholders) which have as their objective or potential effect (directly or indirectly) obtaining or consolidating control⁴ of the relevant companies, as well as partial offers⁵ to shareholders for securities in the relevant companies⁶. The Code also applies to unitisation proposals which are in competition with another transaction to which the Code applies⁷.

The Code applies to all the above transactions at whatever stage of their implementation, including possible transactions which have not yet been announced⁸. The Code does not apply to offers for non-voting, non-equity capital unless they are offers required for the rule on offers for convertibles⁹.

In addition to regulating the transactions referred to above, the Code also contains many other types of rules including rules for the regulation of things done in consequence of, or otherwise in relation to, takeovers and about cases where any such takeover is, or has been, contemplated or apprehended or an announcement is made denying that any such takeover is intended¹⁰.

1 As to the Code generally see PARA 1480.

2 As to the companies generally within the scope of the Code see PARA 1502.

3 See the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers Introduction para 3(b). 'Scheme of arrangement' means a transaction effected by means of a scheme of arrangement under the Companies Act 2006 (see PARA 1425 et seq) or similar statutory provisions in the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man: City Code on Takeovers and Mergers Definitions.

4 'Control' means a holding or aggregate holdings of shares carrying 30% or more of the voting rights of a company, irrespective of whether the holding or holdings gives or give de facto control; and 'voting rights' means, except for the purposes of the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers r 11 (see generally PARA 1480 note 3), all the voting rights attributable to the share capital of a company which are currently exercisable at a general meeting: see the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers, Definitions.

5 ie including tender offers pursuant to the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers Appendix 5. 'Offers' means only any public offer (other than by the company itself) made to the holders of the company's securities to acquire those securities (whether mandatory or voluntary) which follows or has as its objective the acquisition of control of the company concerned, and references in the Code to 'takeovers' and 'offers' include all transactions subject to the Code as referred to in the Introduction para 3(b).

As to dual jurisdiction see the Introduction para 3(d), as to re-registration of a public company as a private company see the Introduction para 3(e), and as to Code responsibilities and obligations including the application of the Code in the course of a takeover of advisers, directors, officers, employees, representatives and other persons see the Introduction para 3(f).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(27) THE PANEL ON TAKEOVERS AND MERGERS; ITS CODE/(iii) The City Code on Takeovers and Mergers/1504. General Principles of the Code.

1504. General Principles of the Code.

The City Code on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Code')¹ is based upon a number of General Principles, which are essentially statements of standards of commercial behaviour². These General Principles are the same as the general principles set out in the Takeovers Directive³. They apply to takeovers and other matters to which the Code applies. They are expressed in broad general terms and the Code does not define the precise extent of, or the limitations on, their application⁴. They are applied in accordance with their spirit in order to achieve their underlying purpose⁵. In addition, the Code contains rules which, although expressed in less general terms than the General Principles, are not framed in technical language and, like the General Principles, the rules are to be interpreted to achieve their underlying purpose⁶. Therefore, similarly their spirit must be also observed as well as their letter⁷.

The following General Principles should be observed:

- 780 (1) all holders of the securities of an offeree company of the same class must be afforded equivalent treatment; moreover, if a person acquires control of a company, the other holders of securities must be protected⁸;
- 781 (2) the holders of the securities of an offeree company must have sufficient time and information to enable them to reach a properly informed decision on the bid; where it advises the holders of securities, the board of the offeree company must give its views on the effects of implementation of the bid on employment, conditions of employment and the locations of the company's places of business⁹;
- 782 (3) the board of an offeree company must act in the interests of the company as a whole and must not deny the holders of securities the opportunity to decide on the merits of the bid¹⁰;
- 783 (4) false markets must not be created in the securities of the offeree company, of the offeror company or of any other company concerned by the bid in such a way that the rise or fall of the prices of the securities becomes artificial and the normal functioning of the markets is distorted¹¹;
- 784 (5) an offeror must announce a bid only after ensuring that he/she can fulfil in full any cash consideration, if such is offered, and after taking all reasonable measures to secure the implementation of any other type of consideration¹²;
- 785 (6) an offeree company must not be hindered in the conduct of its affairs for longer than is reasonable by a bid for its securities¹³.

1 As to the Code generally see PARA 1480.

2 See the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers Introduction para 2(b); but see also note 3.

3 These General Principles must correspond to the general principles set out in European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/25 (OJ L142, 30.4.2004, p 12) on takeover bids art 3: see the Companies Act 2006 s 943(1); and PARA 1487 note 2.

1505. Breaches of the Code.

The Panel on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Panel')¹ has disciplinary rules in connection with breaches and alleged breaches of the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers (the 'Code')². The Executive of the Panel may itself deal with a disciplinary matter where the person who is to be subject to the disciplinary action agrees the facts and the action proposed by the Executive but in any other case, where it considers that there has been a breach of the Code, the Executive may commence disciplinary proceedings before the Hearings Committee³. The person concerned is informed in writing of the alleged breach and of the matters which the Executive will present to the Hearings Committee; and disciplinary actions are conducted in accordance with the Rules of Procedure of the Hearings Committee⁴.

If the Hearings Committee finds a breach of the Code or of a ruling of the Panel, it may: (1) issue a private statement of censure; (2) issue a public statement of censure; (3) suspend or withdraw any exemption, approval or other special status which the Panel has granted to a person, or impose conditions on the continuing enjoyment of such exemption, approval or special status, in respect of all or part of the activities to which such exemption, approval or special status relates; (4) report the offender's conduct to a United Kingdom or overseas regulatory authority or professional body, most notably the Financial Services Authority⁵, so that that authority or body can consider whether to take disciplinary or enforcement action⁶; or (5) publish a Panel Statement indicating that the offender is someone who, in the Hearings Committee's opinion, is not likely to comply with the Code⁷. These disciplinary rules and related matters are now reinforced by the Companies Act 2006⁸.

Any party to the hearing before the Hearings Committee (or any person denied permission to be a party to the hearing before the Hearings Committee) may appeal to the Takeover Appeal Board against any ruling of the Hearings Committee or the chairman of the hearing (including in respect of procedural directions)⁹. Like other aspects of the Code this right of review or appeal also now has statutory backing in the Companies Act 2006¹⁰.

- 5 As to the Financial Services Authority see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARAS 4, 6 et seq. Other bodies likely to be informed include the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS) and the Stock Exchange (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 75).
- 6 For example, the Financial Services Authority has power to take certain actions against an authorised person or an approved person who fails to observe proper standards of market conduct, including the power to fine.
- 7 See the City Code on Takeovers and Mergers Introduction para 11(a). In regard to head (4) in the text the rules of the Financial Services Authority and certain professional bodies oblige their members, in certain circumstances, not to act for the person in question in a transaction subject to the Code, including a dealing in relevant securities requiring disclosure under r 8 (so called 'cold-shouldering') (see generally PARA 1480 note 3). For example, the Authority's rules require a person authorised under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 not to act, or continue to act, for any person in connection with a transaction to which the Code applies if the firm has reasonable grounds for believing that the person in question, or his principal, is not complying or is not likely to comply with the Code: see Market Conduct r 4.3.1 (contained in the Business Standards section of the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance).

(i) Opting in and Opting out of Takeovers Provisions

1507. Company's power to make opting-in and opting-out resolutions.

A company¹ may by special resolution² (an 'opting-in resolution') opt in for the purposes of the provisions relating to impediments to takeovers³ if the following three conditions are met in relation to the company⁴:

- 786 (1) the first condition is that the company has voting shares⁵ admitted to trading on a regulated market⁶;
- 787 (2) the second condition is that:
- 155 390. (a) the company's articles of association⁷ do not contain any such restrictions as are mentioned in article 11 of the Takeovers Directive⁸ or, if they do contain any such restrictions, provide for the restrictions not to apply at a time when, or in circumstances in which, they would be disapplied by that article⁹; and
- 391. (b) those articles do not contain any other provision which would be incompatible with that article¹⁰;
- 156 788 (3) the third condition is that:
- 157 392. (a) no shares conferring special rights in the company are held by a minister¹¹, a nominee of, or any other person acting on behalf of, a minister¹², or a company directly or indirectly controlled by a minister¹³; and
- 393. (b) no such rights are exercisable by or on behalf of a minister under any enactment¹⁴.

A company may revoke an opting-in resolution by a further special resolution (an 'opting-out resolution')¹⁵.

An opting-in resolution or an opting-out resolution must specify the date from which it is to have effect (the 'effective date')¹⁶. The second and third conditions above must be met at the time when an opting-in resolution is passed, but the first one does not need to be met until the effective date¹⁷. The effective date of an opting-out resolution may not be earlier than the first anniversary of the date on which a copy of the opting-in resolution was forwarded to the registrar¹⁸. Where a company has passed an opting-in resolution, any alteration of its articles of association that would prevent the second condition above from being met is of no effect until the effective date of an opting-out resolution passed by the company¹⁹.

Where a takeover bid¹ is made for an opted-in company², an agreement³ is invalid in so far as it places any restriction:

- 789 (1) on the transfer to the offeror⁴, or at his direction to another person, of shares in the company during the offer period⁵;
- 790 (2) on the transfer to any person of shares in the company at a time during the offer period when the offeror holds shares amounting to not less than 75 per cent in value of all the voting shares⁶ in the company⁷;
- 791 (3) on rights to vote at a general meeting of the company⁸ that decides whether to take any action which might result in the frustration of the bid⁹;
- 792 (4) on rights to vote at a general meeting of the company that is the first such meeting to be held after the end of the offer period¹⁰, and is held at a time when the offeror holds shares amounting to not less than 75 per cent in value of all the voting shares in the company¹¹.

If a person suffers loss as a result of any act or omission that would (but for these provisions) be a breach of such an agreement, he is entitled to compensation, of such amount as the court¹² considers just and equitable, from any person who would (but for these provisions) be liable to him for committing or inducing the breach¹³.

Where a takeover bid is made for an opted-in company, the offeror may by making a request to the directors¹⁴ of the company require them to call a general meeting of the company if, at the date at which the request is made, he holds shares amounting to not less than 75 per cent in value of all the voting shares¹⁵ in the company¹⁶.

6 A reference in the Companies Act 2006 s 968 to voting shares in the company does not include (1) debentures (s 968(8)(a)); or (2) shares that, under the company's articles of association, do not normally carry rights to vote at its general meetings (for example, shares carrying rights to vote that, under those articles, arise only where specified pecuniary advantages are not provided) (s 968(8)(b)). (ii) Takeover Offers: Squeeze-outs and Sell-outs

A. TAKEOVER OFFERS FOR THESE PURPOSES

1511. Meaning of 'takeover offer' for these purposes.

For the purposes of the provisions relating to 'squeeze-out' and 'sell out'¹ an offer to acquire shares² in a company is a 'takeover offer' if the following two conditions are satisfied in relation to the offer³:

- 793 (1) the first condition is that it is an offer to acquire:
394. (a) all the shares in a company⁴; or
395. (b) where there is more than one class of shares in a company, all the shares of one or more classes⁵,
396. other than shares that at the date of the offer are already held by the offeror⁶.
160
794 (2) the second condition is that the terms of the offer are the same: (a) in relation to all the shares to which the offer relates⁷; or (b) where the shares to which the offer relates include shares of different classes, in relation to all the shares of each class⁸.

Where the terms of an offer make provision for their revision and for acceptances on the previous terms to be treated as acceptances on the revised terms, then, if the terms of the offer are revised in accordance with that provision the revision is not to be regarded⁹ as the making of a fresh offer¹⁰.

1 le the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 28 Ch 3 (ss 974-991): see PARA 1512 et seq. The Companies Act 2006 s 987(4) (rights and obligations of offeror in takeover offer made by two or more persons jointly) is subject to ss 974-976: see s 987(4), (7); and PARA 1520.

2 In the Companies Act 2006 s 974(1)-(3) (see the text to notes 3-8) 'shares' means shares, other than relevant treasury shares, that have been allotted on the date of the offer (but see s 974(5) below): s 974(4). A takeover offer may include among the shares to which it relates: (1) all or any shares that are allotted after the date of the offer but before a specified date (s 974(5)(a)); (2) all or any relevant treasury shares that cease to be held as treasury shares before a specified date (s 974(5)(b)); (3) all or any other relevant treasury shares (s 974(5)(c)). 'Relevant treasury shares' means shares that (a) are held by the company as treasury shares on the date of the offer (s 974(6)(a)); or (b) become shares held by the company as treasury shares after that date but before a specified date (s 974(6)(b)); and 'specified date' means a date specified in or determined in accordance with the terms of the offer (s 974(6)). As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1042. As to the meaning of 'treasury share' see PARA 1251. 'Company' means the company whose shares are the subject of a takeover offer: s 991(1). 'Date of the offer' means (i) where the offer is published, the date of publication; (ii) where the offer is not published, or where any notices of the offer are given before the date of publication, the date when notices of the offer (or the first such notices) are given; and references to the date of the offer are to be read in accordance with s 974(7) (revision of offer terms: see the text to notes 9-10) where that applies: s 991(1).

For the purposes of Pt 28 Ch 3 (ss 974-991) securities of a company are treated as shares in the company if they are convertible into or entitle the holder to subscribe for such shares; and references to the holder of shares or a shareholder are to be read accordingly: s 989(1). Section 989(1) is not to be read as requiring any securities to be treated: (A) as shares of the same class as those into which they are convertible or for which the holder is entitled to subscribe (s 989(2)(a)); or (B) as shares of the same class as other securities by reason only that the shares into which they are convertible or for which the holder is entitled to subscribe are of the same class (s 989(2)(b)). For the purposes of Pt 28 Ch 3 (ss 974-991) debentures issued by a company that has voting shares, or debentures carrying voting rights, which are admitted to trading on a regulated market, are treated as shares in the company if they carry voting rights: s 990(1), (2). In relation to debentures so treated as shares references to the holder of shares or a shareholder are to be read accordingly (s 990(3)(a)); and references to shares being allotted are to be read as references to debentures being issued (s 990(3)(b)). As to the meaning of 'debenture' see PARA 1299. 'Voting shares' means shares carrying voting rights; and 'voting rights' means rights to vote at general meetings of the company, including rights that arise only in certain circumstances: s 991(1). As to general meetings see PARA 1653.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 ss 974-976, 989, 990 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 14: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 974(2)(b). As to classes of shares generally see PARA 1057 et seq.

6 Companies Act 2006 s 974(2). Subject to s 975(2), the reference to shares already held by the offeror includes a reference to shares that he has contracted to acquire, whether unconditionally or subject to conditions being met: s 975(1). The reference to shares already held by the offeror does not include a reference to shares that are the subject of a contract (1) intended to secure that the holder of the shares will accept the offer when it is made (s 975(2)(a)); and (2) entered into by deed and for no consideration (s 975(2)(b)(i)), for consideration of negligible value (s 975(2)(b)(ii)), or for consideration consisting of a promise by the offeror to make the offer (s 975(2)(b)(iii)). The condition in s 974(2) is treated as satisfied where the offer does not extend to shares that associates of the offeror hold or have contracted to acquire (whether unconditionally or subject to conditions being met) (s 975(4)(a)), and the condition would be satisfied if the offer did extend to those shares (s 975(4)(b)). For further provision about such shares see s 977(2) (PARA 1513): s 975(4). 'Offeror' means (subject to s 987: see PARA 1520) the person making a takeover offer: s 991(1). As to the meaning of 'associate' see PARA 1512. A person contracts unconditionally to acquire shares if his entitlement under the contract to acquire them is not (or is no longer) subject to conditions or if all conditions to which it was subject have been met; and a reference to a contract becoming unconditional is to be read accordingly: s 991(2).

7 Companies Act 2006 s 974(3)(a). See also note 8.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 974(3)(b). The condition in s 974(3) is treated as satisfied where the following provisions apply (s 976(1)):

2215 (1) shares carry an entitlement to a particular dividend which other shares of the same class, by reason of being allotted later, do not carry (s 976(2)(a)), there is a difference in the value of consideration offered for the shares allotted earlier as against that offered for those allotted later (s 976(2)(b)), that difference merely reflects the difference in entitlement to the dividend (s 976(2)(c)), and the condition in s 974(3) would be satisfied but for that difference (s 976(2)(d));

2216 (2) (a) the law of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom precludes an offer of consideration in the form, or any of the forms, specified in the terms of the offer (the 'specified form') (s 976(3)(a)(i)), or precludes it except after compliance by the offeror with conditions with which he is unable to comply or which he regards as unduly onerous (s 976(3)(a)(ii));

2217 (b) the persons to whom an offer of consideration in the specified form is precluded are able to receive consideration in another form that is of substantially equivalent value (s 976(3)(b)); and 2218 (c) the condition in s 974(3) would be satisfied but for the fact that an offer of consideration in the specified form to those persons is precluded (s 976(3)(c)).

As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. As to the meaning of 'person' see PARA 311 note 2.

9 Ie for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 28 Ch 3 (ss 974-991).

10 Companies Act 2006 s 976(7)(a). In such a case, references in Pt 28 Ch 3 (ss 974-991) to the date of the offer are accordingly to be read as references to the date of the original offer: s 976(7)(b).

1512. Meaning of 'associate' for these purposes.

In the provisions relating to 'squeeze-out' and 'sell out'¹ 'associate', in relation to an offeror², means:

- 795 (1) a nominee of the offeror³;
- 796 (2) a holding company⁴, subsidiary or fellow subsidiary of the offeror or a nominee of such a holding company, subsidiary or fellow subsidiary⁵;
- 797 (3) a body corporate in which the offeror is substantially interested⁶;
- 798 (4) a person⁷ who is, or is a nominee of, a party to a share acquisition agreement with the offeror⁸; or

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 988 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 14: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

4 As to the meaning of 'holding company' see PARA 25.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 988(1)(b). For these purposes a company is a fellow subsidiary of another body corporate if both are subsidiaries of the same body corporate but neither is a subsidiary of the other: s 988(2). As to the meaning of 'company' see PARA 24. As to the meaning of 'body corporate' see PARA 1 note 5.

6 Companies Act 2006 s 988(1)(c). For these purposes an offeror has a substantial interest in a body corporate if: (1) the body or its directors are accustomed to act in accordance with his directions or instructions (s 988(3)(a)); or (2) he is entitled to exercise or control the exercise of one-third or more of the voting power at general meetings of the body (s 988(3)(b)). Section 823(2), (3) (which contains provision about when a person is treated as entitled to exercise or control the exercise of voting power: see PARA 439) applies for these purposes as it applies for the purposes of that section: s 988(3). As to the meaning of 'director' see PARA 478. As to general meetings see PARA 629.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 988(1)(d). For these purposes an agreement is a share acquisition agreement if:

2220 (2) it includes provisions imposing obligations or restrictions on any one or more of the parties to it with respect to their use, retention or disposal of such shares, or their interests in such shares, acquired in pursuance of the agreement (whether or not together with any other shares to which the offer relates or any other interests of theirs in such shares) (s 988(4)(b)); and 2221 (3) it is not an excluded agreement (s 988(4)(c)).

An agreement is an 'excluded agreement': (a) if it is not legally binding, unless it involves mutuality in the undertakings, expectations or understandings of the parties to it (s 988(5)(a)); or (b) if it is an agreement to underwrite or sub-underwrite an offer of shares in a company, provided the agreement is confined to that purpose and any matters incidental to it (s 988(5)(b)). The reference in s 988(4)(b) (see head (2) above) to the use of interests in shares is to the exercise of any rights or of any control or influence arising from those interests (including the right to enter into an agreement for the exercise, or for control of the exercise, of any of those rights by another person): s 988(6). As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1042; and see also PARA 1511 note 2. 'Agreement' includes any agreement or arrangement; and references to provisions of an agreement include (i) undertakings, expectations or understandings operative under an arrangement; and (ii) any provision whether express or implied and whether absolute or not: s 988(7).

9 'Civil partnership' means a civil partnership which exists under or by virtue of the Civil Partnership Act 2004 (and any reference to a 'civil partner' is to be read accordingly): Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (definition added by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 261(1), Sch 27 para 59). Subject as provided¹, where a takeover offer² is made and, during the period beginning with the date of the offer³ and ending when the offer can no longer be accepted, the offeror⁴ acquires or unconditionally contracts⁵ to acquire any of the shares⁶ to which the offer relates⁷, but does not do so by virtue of acceptances of the offer⁸, those shares are treated for the purposes of the provisions relating to 'squeeze-out' and 'sell out'⁹ as excluded from those to which the offer relates¹⁰. For these purposes shares that an associate¹¹ of the offeror holds or has contracted¹² to acquire, whether at the date of the offer or subsequently, are not treated as shares to which the offer relates, even if the offer extends to such shares¹³.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(28) TAKEOVER OFFERS/(ii) Takeover Offers: Squeeze-outs and Sell-outs/A. TAKEOVER OFFERS FOR THESE PURPOSES/1514. Effect of impossibility etc of communicating or accepting offer.

1514. Effect of impossibility etc of communicating or accepting offer.

Where there are holders of shares¹ in a company to whom an offer to acquire shares in the company² is not communicated, that does not prevent the offer from being a takeover offer³ for the purposes of the provisions relating to 'squeeze-out' and 'sell out'⁴ if:

- 800 (1) those shareholders have no registered address⁵ in the United Kingdom⁶;
- 801 (2) the offer was not communicated to those shareholders in order not to contravene the law of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom⁷; and
- 802 (3) either the offer is published in the Gazette⁸, or the offer can be inspected, or a copy of it obtained, at a place in an EEA state⁹ or on a website, and a notice is published in the Gazette specifying the address of that place or website¹⁰.

Where an offer is made to acquire shares in a company and there are persons¹¹ for whom, by reason of the law of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom, it is impossible to accept the offer, or more difficult to do so, that does not prevent the offer from being a takeover offer¹².

It is not to be inferred (a) that an offer which is not communicated to every holder of shares in the company cannot be a takeover offer unless the requirements of heads (1) to (3) above are met¹³; or (b) that an offer which is impossible, or more difficult, for certain persons to accept cannot be a takeover offer for those purposes unless the reason for the impossibility or difficulty is the one mentioned¹⁴ above¹⁵.

12 Companies Act 2006 s 978(2).

13 Companies Act 2006 s 978(3)(a). Under the Companies Act 1985, it was held that the validity of a takeover offer depends on the primary contractual terms being the same for all shareholders, not the mechanics of the acceptance of the offer; and such an offer need not be communicated to each and every shareholder, provided that all shareholders have the opportunity to accept it: see Re Joseph Holt plc, Winpar Holdings Ltd v Joseph Holt Group plc [2001] EWCA Civ 770, [2001] 2 BCLC 604. The Companies Act 2006 s 978(3)(a) confirms that position.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(28) TAKEOVER OFFERS/(ii) Takeover Offers: Squeeze-outs and Sell-outs/B. SQUEEZE-OUT/1515. Right of offeror to buy out minority shareholder.

B. SQUEEZE-OUT

1515. Right of offeror to buy out minority shareholder.

In a case where a takeover offer¹ does not relate to shares of different classes², if the offeror³ has, by virtue of acceptances of the offer, acquired or unconditionally contracted⁴ to acquire: (1) not less than 90 per cent in value of the shares to which the offer relates⁵; and (2) in a case where the shares to which the offer relates are voting shares⁶, not less than 90 per cent of the voting rights carried by those shares⁷, he may give notice to the holder of any shares to which the offer relates which the offeror has not acquired or unconditionally contracted to acquire that he desires to acquire those shares⁸.

In a case where a takeover offer relates to shares of different classes⁹, if the offeror has, by virtue of acceptances of the offer, acquired or unconditionally contracted to acquire (a) not less than 90 per cent in value of the shares of any class to which the offer relates¹⁰; and (b) in a case where the shares of that class are voting shares, not less than 90 per cent of the voting rights carried by those shares¹¹, he may give notice to the holder of any shares of that class to which the offer relates which the offeror has not acquired or unconditionally contracted to acquire that he desires to acquire those shares¹².

In the case of a takeover offer which includes among the shares to which it relates shares that are allotted after the date of the offer¹³, or relevant treasury shares¹⁴ that cease to be held as treasury shares after the date of the offer¹⁵, the offeror's entitlement to give a notice under the above provisions¹⁶ on any particular date must be determined as if the shares to which the offer relates did not include any allotted, or ceasing to be held as treasury shares, on or after that date¹⁷. Where the requirements for the giving of any such notice are satisfied¹⁸, and there are shares in the company¹⁹ which the offeror, or an associate²⁰ of his, has contracted to acquire subject to conditions being met, and in relation to which the contract has not become unconditional²¹, the offeror's entitlement to give the notice must be determined as if the shares to which the offer relates included those shares²².

Where:

803 (i) a takeover offer is made²³;

804 (ii) during the period beginning with the date of the offer and ending when the offer can no longer be accepted, the offeror acquires or unconditionally contracts to acquire any of the shares to which the offer relates²⁴, but does not do so by virtue of acceptances of the offer²⁵; and 805 (iii) the specified conditions apply²⁶, then for the purposes of these provisions²⁷ those shares are not excluded²⁸ from those to which the offer relates, and the offeror is treated as having acquired or contracted to acquire them by virtue of acceptances of the offer²⁹. Likewise, where:

- 806 (A) a takeover offer is made³⁰;
- 807 (B) during the period beginning with the date of the offer and ending when the offer can no longer be accepted, an associate of the offeror acquires or unconditionally contracts to acquire any of the shares to which the offer relates³¹; and
- 808 (C) the specified conditions apply³², then for the purposes of these provisions³³ those shares are not excluded³⁴ from those to which the offer relates³⁵.

A notice under the above provisions must be given in the prescribed manner³⁶. No notice may be given after the end of the period of three months³⁷ beginning with the day after the last day on which the offer can be accepted³⁸, or the period of six months beginning with the date of the offer, where that period ends earlier and the offer is one in respect of which the time allowed for acceptance of the offer is not governed by statutory rules³⁹. At the time when the offeror first gives a notice in relation to an offer, he must send to the company a copy of the notice⁴⁰, and a statutory declaration by him in the prescribed form, stating that the conditions for the giving of the notice are satisfied⁴¹. A person commits an offence⁴² if he fails to send a copy of a notice or a statutory declaration as so required⁴³, or he makes such a declaration knowing it to be false or without having reasonable grounds for believing it to be true⁴⁴.

1516. Effect of notice to buy out minority shareholder.

Subject to the provisions relating to applications to the court¹, where the offeror² gives a shareholder a notice³ to buy him out⁴ the offeror is entitled and bound to acquire the shares⁵ to which the notice relates on the terms of the offer⁶.

Where the terms of an offer are such as to give the shareholder a choice of consideration, the notice must give particulars of the choice and state (1) that the shareholder may, within six weeks from the date of the notice, indicate his choice by a written communication sent to the offeror at an address specified in the notice⁷; and (2) which consideration specified in the offer will apply if he does not indicate a choice⁸; and this applies whether or not any time-limit or other conditions applicable to the choice under the terms of the offer can still be complied with⁹. If the consideration offered to or (as the case may be) chosen by the shareholder is not cash and the offeror is no longer able to provide it¹⁰, or was to have been provided by a third party who is no longer bound or able to provide it¹¹, the consideration is to be taken to consist of an amount of cash, payable by the offeror, which at the date of the notice is equivalent to the consideration offered or (as the case may be) chosen¹².

At the end of six weeks from the date of the notice the offeror must immediately send a copy of the notice to the company¹³, and pay or transfer to the company the consideration for the shares to which the notice relates¹⁴. The company must hold any money or other consideration thus received by it on trust for the person who, before the offeror acquired them, was entitled to the shares in respect of which the money or other consideration was received¹⁵.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 981(1). Under the law as it stood prior to the Companies Act 2006 it was held that such provisions cannot be used to enable the majority simply to expropriate a small minority by arranging an ostensible takeover (see Re Bugle Press Ltd, Re Houses and Estates Ltd [1961] Ch 270, [1960] 3 All ER 791, CA, transferee company a mere alias for majority shareholder); and that a dissenting minority may properly complain if they are being subjected to a compulsory purchase as a result of a breach on the part of the board of the company of the duty to be honest and not to mislead shareholders (see Gething v Kilner [1972] 1 All ER 1166, [1972] 1 WLR 337, where, in the absence of bad faith on the part of the boards of the two companies, the court refused to grant interlocutory injunctions restraining the board of the transferor company from recommending acceptance of the offer and the transferee company from declaring the offer unconditional; cf Coleman v Myers [1977] 2 NZLR 225, NZ CA, in certain circumstances the directors may owe a duty to disclose matters of which they are aware, or have reason to believe, that their shareholders are inadequately informed). See PARA 1501.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 ss 981, 982 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 14: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

10 Companies Act 2006 s 981(5)(a).

12 Companies Act 2006 s 981(5).

13 Companies Act 2006 s 981(6)(a). If the shares to which the notice relates are registered, the copy of the notice sent to the company under s 981(6)(a) must be accompanied by an instrument of transfer executed on behalf of the holder of the shares by a person appointed by the offeror: s 981(7). On receipt of that instrument the company must register the offeror as the holder of those shares: s 981(7). If the shares to which the notice relates are transferable by the delivery of warrants or other instruments, the copy of the notice sent to the company under s 981(6)(a) must be accompanied by a statement to that effect; and on receipt of that statement the company must issue the offeror with warrants or other instruments in respect of the shares, and those already in issue in respect of the shares become void: s 981(8). As to the meaning of 'company' see PARA 1511 note 2. As to the registration of shares see PARA 335. As to the meaning of 'person' see PARA 311 note 2.

In relation to any uncertificated units of a security (other than a wholly dematerialised security) to which a notice given under the Companies Act 2006 s 979 relates (see PARA 1515), then, in place of the provisions of s 981(7), see the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 42 (amended by SI 2007/1093; SI 2009/1889).

14 Companies Act 2006 s 981(6)(b). Where the consideration consists of shares or securities to be allotted by the offeror, the reference in s 981(6)(b) to the transfer of the consideration is to be read as a reference to the allotment of the shares or securities to the company: s 981(6).

15 Companies Act 2006 s 981(9). Where an offeror pays or transfers consideration to the company under s 981(6) the company must pay into a separate complying bank account any money it receives under s 981(6)(b) (see the text to note 14) (s 982(1), (2)(a)), and any dividend or other sum accruing from any other consideration it receives under that provision (s 982(1), (2)(b)). A bank account is a complying account if the balance on the account bears interest at an appropriate rate (see s 982(2), (3)(a)), and can be withdrawn by such notice (if any) as is appropriate (see s 982(2), (3)(b)). If the person entitled to the consideration held on trust by virtue of s 981(9) cannot be found (s 982(4)(a)), and reasonable inquiries have been made at reasonable intervals to find the person (see s 982(4)(b), (5)(a)) and 12 years have elapsed since the consideration was received, or the company is wound up (see s 982(4)(b), (5)(b)), the consideration (together with any interest, dividend or other benefit that has accrued from it) must be paid into court (s 982(4)). The expenses of any such inquiries may be paid out of the money or other property held on trust for the person to whom the inquiry relates: s 982(9). Separate provision is made in the case of a company registered in Scotland: see s 982(6)-(8).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(28) TAKEOVER OFFERS/(ii) Takeover Offers: Squeeze-outs and Sell-outs/C. SELL-OUT/1517. Right of minority shareholder to be bought out by offeror.

C. SELL-OUT

1517. Right of minority shareholder to be bought out by offeror.

In a case where a takeover offer¹ relates to all the shares² in a company³, the holder of any voting shares⁴ to which the offer relates who has not accepted the offer may require the offeror⁵ to acquire those shares if, at any time before the end of the period within which the offer can be accepted: (1) the offeror has by virtue of acceptances of the offer acquired or unconditionally contracted⁶ to acquire some (but not all) of the shares to which the offer relates⁷; and (2) those shares, with or without any other shares in the company which he has acquired or contracted to acquire⁸ (whether unconditionally or subject to conditions being met) amount to not less than 90 per cent in value of all the voting shares⁹ in the company¹⁰, and carry not less than 90 per cent of the voting rights¹¹ in the company¹².

In a case where a takeover offer relates to all the shares in a company¹³, the holder of any non-voting shares¹⁴ to which the offer relates who has not accepted the offer may require the offeror to acquire those shares if, at any time before the end of the period within which the offer can be accepted (a) the offeror has by virtue of acceptances of the offer acquired or unconditionally contracted to acquire some (but not all) of the shares to which the offer relates¹⁵; and (b) those shares, with or without any other shares in the company which he has acquired or contracted to acquire (whether unconditionally or subject to conditions being met), amount to not less than 90 per cent in value of all the shares¹⁶ in the company¹⁷.

If a takeover offer relates to shares of one or more classes¹⁸ and at any time before the end of the period within which the offer can be accepted:

- 809 (i) the offeror has by virtue of acceptances of the offer acquired or unconditionally contracted to acquire some (but not all) of the shares of any class to which the offer relates¹⁹; and
- 810 (ii) those shares, with or without any other shares of that class which he has acquired or contracted to acquire (whether unconditionally or subject to conditions being met) amount to not less than 90 per cent in value of all the shares of that class²⁰, and in a case where the shares of that class are voting shares, carry not less than 90 per cent of the voting rights carried by the shares of that class²¹, the holder of any shares of that class to which the offer relates who has not accepted the offer may require the offeror to acquire those shares²².

The rights conferred on a shareholder by the above provisions²³ are exercisable by a written communication addressed to the offeror²⁴. The rights are not exercisable after the end of the period of three months²⁵ from the end of the period within which the offer can be accepted²⁶, or, if later, the date of the notice required to be given by the offeror²⁷. Within one month of the time specified²⁸, the offeror must give any shareholder who has not accepted the offer notice in the prescribed²⁹ manner of the rights that are exercisable³⁰ by the shareholder³¹ and the period within which the rights are exercisable³²; and if the notice is given before the end of the period within which the offer can be accepted, it must state that the offer is still open for acceptance³³. An offeror who fails to comply with these provisions³⁴ commits an offence³⁵.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(28) TAKEOVER OFFERS/(ii) Takeover Offers: Squeeze-outs and Sell-outs/C. SELL-OUT/1518. Effect of requirement by minority shareholder to be bought out.

1518. Effect of requirement by minority shareholder to be bought out.

Subject to the provisions relating to applications to the court¹, where a shareholder exercises his rights to be bought out² in respect of any shares³ held by him⁴, the offeror is entitled and bound to acquire those shares on the terms of the offer or on such other terms as may be agreed⁵.

Where the terms of an offer are such as to give the shareholder a choice of consideration, the shareholder may indicate his choice when requiring the offeror to acquire the shares⁶, and the notice given to the shareholder⁷ must give particulars of the choice and of the rights so conferred⁸ and may state which consideration specified in the offer will apply if he does not indicate a choice⁹.

If the consideration offered to or (as the case may be) chosen by the shareholder:

- 811 (1) is not cash and the offeror is no longer able to provide it¹⁰; or
- 812 (2) was to have been provided by a third party who is no longer bound or able to provide it¹¹, the consideration is to be taken to consist of an amount of cash, payable by the offeror, which at the date when the shareholder requires the offeror to acquire the shares is equivalent to the consideration offered or (as the case may be) chosen¹².

1 Is subject to the Companies Act 2006 s 986: see PARA 1519. The Companies Act 2006 s 987(4) (rights and obligations of offeror in takeover offer made by two or more persons jointly) is subject to s 985: see s 987(4), (5); and PARA 1520.

2222 (1) a shareholder exercises rights conferred on him by s 983(2), (3) or (4) (see PARA 1517) (s 983(6)(a));

2223 (2) at the time when he does so, there are shares in the company which the offeror has contracted to acquire subject to conditions being met, and in relation to which the contract has not become unconditional (s 983(6)(b)); and

the shareholder is treated for the purposes of s 985 as not having exercised his rights under s 983 unless the requirement imposed by s 983(2)(b), (3)(b) or (4)(b) (as the case may be) would be satisfied if (a) the reference in s 983(2)(b), (3)(b) or (4)(b) (as the case may be) to other shares in the company which the offeror has contracted to acquire unconditionally or subject to conditions being met were a reference to such shares which he has unconditionally contracted to acquire (s 983(7)(a)); and (b) the reference in s 983(2), (3) or (4) (as the case may be) to the period within which the offer can be accepted were a reference to the period referred to in s 984(2) (see PARA 1517) (s 983(7)(b)). D. APPLICATIONS TO THE COURT

1519. Applications to the court.

Where a notice is given to a shareholder to buy him out¹ the court² may, on an application made by him³, order that the offeror⁴ is not entitled and bound to acquire the shares⁵ to which the notice relates⁶, or that the terms on which the offeror is entitled and bound to acquire the shares must be such as the court thinks fit⁷.

Where a shareholder exercises his rights to be bought out⁸ in respect of any shares held by him, the court may, on an application made by him or the offeror, order that the terms on which the offeror is entitled and bound to acquire the shares must be such as the court thinks fit⁹.

On any such application¹⁰: (1) the court may not require consideration of a higher value than that specified in the terms of the offer (the 'offer value') to be given for the shares to which the application relates unless the holder of the shares shows that the offer value would be unfair¹¹; (2) the court may not require consideration of a lower value than the offer value to be given for the shares¹². No order for costs or expenses may be made against a shareholder making any such application unless the court considers that: (a) the application was unnecessary, improper or vexatious¹³; (b) there has been unreasonable delay in making the application¹⁴; or (c) there has been unreasonable conduct on the shareholder's part in conducting the proceedings on the application¹⁵.

A shareholder who has made an application must give notice of the application to the offeror¹⁶. An offeror who is given notice of an application must give a copy of the notice to any person¹⁷ (other than the applicant) to whom a notice has been given¹⁸ previously¹⁹, and any person who has exercised his rights²⁰ to be bought out²¹. An offeror who makes an application²² must give notice of the application to any person to whom a notice has been given²³ previously²⁴, and any person who has exercised his rights²⁵ to be bought out²⁶.

Where a takeover offer has not been accepted to the extent necessary for entitling the offeror to give the statutory notice²⁷ the court may, on an application made by him, make an order authorising him to give such notice if it is satisfied that: (i) the offeror has after reasonable inquiry been unable to trace one or more of the persons holding shares to which the offer relates²⁸; (ii) the statutory requirements²⁹ would have been met if the person, or all the persons, mentioned in head (i) above had accepted the offer³⁰; and (iii) the consideration offered is fair and reasonable³¹. However, the court may not make such an order unless it considers that it is just and equitable to do so having regard, in particular, to the number of shareholders who have been traced but who have not accepted the offer³².

1 le under the Companies Act 2006 s 979: see PARA 1515. The Companies Act 2006 s 987(4) (rights and obligations of offeror in takeover offer made by two or more persons jointly) is subject to s 986: see s 987(4), (5), (10); and PARA 1520.

2 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 212 note 1.

3 An application must be made within six weeks from the date on which the notice was given: Companies Act 2006 s 986(2). If an application to the court is pending at the end of that period, s 981(6) (see PARA 1516) does not have effect until the application has been disposed of: s 986(2). The court will not make an order unless the dissentient shareholder establishes that notwithstanding the views of the majority the scheme is unfair: Re Hoare & Co Ltd (1933) 150 LT 374; Re Evertite Locknuts Ltd [1945] Ch 220, [1945] 1 All ER 401; Re Press Caps Ltd [1949] Ch 434, [1949] 1 All ER 1013, CA; Re Sussex Brick Co Ltd [1961] Ch 289n, [1960] 1 All ER 772n; Nidditch v Calico Printers' Association Ltd 1961 SLT 282, Ct of Sess; Re Grierson, Oldham and Adams Ltd [1968] Ch 17, [1967] 1 All ER 192; Fiske Nominees Ltd v Dwyka Diamonds Ltd [2002] EWHC 770 (Ch), [2002] 2 BCLC 123. The test of fairness is whether the offer is fair to offerees as a whole, not to the applicant as an individual; the onus of proving that the offer is unfair is a heavy one where the offer price is above the market price: Re Grierson, Oldham and Adams Ltd. The mere fact that the dissentient shareholder was not provided with all the materials on which he could come to a just conclusion regarding the proposal will not normally be sufficient in itself to establish that the scheme is unfair: Re Evertite Locknuts Ltd; Re Press Caps Ltd. Cf Fiske Nominees Ltd v Dwyka Diamonds Ltd. Where the bidder is an insider in the offeree company, the onus, it seems, is on those serving the compulsory acquisition notice to establish that the offer is fair: Re Bugle Press Ltd, Re Houses and Estates Ltd [1961] Ch 270, [1960] 3 All ER 791, CA; see Re Chez Nico Restaurants Ltd [1992] BCLC 192 at 207 per Browne-Wilkinson V-C; Fiske Nominees Ltd v Dwyka Diamonds Ltd at 128-129 per Peter Leaver QC (sitting as a Deputy Judge of the High Court).

(i) Striking Off

A. REGISTRAR'S POWER TO STRIKE OFF DEFUNCT COMPANY

1521. Registrar's power to strike defunct company off register.

If the registrar¹ has reasonable cause to believe that a company² is not carrying on business or in operation, he may send to the company by post a letter inquiring whether the company is carrying on business or in operation³. If the registrar does not within one month of sending the letter receive any answer to it, he must within 14 days after the expiration of that month send to the company by post a registered letter⁴ referring to the first letter, and stating that no answer to it has been received, and that if an answer is not received to the second letter within one month from its date, a notice will be published in the Gazette⁵ with a view to striking the company's name off the register⁶.

If the registrar either receives an answer to the effect that the company is not carrying on business or in operation, or does not within one month after sending the second letter receive any answer, he may publish in the Gazette, and send to the company by post, a notice that at the expiration of three months from the date of the notice the name of the company mentioned in it will, unless cause is shown to the contrary, be struck off the register and the company will be dissolved⁷.

At the expiration of the time mentioned in the notice sent by the registrar¹ he may, unless cause to the contrary is previously shown by the company², strike its name off the register³. The registrar must publish notice in the Gazette⁴ of the company's name having been struck off the register⁵; and on the publication of that notice the company is dissolved⁶. B. VOLUNTARY STRIKING OFF ON APPLICATION

1525. Registrar's power to strike company off register on application.

On application by a company¹, the registrar of companies² may strike the company's name off the register³. The application must be made on the company's behalf by its directors⁴ or by a majority of them⁵, and must contain the prescribed information⁶, namely a declaration⁷ that no activities of the company or unconcluded proceedings prevent⁸ the application from being made⁹.

The registrar may not strike a company off under these provisions until after the expiration of three months from the publication by the registrar in the Gazette¹⁰ of a notice stating that the registrar may exercise the power under these provisions in relation to the company and inviting any person to show cause why that should not be done¹¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24. The power set out in the text extends to any 'company' (as so defined) whereas it was previously restricted to private companies (see the wording used in the Companies Act 1985 s 652A (repealed); and see now the Companies Act 2006 s 1003).

1526. Application not to be made due to company's activities.

An application for voluntary striking off¹ on behalf of a company² must not be made if, at any time in the previous three months³, the company has:

- 816 (1) changed its name;
- 817 (2) traded or otherwise carried on business⁴;

- 818 (3) made a disposal for value of property or rights that, immediately before

It is an offence for a person to make an application in contravention of these provisions⁸. In proceedings for such an offence it is, however, a defence for the accused to prove that he did not know, and could not reasonably have known, of the existence of the facts that led to the contravention⁹.

As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made.

4 For these purposes, a company is not to be treated as trading or otherwise carrying on business by virtue only of the fact that it makes a payment in respect of a liability incurred in the course of trading or otherwise carrying on business: Companies Act 2006 s 1004(2).

- 821 (2) a voluntary arrangement in relation to the company has been proposed under Part I of the Insolvency Act 1986⁷ or the corresponding Northern Ireland legislation⁸ and the matter has not been finally concluded⁹;
- 822 (3) the company is in administration under Part II of the Insolvency Act 1986¹⁰ or the corresponding Northern Ireland legislation¹¹;
- 823 (4) the statutory provisions imposing an interim moratorium on proceedings where application to the court for an administration order has been made or notice of intention to appoint an administrator has been filed¹² apply¹³;
- 824 (5) the company is being wound up under Part IV of the Insolvency Act 1986¹⁴ or the corresponding Northern Ireland legislation¹⁵, whether voluntarily or by the court, or a petition¹⁶ for winding up of the company by the court has been presented and not finally dealt with or withdrawn¹⁷;
- 825 (6) there is a receiver or manager of the company's property¹⁸;

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(29) DISSOLUTION AND RESTORATION TO THE REGISTER/(i) Striking Off/B. VOLUNTARY STRIKING OFF ON APPLICATION/1528. Duties in connection with making application.

1528. Duties in connection with making application.

A person who makes an application for voluntary striking off¹ on behalf of a company² must secure that, within seven days from the day on which the application is made, a copy of it is given³ to every person who at any time on that day is:

- 827 (1) a member of the company⁴;
- 828 (2) an employee of the company;
- 829 (3) a creditor of the company;
- 830 (4) a director⁵ of the company;
- 831 (5) a manager or trustee of any pension fund established for the benefit of employees of the company; or
- 832 (6) a person of a description specified for these purposes by regulations⁶ made by the Secretary of State⁷;

but this does not require a copy of the application to be given to a director who is a party to the application⁸. The duty so imposed ceases to apply if the application is withdrawn⁹ before the end of the period for giving the copy application¹⁰. A person who fails to perform the duty imposed on him by the above provisions commits an offence¹¹; and if he does so with the intention of concealing the making of the application from the person concerned, he commits an aggravated offence¹². In proceedings for an offence under these provisions it is, however, a defence for the accused to prove that he took all reasonable steps to perform the duty¹³.

In relation to any time after the day on which a company makes an application for voluntary striking off¹⁴ and before the day on which the application is finally dealt with or withdrawn, the following provisions apply¹⁵. A person who is a director of the company at the end of a day on which a person other than himself becomes a person such as is described in heads (1) to (5) above, or becomes a person of a description specified for these purposes by regulations made by the Secretary of State¹⁶, must secure that a copy of the application is given to that person within seven days from that day¹⁷. The duty so imposed ceases to apply if the application is finally dealt with or withdrawn before the end of the period for giving the copy application¹⁸. A person who fails to perform the duty imposed on him by these provisions commits an offence¹⁹; and if he does so with the intention of concealing the making of the application from the person concerned, he commits an aggravated offence²⁰. In proceedings for an offence under these provisions it is, however, a defence for the accused to prove either that at the time of the failure he was not aware of the fact that the company had made an application for voluntary striking off²¹ or that he took all reasonable steps to perform the duty²².

In the case of a creditor of the company a document is treated as given to him if it is left or sent by post to him (A) at the place of business of his with which the company has had dealings by virtue of which he is a creditor of the company; or (B) if there is more than one such place of business, at each of them: s 1008(4). COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(29) DISSOLUTION AND RESTORATION TO THE REGISTER/(i) Striking Off/C. PROPERTY OF DISSOLVED COMPANY/1531. Property vesting as bona vacantia; Crown disclaimer.

C. PROPERTY OF DISSOLVED COMPANY

1531. Property vesting as bona vacantia; Crown disclaimer.

When a company¹ is dissolved, then subject to the possible restoration of the company to the register², all property and rights whatsoever vested in or held on trust for the company immediately before its dissolution, including leasehold property, but not including property held by the company on trust for another person, are deemed to be bona vacantia and accordingly belong to the Crown, or to the Duchy of Lancaster or to the Duke of Cornwall for the time being, as the case may be, and vest and may be dealt with in the same manner as other bona vacantia accruing to the Crown, to the Duchy of Lancaster or to the Duke of Cornwall³.

Where, however, property so vests in the Crown⁴, the Crown's title to it may be disclaimed by a notice signed by the Crown representative⁵. A notice of disclaimer must be executed within three years after:

- 842 (1) the date on which the fact that the property may have vested in the Crown as bona vacantia first comes to the notice of the Crown representative; or
- 843 (2) if ownership of the property is not established at that date, the end of the period reasonably necessary for the Crown representative to establish the ownership of the property⁶.

If an application in writing is made to the Crown representative by a person interested in the property requiring him to decide whether he will or will not disclaim, any notice of disclaimer must be executed within 12 months after the making of the application or such further period as may be allowed by the court⁷. A notice of disclaimer is of no effect if it is shown to have been executed after the end of the specified⁸ period⁹. A notice of disclaimer must be delivered to the registrar¹⁰ and retained and registered by him¹¹. Copies of it must be published in the Gazette¹² and sent to any persons who have given the Crown representative notice that they claim to be interested in the property¹³.

The right to execute a notice of disclaimer under the above provisions may be waived by or on behalf of the Crown either expressly or by taking possession¹⁴.

Where notice of disclaimer is executed¹⁵ as respects any property, that property is deemed not to have vested in the Crown as bona vacantia¹⁶. The Crown's disclaimer operates so as to terminate, as from the date of the disclaimer, the rights, interests and liabilities of the company in or in respect of the property disclaimed¹⁷; but it does not, except so far as is necessary for the purpose of releasing the company from any liability, affect the rights or liabilities of any other person¹⁸.

The disclaimer of any property of a leasehold character does not take effect unless a copy of the disclaimer has been served, so far as the Crown representative¹⁹ is aware of their addresses, on every person claiming under the company as underlessee or mortgagee, and either:

- 844 (a) no application to the court to make a vesting order²⁰ is made with respect to that property before the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the day on which the last such notice was served; or
- 845 (b) where such an application has been made, the court²¹ directs that the disclaimer is to take effect²².

Where the court gives a direction under head (b) above, it may also, instead of or in addition to any vesting order it makes²³, make such order as it thinks fit with respect to fixtures, tenant's improvements and other matters arising out of the lease²⁴.

The court may on application by a person who claims an interest in the disclaimed property, or who is under a liability in respect of the disclaimed property that is not discharged by the disclaimer, make an order under the following provisions in respect of the property²⁵. Such an order is an order for the vesting of the disclaimed property in, or its delivery to:

- 846 (i) a person entitled to it, or a trustee for such a person; or
- 847 (ii) a person subject to such a liability as is mentioned above²⁶, or a trustee for such a person²⁷;

but an order under head (ii) above may only be made where it appears to the court that it would be just to do so for the purpose of compensating the person subject to the liability in respect of the disclaimer²⁸. An order under these provisions may be made on such terms as the court thinks fit²⁹. On a vesting order being so made, the property comprised in it vests in the person named in that behalf in the order without conveyance, assignment or transfer³⁰.

The court must not, however, make an order under the above provisions³¹ vesting property of a leasehold nature in a person claiming under the company as underlessee or mortgagee except on terms making that person:

- 848 (A) subject to the same liabilities and obligations as those to which the company was subject under the lease; or
- 849 (B) if the court thinks fit, subject to the same liabilities and obligations as if the lease had been assigned to him³²; and where the order relates to only part of the property comprised in the lease, this applies as if the lease had comprised only the property comprised in the vesting order³³. A person claiming under the company as underlessee or mortgagee who declines to accept a vesting order on such terms is excluded from all interest in the property³⁴. If there is no person claiming under the company who is willing to accept an order on such terms, the court has power to vest the company's estate and interest in the property in any person who is liable, whether personally or in a representative character, and whether alone or jointly with the company, to perform the lessee's covenants in the lease³⁵. The court may vest that estate and interest in such a person freed and discharged from all estates, incumbrances and interests created by the company³⁶.

Where in consequence of the disclaimer land that is subject to a rentcharge vests in any person, neither he nor his successors in title are subject to any personal liability in respect of sums becoming due under the rentcharge, except sums becoming due after he, or some person claiming under or through him, has taken possession or control of the land or has entered into occupation of it³⁷.

Where on the dissolution of a company³⁸, land in England and Wales or Northern Ireland that is subject to a rentcharge vests by operation of law in the Crown or any other person (the 'proprietor'), neither the proprietor nor his successors in title are subject to any personal liability in respect of sums becoming due under the rentcharge, except sums becoming due after the proprietor, or some person claiming under or through him, has taken possession or control of the land or has entered into occupation of it³⁹.

(ii) Restoration to the Register

A. ADMINISTRATIVE RESTORATION

1532. Application for administrative restoration to the register.

An application may be made to the registrar¹ to restore to the register² a company³ that has been struck off the register under the registrar's powers⁴ to strike off a defunct company⁵. An application under these provisions may be made whether or not the company has in consequence been dissolved⁶. Such an application may only be made by a former director⁷ or former member⁸ of the company⁹; and it may not be made¹⁰ after the end of the period of six years from the date of the dissolution of the company¹¹.

An application for administrative restoration to the register¹² must be accompanied by a statement of compliance¹³. The statement of compliance required is a statement that the person making the application has standing to apply¹⁴ and that the requirements for administrative restoration¹⁵ are met¹⁶. The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence of those matters¹⁷.

On such an application, the registrar must restore the company to the register if, and only if, the following conditions are met¹⁸. The first condition is that the company was carrying on business or in operation at the time of its striking off¹⁹. The second condition is that, if any property or right previously vested in or held on trust for the company has vested as bona vacantia²⁰, the Crown representative²¹ has signified to the registrar in writing consent²² to the company's restoration to the register²³. The third condition is that the applicant has delivered to the registrar such documents relating to the company as are necessary to bring up to date the records kept by the registrar, and has paid any civil penalties for failure to deliver accounts²⁴ that were outstanding at the date of dissolution or striking off²⁵.

1533. Registrar's decision on application for administrative restoration.

The registrar¹ must give notice to the applicant of the decision on an application² for administrative restoration to the register³. If the decision is that the company⁴ should be restored to the register, the restoration takes effect as from the date that notice is sent⁵. In the case of such a decision, the registrar must enter on the register a note of the date as from which the company's restoration to the register takes effect, and must cause notice of the restoration to be published in the Gazette⁶. That notice of restoration must state the name of the company or, if the company is restored to the register under a different name⁷, that name and its former name, the company's registered number⁸, and the date as from which the restoration of the company to the register takes effect⁹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(29) DISSOLUTION AND RESTORATION TO THE REGISTER/(ii) Restoration to the Register/A. ADMINISTRATIVE RESTORATION/1534. Effect of administrative restoration.

1534. Effect of administrative restoration.

The general effect of administrative restoration to the register¹ is that the company² is deemed to have continued in existence as if it had not been dissolved or struck off the register³.

The company is not liable to a civil penalty for failure to deliver accounts⁴ for a financial year⁵ in relation to which the period for filing accounts and reports ended after the date of dissolution or striking off, and before the restoration of the company to the register⁶.

The court⁷ may give such directions and make such provision as seems just for placing the company and all other persons in the same position, as nearly as may be, as if the company had not been dissolved or struck off the register⁸. An application to the court for such directions or provision may be made any time within three years after the date of restoration of the company to the register⁹.

An application may be made to the court¹ to restore to the register² a company³:

- 850 (1) that has been dissolved⁴ after winding up⁵;
- 851 (2) that is deemed to have been dissolved⁶ following administration⁷; or

- 855 (c) any person having an interest in land in which the company had a superior or derivative interest¹⁵;

- 857 (e) any person who but for the company's dissolution would have been in a contractual relationship with it¹⁸;
- 858 (f) any person with a potential legal claim against the company¹⁹;

- 859 (g) any manager or trustee of a pension fund established for the benefit of employees of the company²⁰;
- 860 (h) any former member²¹ of the company, or the personal representatives of such a person²²;
- 861 (i) any person who was a creditor of the company at the time of its striking off or dissolution²³;
- 862 (j) any former liquidator of the company²⁴;
- 863 (k) where the company was struck off the register on an application for voluntary striking off²⁵, any person of a description specified by regulations²⁶ as a person entitled to notice of the application for voluntary striking off²⁷,

When application to the court may be made.

1536. When application to the court may be made.

An application to the court¹ for restoration of a company² to the register³ may be made at any time for the purpose of bringing proceedings against the company for damages for personal injury⁴; but no order may be made on such an application if it appears to the court that the proceedings would fail by virtue of any enactment⁵ as to the time within which proceedings must be brought⁶. In making that decision the court must have regard to its power⁷ to direct that the period between the dissolution, or striking off, of the company and the making of the order is not to count for the purposes of any such enactment⁸.

In any other case an application to the court for restoration of a company to the register may not be made after the end of the period of six years from the date of the dissolution of the company, subject as follows⁹. In a case where:

- 864 (1) the company has been struck off the register under the registrar's¹⁰ powers to strike off a defunct company¹¹;
- 865 (2) an application to the registrar has been made for administrative restoration to the register¹² within the time allowed for making such an application; and
- 866 (3) the registrar has refused the application, an application to the court under these provisions may be made within 28 days of notice of the registrar's decision being issued by the registrar, even if the above-mentioned period of six years¹³ has expired¹⁴.

The above provisions apply whether the company was dissolved or struck off the register before, on or after 1 October 2009¹⁵.

Cf the Companies Act 1985 ss 651, 653 (repealed), which conferred overlapping jurisdictions (each with a different time limit) on the court to declare a dissolution void and restore a company to the register, a situation which was simplified by the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 1029 (see PARA 1535). Where the company was dissolved or struck off the register before 1 October 2009, s 1030(4) does not enable an application to be made in respect of a company dissolved before 1 October 2007, subject to the following provisions: Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 91(1), (4). If the company was struck off under the Companies Act 1985 s 652 or s 652A (both repealed), the Companies Act 2006 s 1030(4) does not prevent an application being made at any time before: (1) 1 October 2015 (that is, six years after commencement); or (2) the expiration of the period of 20 years from publication in the Gazette of notice of striking off under the relevant section or article, whichever occurs first: Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 91(5). 1537. Decision on application for restoration by the court.

On an application for restoration by the court¹, the court may order the restoration of the company² to the register³:

- 867 (1) if the company was struck off the register under the registrar's⁴ powers to strike off defunct companies⁵ and the company was, at the time of the striking off, carrying on business or in operation⁶;
- 868 (2) if the company was struck off the register on an application for voluntary striking off⁷ and any of the statutory requirements⁸ was not complied with⁹;
- 869 (3) if in any other case the court considers it just to do so¹⁰.

If the court orders restoration of the company to the register, the restoration takes effect on a copy of the court's order being delivered to the registrar¹¹. The registrar must cause to be published in the Gazette¹² notice of the restoration of the company to the register¹³. The notice must state the name of the company or, if the company is restored to the register under a different name¹⁴, that name and its former name¹⁵, the company's registered number¹⁶, and the date on which the restoration took effect¹⁷.

The above provisions apply whether the company was dissolved or struck off the register before, on or after 1 October 2009¹⁸.

Exercising the discretion against restoration should be the exception, not the rule: Re Priceland Ltd, Waltham Forest London Borough Council v Registrar of Companies [1997] 1 BCLC 467 at 476 per Laddie J. The court will usually make an order for restoration if there is any business or property to be dealt with, but on the terms that all proper returns are to be made: see Re Carpenter's Patent Davit Boat

In Re New Timbiqui Gold Mines Ltd [1961] Ch 319, [1961] 1 All ER 865, the court would not have made an order in any event as there was not sufficient evidence of likely benefit to members or creditors. See also Re Lindsay Bowman Ltd [1969] 3 All ER 601, [1969] 1 WLR 1443 (on a similar point). See also Witherdale Ltd v Registrar of Companies [2005] EWHC 2964 (Ch), [2008] 1 BCLC 174 (in circumstances where it was not possible to ascertain what the purpose of restoration was, the court, exceptionally, would refuse an order for restoration).

In considering whether it is 'just' to restore the company to the register, the personal circumstances of the shareholder may be relevant: Re L Carroll Ltd [1975] 1 NZLR 79, NZ SC (striking off due to illness). Whether it is just to order restoration depends upon all the circumstances of the case including the nature of the application and subsequent events: Re Blenheim Leisure (Restaurants) Ltd [2000] BCC 554, CA; and see Re Blenheim Leisure (Restaurants) Ltd (No 2) [2000] BCC 821.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(29) DISSOLUTION AND RESTORATION TO THE REGISTER/(ii) Restoration to the Register/B. RESTORATION BY THE COURT/1538. Effect of court order for restoration to the register.

1538. Effect of court order for restoration to the register.

The general effect of an order by the court¹ for restoration to the register² is that the company³ is deemed to have continued in existence as if it had not been dissolved or struck off the register⁴.

The company is not liable to a civil penalty for failure to deliver accounts⁵ for a financial year⁶ in relation to which the period for filing accounts and reports ended after the date of dissolution or striking off, and before the restoration of the company to the register⁷.

The court may give such directions and make such provision as seems just for placing the company and all other persons in the same position, as nearly as may be, as if the company had not been dissolved or struck off the register⁸. The court may also give directions⁹ as to:

870 (1) the delivery to the registrar¹⁰ of such documents relating to the company as are necessary to bring up to date the records kept by the registrar¹¹;

871 (2) the payment of the costs of the registrar in connection with the proceedings for the restoration of the company to the register¹²;

- 872 (3) where any property or right previously vested in or held on trust for the company has vested as bona vacantia¹³, the payment of the costs of the Crown representative¹⁴ in dealing with the property during the period of dissolution, or in connection with the proceedings on the application¹⁵.

The above provisions apply whether the company was dissolved or struck off the register before, on or after 1 October 2009¹⁶.

In Re Huntingdon Poultry Ltd [1969] 1 All ER 328, [1969] 1 WLR 204, a petition for a similar direction was refused as being unnecessary. See also Shire Court Residents Ltd v Registrar of Companies [1995] BCC 821 (directions as to leases). Terms in the order may not put a creditor in the same position as if the company had been struck off, thus preserving any right against the directors on a warranty of authority: Re Lindsay Bowman Ltd [1969] 3 All ER 601, [1969] 1 WLR 1443; Re Priceland Ltd, Waltham Forest London Borough Council v Registrar of Companies [1997] 1 BCLC 467. A limitation direction may be given, even if it runs in the company's favour, as it is the position at the date of dissolution rather than at the date of restoration which has to be considered; and, just as the company in its capacity as the applicant for the restoration order is entitled to be heard in opposition to the imposition of a limitation direction in favour of third party creditors, by the same token a third party who would be prejudiced by a limitation direction sought by the company is also entitled to be heard in opposition to it: Regent Leisuretime Ltd v NatWest Finance (formerly County NatWest Ltd) [2003] EWCA Civ 391, [2003] BCC 587, [2003] All ER (D) 385 (Mar). C. CONSEQUENCES OF RESTORATION 1539. Company's name on restoration.

A company¹ is restored to the register² with the name it had before it was dissolved or struck off the register, subject to the following provisions³.

If at the date of restoration the company could not be registered under its former name⁴ without contravening the statutory provision prohibiting registration under the same name as another in the registrar's⁵ index of company names⁶, it must be restored to the register⁷:

- 873 (1) under another name specified, in the case of administrative restoration⁸, in the application to the registrar, or in the case of restoration under a court order⁹, in the court's¹⁰ order¹¹; or
- 874 (2) as if its registered number¹² was also its name¹³.

If a company is restored to the register under a name specified in the application to the registrar, the statutory provisions relating to registration of a change of name and the issue of a new certificate of incorporation¹⁴ and the effect of a change of name¹⁵ apply as if the application to the registrar were notice of a change of name¹⁶. If a company is restored to the register under a name specified in the court's order, those statutory provisions¹⁷ apply as if the copy of the court order delivered to the registrar were notice of a change a name¹⁸.

If the company is restored to the register as if its registered number was also its name¹⁹:

- 875 (a) the company must change its name within 14 days after the date of the restoration²⁰;
- 876 (b) the change may be made by resolution of the directors²¹, without prejudice to any other method of changing the company's name²²;
- 877 (c) the company must give notice to the registrar of the change²³; and
- 878 (d) the statutory provisions referred to above²⁴ apply as regards the registration and effect of the change²⁵.

If the company fails to comply with head (a) or head (c) above an offence is committed by the company and by every officer²⁶ of the company who is in default²⁷.

The person in whom any property or right of a dissolved company is vested as bona vacantia¹ may dispose of, or of an interest in, that property or right despite the fact that the company² may be restored³ to the register⁴. If the company is restored to the register, the restoration does not affect the disposition, but without prejudice to its effect in relation to any other property or right previously vested in or held on trust for the company⁵; and the Crown or, as the case may be, the Duke of Cornwall must pay to the company an amount equal to:

- 879 (1) the amount of any consideration received for the property or right or, as the case may be, the interest in it⁶; or 880 (2) the value of any such consideration at the time of the disposition⁷, or, if no consideration was received, an amount equal to the value of the property, right or interest disposed of, as at the date of the disposition⁸. There may, however, be deducted from the amount so payable the reasonable costs of the Crown representative⁹ in connection with the disposition, to the extent that they have not been paid as a condition of administrative restoration¹⁰ or pursuant to a court order¹¹ for restoration¹².

The application must be supported by such evidence as the Secretary of State may require for the purpose of showing that the applicant or applicants has or have good reason for requiring the investigation¹²; and he may, before appointing inspectors, require the applicant or applicants to give security, to an amount not exceeding £5,000, or such other sum as he may by order specify, for payment of the costs of the investigation¹³.

Appointment of inspectors in other cases.

1542. Appointment of inspectors in other cases.

Without prejudice to his powers of appointment on the application of members¹ of the company or of the company itself², the Secretary of State³ must appoint one or more competent inspectors to investigate the affairs of a company⁴ and report the result of their investigations to him, if the court⁵ by order⁶ declares that its affairs ought to be so investigated⁷.

The Secretary of State may also make such an appointment if it appears to him that there are circumstances suggesting⁸:

- 884 (1) that the company's affairs are being or have been conducted with intent to defraud its creditors⁹ or the creditors of any other person, or otherwise for a fraudulent or unlawful purpose¹⁰, or in a manner which is unfairly prejudicial to some part of its members¹¹; or
- 885 (2) that any actual or proposed act or omission of the company, including an act or omission on its behalf, is or would be so prejudicial, or that the company was formed for any fraudulent or unlawful purpose¹²; or
- 886 (3) that persons concerned with the company's formation or the management of its affairs have in connection with it been guilty of fraud, misfeasance or other misconduct towards it or towards its members¹³; or
- 887 (4) that the company's members have not been given all the information with respect to its affairs which they might reasonably expect¹⁴.

Inspectors may be so appointed¹⁵ on terms that any report they may make is not for publication; and, in such a case, the provisions relating to the availability and publication of inspectors' reports¹⁶ do not apply¹⁷.

The Secretary of State must exercise the power to appoint inspectors in good faith but it is not incumbent upon him to disclose the material he has before him or the reasons for the inquiry¹⁸; nor is he required to desist from making an appointment because it may involve investigating fraudulent or criminal activity which should be investigated by the police or the Serious Fraud Office¹⁹.

1543. Inspectors' powers during investigation.

If inspectors appointed under any of the Secretary of State's powers¹ to investigate the affairs of a company² think it necessary for the purposes of their investigation to investigate also the affairs of another body corporate³ which is or at any relevant time has been the company's subsidiary⁴ or holding company⁵, or a subsidiary of its holding company or a holding company of its subsidiary, they have power to do so; and they must report on the affairs of the other body corporate so far as they think that the results of their investigation of its affairs are relevant to the investigation of the affairs of the first-mentioned company⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(30) INVESTIGATION OF COMPANIES AND THEIR AFFAIRS; REQUISITION OF DOCUMENTS/(i) Investigations/A. INVESTIGATION OF COMPANY'S AFFAIRS/1544. Conduct of investigation.

1544. Conduct of investigation.

Where inspectors are appointed to investigate the affairs of a company¹, it is the duty of all officers and agents² of the company and of all officers and agents of any other body corporate whose affairs are investigated under the inspectors' powers³ during investigation⁴:

- 888 (1) to produce to the inspectors all documents⁵ of or relating to the company or,
 as the case may be, the other body corporate which are in their custody or power⁶;
 889 (2) to attend before the inspectors when required to do so⁷; and 890 (3) otherwise to give the inspectors all assistance in connection with the investigation which they are reasonably able to give⁸.

If the inspectors consider that an officer or agent of the company or other body corporate, or any other person, is or may be in possession of information relating to a matter which they believe to be relevant to the investigation, they may require him⁹:

- 891 (a) to produce to them any documents in his custody or power relating to that matter¹⁰;
 892 (b) to attend before them¹¹; and
 893 (c) otherwise to give them all assistance in connection with the investigation which he is reasonably able to give¹², and it is that person's duty to comply with the requirement¹³.

An inspector may for the purposes of the investigation examine any person on oath¹⁴, and may administer an oath accordingly¹⁵.

The inspectors must act fairly in accordance with the rules of natural justice¹⁶. They must accordingly put to any witness any points of substance and give him a chance to explain or correct any statement prejudicial to him¹⁷. It is now effectively invariable practice for witnesses to be notified of any provisional criticism of them and to be given the opportunity to make further submissions¹⁸. However, inspectors are not required to put the substance of their conclusions to the witness for his comment, nor are they to be criticised for occasional omissions¹⁹. Inspectors do not owe a duty to persons from whom they have obtained information or documents to such an extent that their use of the material in the conduct of their investigation might be inhibited²⁰. The public interest that all relevant evidence should be available to the court will normally override the public interest in maintaining the confidentiality of evidence given²¹.

An answer given by a person to a question put to him in exercise of the statutory powers²² may be used in evidence against him²³ except that, in criminal proceedings in which that person is charged with an offence²⁴, no evidence relating to the answer may be adduced, and no question relating to it may be asked, by or on behalf of the prosecution, unless evidence relating to it is adduced, or a question relating to it is asked, in the proceedings by or on behalf of that person²⁵. In civil proceedings, evidence given by a witness to inspectors is generally admissible²⁶; and evidence obtained under compulsory powers may be used in disqualification proceedings²⁷.

If any person²⁸:

- 894 (i) fails to produce to the inspectors any documents which it is his statutory duty so to produce²⁹ or to give the inspectors all assistance³⁰ in connection with the investigation which he is reasonably able to give³¹; or 895 (ii) refuses to attend before the inspectors when required to do so³², or refuses to comply with the inspectors' requirement³³ where they consider that he may be in possession of information relating to a matter which they believe to be relevant to the investigation³⁴; or 896 (iii) refuses to answer any question put to him by the inspectors for the purposes of the investigation³⁵,

the inspectors may certify that fact in writing to the court³⁶. The court may thereupon inquire into the case³⁷ and, after hearing any witnesses who may be produced against or on behalf of the alleged offender and after hearing any statement which may be offered in defence, may punish the offender in like manner as if he had been guilty of contempt of the court³⁸.

INVESTIGATION OF OWNERSHIP OF COMPANY/(A) General Powers of Investigation/1545. Appointment and powers of inspectors.

B. INVESTIGATION OF OWNERSHIP OF COMPANY

(A) GENERAL POWERS OF INVESTIGATION

1545. Appointment and powers of inspectors.

Where it appears to the Secretary of State¹ that there is good reason to do so, he may appoint one or more competent inspectors to investigate and report on the membership of any company², and otherwise with respect to the company, for the purpose of determining the true persons who are or have been financially interested in its success or failure, real or apparent, or able to control or materially to influence its policy³.

If an application for such an investigation with respect to particular shares or debentures⁴ of a company is made to the Secretary of State by members of the company, and the number of applicants or the amount of shares held by them is not less than that required for an application by members for the appointment of inspectors to investigate a company's affairs⁵, then the Secretary of State must appoint inspectors to conduct the investigation applied for⁶. The Secretary of State must not, however, appoint inspectors if he is satisfied that the application is vexatious; and, where inspectors are appointed, their terms of appointment must exclude any matter in so far as the Secretary of State is satisfied that it is unreasonable for it to be investigated⁷. Before appointing inspectors, the Secretary of State may require the applicant or applicants to give security, to an amount not exceeding £5,000 or such other sum as he may by order specify, for payment of the costs of the investigation⁸. If, on such an application for investigation by members of the company, it appears to the Secretary of State that the powers conferred by the statutory provisions relating to the obtaining of information as to those interested in shares⁹ are sufficient for the purposes of investigating the matters which inspectors would be appointed to investigate, he may instead conduct the investigation under those statutory provisions¹⁰.

Subject to the terms of their appointment, the inspectors' powers extend to the investigation of any circumstances suggesting the existence of an arrangement or understanding which, though not legally binding, is or was observed or likely to be observed in practice and which is relevant to the purposes of the investigation¹¹.

For the purposes of an investigation under these provisions¹², the statutory provisions relating to the power of the inspectors to extend their investigations into the affairs of related companies¹³, the production of documents and taking of evidence¹⁴, the obstruction of inspectors¹⁵ and inspectors' reports¹⁶ apply as in the case of investigations into the affairs of a company¹⁷, with the necessary modifications of references to the affairs of the company or to those of any other body corporate¹⁸, but subject to the following provisions¹⁹, which apply to²⁰:

- 897 (1) all persons who are or have been, or whom the inspector has reasonable cause to believe to be or to have been, financially interested in the success or failure or the apparent success or failure of the company or any other body corporate whose membership is investigated with that of the company, or able to control or materially influence its policy, including persons concerned only on behalf of others²¹; and
- 898 (2) any other person whom the inspector has reasonable cause to believe possesses information relevant to the investigation²², as they apply in relation to officers and agents²³ of the company or the other body corporate, as the case may be²⁴. If the Secretary of State is of opinion that there is good reason for not divulging any part of a report²⁵, he may disclose the report²⁶ with the omission of that part; and he may cause to be kept by the registrar of companies²⁷ a copy of the report with that part omitted, or in the case of any other such report, a copy of the whole report²⁸.

1546. Power to obtain information as to persons interested in shares or debentures.

If it appears to the Secretary of State¹ that there is good reason to investigate the ownership of any shares² in or debentures³ of a company⁴, and that it is unnecessary to appoint inspectors for the purpose, he may require any person⁵ whom he has reasonable cause to believe to have, or to be able to obtain, any information as to the present and past interests⁶ in those shares or debentures and the names and addresses of the persons interested and of any persons who act or have acted on their behalf in relation to the shares or debentures, to give any such information to the Secretary of State⁷.

A person who fails to give any information required of him⁸, or who in giving such information makes any statement which he knows to be false in a material particular⁹, or recklessly makes any statement which is false in a material particular, commits an offence¹⁰.

1547. Power to impose restrictions on shares and debentures.

If, in connection with an investigation of the ownership of a company¹ or of its shares or debentures², it appears to the Secretary of State³ that there is difficulty in finding out the relevant facts about any shares, whether issued or to be issued, he may by order direct that the shares until further order be subject to the restrictions of Part XV of the Companies Act 1985⁴. If, however, the Secretary of State is satisfied that such an order may unfairly affect the rights of third parties in respect of shares, he may, for the purpose of protecting such rights and subject to such terms as he thinks fit, direct that such acts by such persons or descriptions of persons and for such purposes as may be set out in the order, are not to constitute a breach of the restrictions of Part XV of the Companies Act 1985⁵.

The Secretary of State may by regulations made by statutory instrument make such amendments of the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 s 445, and Pt XV, relating to orders imposing restrictions on shares as appear to him necessary or expedient, for enabling orders to be made in a form protecting the rights of third parties, or with respect to the circumstances in which restrictions may be relaxed or removed, or with respect to the making of interim orders by a court: Companies Act 1989 s 135(1), (2) (amended by SI 2008/948). The regulations may make different provision for different cases and may contain such transitional and other supplementary and incidental provisions as appear to the Secretary of State to be appropriate (Companies Act 1989 s 135(3)); but such regulations are not to be made unless a draft of the regulations has been laid before Parliament and approved by resolution of each House of Parliament (s 135(4)). In exercise of the powers so conferred, the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Disclosure of Interests in Shares) (Orders imposing

So long as any shares¹ are directed to be subject to the restrictions of Part XV of the Companies Act 1985², then, subject to any directions made³ in relation to an order⁴:

- 899 (1) any transfer of those shares or, in the case of unissued shares⁵, any transfer of the right to be issued with them, and any issue of them, is void⁶;

- 902 (4) except in a liquidation, no payment may be made of any sums due from the company⁹ on the shares¹⁰, whether in respect of capital or otherwise¹¹.

Subject to the terms of any directions made by the Secretary of State¹ or the court², a person commits an offence³ if he⁴:

- 903 (1) exercises or purports to exercise any right to dispose of any shares⁵ which, to his knowledge, are for the time being subject to restrictions⁶ or of any right to be issued with any such shares⁷; or

- 904 (2) votes in respect of any such shares⁸, whether as holder or proxy⁹, or appoints a proxy to vote in respect of them¹⁰; or
- 905 (3) being the holder of any such shares, fails to notify of their being subject to those restrictions any person whom he does not know to be aware of that fact but does know to be entitled, apart from the restrictions, to vote in respect of those shares whether as holder or as proxy¹¹; or
- 906 (4) being the holder of any such shares, or being entitled to any right to be issued with other shares in right of them, or to receive any payment on them, otherwise than in a liquidation, enters into any agreement which is void¹² as a consequence of an order imposing restrictions¹³.

1550. Relaxation and removal of restrictions.

Where shares¹ in a company² are by order made subject to the restrictions of Part XV of the Companies Act 1985³, application⁴ may be made to the court⁵ for an order directing that the shares be no longer so subject⁶.

Where the court is satisfied that an order subjecting the shares to such restrictions unfairly affects the rights of third parties in respect of shares, then the court, for the purpose of protecting such rights and subject to such terms as it thinks fit and in addition to any order it may make⁷, may direct on an application⁸ so made that such acts by such persons or descriptions of persons and for such purposes as may be set out in the order, do not constitute a breach of the statutory restrictions⁹.

If the order applying the restrictions was made by the Secretary of State, or he has refused to make an order disapplying them, the application may be made by any person aggrieved¹⁰.

Subject to the provisions described below, an order of the court or the Secretary of State directing that shares are to cease to be subject to the restrictions may be made only if¹¹:

- 907 (1) the court or, as the case may be, the Secretary of State is satisfied that the relevant facts about the shares have been disclosed to the company and no unfair advantage has accrued to any person as a result of the earlier failure to make that disclosure¹²; or
- 908 (2) the shares are to be transferred for valuable consideration¹³ and the court, in any case, or the Secretary of State, if the order was made by him¹⁴, approves the transfer¹⁵.

Where shares in a company are subject to the restrictions, the court may¹⁶ on application¹⁷ order the shares to be sold¹⁸, subject to the court's approval as to the sale, and may also direct that the shares are to cease being subject to the restrictions; and an application to the court for this purpose may be made by the Secretary of State or by the company¹⁹. Where an order for sale has been so made, then, on application by the Secretary of State, or by the company, or by the person appointed by or in pursuance of the order to effect the sale, or by any person interested in the shares, the court may make such further order relating to the sale or to the transfer of the shares as it thinks fit²⁰.

Where shares are sold in pursuance of an order of the court, the proceeds of sale, less the costs of the sale, must be paid into court for the benefit of the persons who are beneficially interested in the shares; and any such person may apply to the court for the whole or any part of those proceeds to be paid to him²¹. On any such application, the court must order the payment to the applicant of the whole of the proceeds of sale together with any interest on them or, if any other person had a beneficial interest in the shares at the time of their sale, such proportion of those proceeds and interest as is equal to the proportion which the value of the applicant's interest in the shares bears to the total value of the shares²².

An order, whether of the Secretary of State or the court, directing that shares are to cease to be subject to the above restrictions²³, if it is expressed to be made with a view to permitting a transfer of the shares, or made under the power to approve a sale²⁴, may continue, either in whole or in part, the following restrictions, so far as they relate to any right acquired or offer made before the transfer²⁵, namely that:

- 909 (a) no further shares may be issued in right of those shares or in pursuance of any offer made to their holder²⁶; and
- 910 (b) except in a liquidation, no payment may be made of any sums due from the company on the shares, whether in respect of capital or otherwise²⁷.

C. SECRETARY OF STATE'S POWERS REGARDING INVESTIGATIONS

1551. Secretary of State's power to give directions to inspectors.

In exercising his functions an inspector¹ is required to comply with any direction² given to him by the Secretary of State³. A direction may be given on an inspector's appointment, may vary or revoke a direction previously given, and may be given at the request of an inspector⁴.

The Secretary of State may give an inspector appointed to investigate a company's⁵ affairs or ownership⁶ a direction: (1) as to the subject matter of his investigation (whether by reference to a specified area of a company's operation, a specified transaction, a period of time or otherwise); or (2) which requires the inspector to take or not to take a specified step in his investigation⁷.

The Secretary of State may give an inspector appointed under any provision of Part XIV of the Companies Act 1985⁸ a direction requiring him to secure that a specified inspectors' report⁹: (a) includes the inspector's views on a specified matter; (b) does not include any reference to a specified matter; (c) is made in a specified form or manner; or (d) is made by a specified date¹⁰.

The Secretary of State may direct an inspector to take no further steps in his investigation¹¹ and the inspector must comply¹². The Secretary of State may give such a direction to an inspector appointed following a court order¹³ or an application by members of the company¹⁴ only on the grounds that it appears to him that matters have come to light in the course of the inspector's investigation which suggest that a criminal offence has been committed, and those matters have been referred to the appropriate prosecuting authority¹⁵. Where the Secretary of State gives a direction to terminate the investigation, the inspector must not make a final report to the Secretary of State unless the direction was made on the grounds that a criminal offence has been committed and referred and the Secretary of State directs the inspector to make a final report to him, or the inspector was appointed in pursuance of an order¹⁶ of the court¹⁷.

F. EXPENSES OF INVESTIGATION

1556. Expenses of investigating a company's affairs.

The expenses¹ of an investigation of a company's affairs² must be defrayed in the first instance by the Secretary of State³, but he may recover those expenses from the persons liable in accordance with the following provisions⁴:

- 914 (1) a person who is convicted on a prosecution instituted as a result of the investigation may in the same proceedings be ordered to pay those expenses to such extent as may be specified in the order⁵;
- 915 (2) a body corporate dealt with by an inspectors' report, where the inspectors were appointed otherwise than of the Secretary of State's own motion⁶, is liable, except where it was the applicant for the investigation, and except so far as the Secretary of State otherwise directs⁷; and
- 916 (3) where the inspectors were appointed on the company's application or that of its members⁸, the applicant or applicants for the investigation is or are liable to such extent, if any, as the Secretary of State may direct⁹.

The report of inspectors appointed otherwise than of the Secretary of State's own motion¹⁰ may, if they think fit, and must, if the Secretary of State so directs, include a recommendation as to the directions, if any, which they think appropriate, in the light of their investigation, to be given under head (2) or head (3) above¹¹.

Subject to satisfaction of the Secretary of State's right to repayment, any liability to repay the Secretary of State imposed by head (1) above is a liability also to indemnify all persons against liability under heads (2) and (3) above¹². A person liable under any of heads (1) to (3) above is entitled to contribution from any other person liable under the same head according to the amount of their respective liabilities under it¹³.

The expenses to be defrayed by the Secretary of State under these provisions must, so far as not recovered under them, be paid out of money provided by Parliament¹⁴.

1 There is no limit to the amount of such expenses, provided that they are all of and incidental to the investigation: Selangor United Rubber Estates Ltd v Cradock (No 4) [1969] 3 All ER 965, [1969] 1 WLR 1773. In particular, such reasonable sums as the Secretary of State may determine in respect of general staff costs and overheads are to be treated as expenses of the investigation: Companies Act 1985 s 439(1) (substituted by the Companies Act 1989 s 59(1), (2)).

DOCUMENTS/(ii) Requisition and Seizure of Books and Papers/1558. Secretary of State's power to require production of documents.

(ii) Requisition and Seizure of Books and Papers

1558. Secretary of State's power to require production of documents.

The Secretary of State¹ may give directions to a company² requiring it to produce such documents³ or information (or documents or information of such description) as may be specified in the directions⁴. The Secretary of State may also authorise a person (an investigator) to require the company or any other person to produce such documents or information (or documents or information of such description) as the investigator may specify⁵. Such a requirement must be complied with at such time and place as may be specified in the directions or by the investigator, as the case may be⁶. The production of a document in pursuance of these provisions does not affect any lien which a person has on the document⁷. The Secretary of State or the investigator (as the case may be) may take copies of or extracts from a document produced in pursuance of these provisions⁸.

A statement made by a person in compliance with a requirement to provide documents or information⁹ may be used in evidence against him¹⁰. However, in criminal proceedings in which the person is charged with furnishing false information¹¹ or making a false statement¹², no evidence relating to the statement may be adduced by or on behalf of the prosecution, and no question relating to it may be asked by or on behalf of the prosecution, unless evidence relating to it is adduced or a question relating to it is asked in the proceedings by or on behalf of that person¹³.

A person commits an offence if in purported compliance with a requirement¹⁴ to provide information he provides information which he knows to be false in a material particular or he recklessly provides information which is false in a material particular¹⁵.

If a person fails to comply with a requirement to produce documents or information imposed by the Secretary of State or an investigator, the Secretary of State or investigator (as the case may be) may certify the fact in writing to the court¹⁶. If, after hearing any witnesses who may be produced against or on behalf of the alleged offender and any statement which may be offered in defence, the court is satisfied that the offender failed without reasonable excuse to comply with the requirement, it may deal with him as if he had been guilty of contempt of the court¹⁷.

Entry and search of premises.

1559. Entry and search of premises.

A justice of the peace may issue a warrant¹ if satisfied on information on oath² given by or on behalf of the Secretary of State³, or by a person appointed or authorised⁴ to exercise powers under the Companies Act 1985⁵:

- 920 (1) that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there are on any premises documents⁶ whose production has been required⁷ and which have not been produced in compliance with the requirement⁸; or
- 921 (2) that there are reasonable grounds for believing that an offence has been committed for which the penalty on conviction on indictment is imprisonment for a term of not less than two years and that there are on any premises documents relating to whether the offence has been committed⁹; that the Secretary of State, or the person so appointed or authorised, has power to require the production of the documents¹⁰; and that there are reasonable grounds for believing that, if production was so required, the documents would not be produced but would be removed from the premises, hidden, tampered with or destroyed¹¹.

A warrant so issued continues in force until the end of the period of one month¹² beginning with the day on which it is issued¹³; and the warrant authorises a constable, together with any other person named in it and any other constables¹⁴:

- 922 (a) to enter the premises specified in the information, using such force as is reasonably necessary for the purpose¹⁵;
- 923 (b) to search the premises and take possession of any documents appearing to be such documents as are mentioned in head (1) or head (2) above, as the case may be, or to take, in relation to any such documents, any other steps which may appear to be necessary for preserving them or preventing interference with them¹⁶;
- 924 (c) to take copies of any such documents¹⁷; and
- 925 (d) to require any person named in the warrant to provide an explanation of them or to state where they may be found¹⁸.

If, in the case of a warrant under head (2) above, the justice of the peace is satisfied on information on oath that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there are also on the premises other documents relevant to the investigation, the warrant also authorises the actions mentioned in heads (a) to (d) above to be taken in relation to such documents¹⁹.

Any person²⁰ who intentionally obstructs the exercise of any rights conferred by a warrant so issued, or fails without reasonable excuse to comply with any requirement imposed in accordance with head (d) above, is guilty of an offence²¹.

Any documents of which possession is taken under the provisions described above may be retained for a period of three months or, if within that period proceedings to which the documents are relevant are commenced against any person for any criminal offence, until the conclusion of those proceedings²².

The other statutory provisions relating to the Secretary of State's powers of investigation apply to such bodies subject to such adaptations and modifications as may be specified by regulations made by the Secretary of State⁸.

(v) Powers exercisable to Assist Overseas Regulatory Authorities

1568. Request for assistance by overseas regulatory authority.

Certain investigative powers¹ are exercisable by the Secretary of State² for the purpose of assisting an overseas regulatory authority³ which has requested his assistance in connection with inquiries being carried out by it or on its behalf⁴. The Secretary of State⁵ must not exercise these powers unless he and the Financial Services Authority are satisfied that the assistance requested by the overseas regulatory authority is for the purposes of its regulatory functions⁶.

In deciding whether to exercise such powers the Secretary of State may take into account, in particular⁷:

- 983 (1) whether corresponding assistance would be given in that country or territory to an authority exercising regulatory functions in the United Kingdom⁸;
- 984 (2) whether the inquiries relate to the possible breach of a law, or other requirement, which has no close parallel in the United Kingdom or involves the assertion of a jurisdiction not recognised by the United Kingdom⁹;
- 985 (3) the seriousness of the matter to which the inquiries relate, the importance to the inquiries of the information sought in the United Kingdom and whether the assistance could be obtained by other means¹⁰;
- 986 (4) whether it is otherwise appropriate in the public interest to give the assistance sought¹¹.

Before deciding whether to exercise these powers in a case where the overseas regulatory authority is a banking supervisor¹², the Secretary of State must consult the Financial Services Authority¹³.

The Secretary of State may decline to exercise these powers unless the overseas regulatory authority undertakes to make such contribution towards the costs of their exercise as the Secretary of State considers appropriate¹⁴.

1 lie those conferred by the Companies Act 1989 s 83 (see PARA 1569).

2 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

3 For these purposes, an 'overseas regulatory authority' means an authority which in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom exercises:

2259 (1) any function corresponding to: (a) any function of the Secretary of State under the Companies Act 1985 or the Companies Act 2006; (b) any function of the Financial Services Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 6 et seq); (c) any function exercised by the competent authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VI (ss 72-103) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 385 et seq) (see the Companies Act 1989 s 82(2)(a) (substituted by SI 2001/3649; and amended by SI 2005/1433 and SI 2008/948)); or

2260 (2) any function in connection with the investigation of, or the enforcement of rules (whether or not having the force of law) relating to, conduct of the kind prohibited by the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt V (ss 52-64) (insider dealing: see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE) (see the Companies Act 1989 s 82(2)(b) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 79(13), Sch 5 Pt I para 16)); or 2261 (3) any function prescribed for these purposes by order of the Secretary of State, being a function which in his opinion relates to companies or financial services (see the Companies Act 1989 s 82(2)(c)).

As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. Any order made under head (3) must be made by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 82(2). References to financial services include, in particular, investment business, insurance and banking: s 82(7).

4 Companies Act 1989 s 82(1).

5 The function of the Secretary of State under the Companies Act 1989 s 82(3) (ie that of being satisfied as to whether assistance requested by an overseas regulatory authority is for the purpose of its regulatory functions) is exercisable by the Secretary of State and the Treasury concurrently: Transfer of Functions (Financial Services) Order 1992, SI 1992/1315, art 5, Sch 3 para 3 (revoked, in relation to the designation of the Treasury in respect of measures relating to open-ended collective investment schemes, by SI 2002/2840). Power to require information, documents or other assistance.

1569. Power to require information, documents or other assistance.

The following powers may be exercised for the purpose of assisting an overseas regulatory authority¹ if the Secretary of State² considers there is good reason for their exercise³.

- 989 (3) otherwise to give him such assistance in connection with the inquiries as he is reasonably able to give⁸.

Where documents are so produced, the Secretary of State may take copies or extracts from them⁹; and, where a person claims a lien on a document, its production under these provisions is without prejudice to his lien¹⁰.

The Secretary of State may examine a person on oath and may administer an oath accordingly¹¹; but a person cannot be required under these provisions to disclose information or produce a document which he would be entitled to refuse to disclose or produce on grounds of legal professional privilege in proceedings in the High Court¹², except that a lawyer may be required to furnish the name and address of his client¹³. A statement by a person in compliance with a requirement imposed by these provisions may be used in evidence against him¹⁴, except that, in criminal proceedings in which that person is charged with an offence¹⁵, no evidence relating to the statement may be adduced, and no question relating to it may be asked, by or on behalf of the prosecution, unless evidence relating to it is adduced, or a question relating to it is asked, in the proceedings by or on behalf of that person¹⁶.

(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS

(i) In general

1575. Meaning of 'director' under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986.

For the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, unless the context otherwise requires, 'director' includes any person occupying the position of director, by whatever name called¹. Accordingly, a company which has been appointed as a director of another company can be made the subject of a disqualification order under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986².

Directors may be of three kinds: (1) de jure directors, that is to say, those who have been validly appointed to the office³; (2) de facto directors, that is to say, directors who assume to act as directors without having been appointed validly or at all⁴; and (3) shadow directors, a term which is defined by statute for the purposes of both companies and insolvency legislation⁵.

1 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(1), (4) (s 22(4) amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 ss 8, 15(1), Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 15(1), (3), Sch 5). Subject to the provisions of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22, expressions that are defined for the purposes of the Companies Acts (see the Companies Act 2006 s 1174 and Sch 8) have the same meaning in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986: s 22(9) (substituted by SI 2008/948; amended by SI 2009/1941). With respect to the meaning of expressions used in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, and unless the context otherwise requires, the 'Companies Acts' has the meaning given by the Companies Act 2006 s 2(1) (as to which see PARA 16): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(7) (substituted by SI 2009/1941). As to the meaning of 'director' for the purposes of the Companies Acts see PARA 478. As to the application of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 to building societies, to incorporated friendly societies, and to NHS foundation trusts, see PARA 1578.

Any reference in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 to provisions, or a particular provision, of the Companies Acts or the Insolvency Act includes the corresponding provisions or provision of corresponding earlier legislation: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(1), (8) (s 22(8) substituted by SI 2009/1941). As to the Insolvency Act 1985 see PARA 15. The Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 1A (see PARA 1579), ss 6-10 (see PARAS 1584, 1589, 1592 et seq), ss 13-15 (see PARAS 1614-1616), s 19(c) (see PARAS 1583-1584), s 20 (see PARA 1607), Sch 1 (see PARAS 1593-1594) (and ss 1, 17 as they apply for the purposes of those provisions) are deemed included in the Insolvency Act 1986 Pts I-VII (ss 1-251) for the purposes of s 411 (power to make insolvency rules) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1041), s 414 (fees orders) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1106), s 420 (orders extending provisions about insolvent companies to insolvent partnerships) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1166), and s 422 (modification of such provisions in their application to authorised institutions) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 552): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 21(2) (amended by the Companies Act 1989 s 212, Sch 24; the Insolvency Act 2000 Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 14(1), (2); and SI 2009/1941).

The term 'director' is defined in almost identical words for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22, the Companies Act 2006 s 250 (see PARA 478), and the Insolvency Act 1986 s 251 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 5). The jurisprudence that has built up in relation to the term is often 'read across' in these different statutory contexts. It has been held, for instance, that there is no justification in giving that term a different construction for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6 (see PARA 1592) than that which had been given in established authority for the purposes of the Insolvency Act 1986 s 214 (declaration of liability for wrongful trading) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 914): see Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Hall [2006] EWHC 1995 (Ch), (2006) Times, 2 August, [2006] All ER (D) 432 (Jul).

(As to this case generally see note 5). However, it may be possible for an individual through his control of a corporate director to constitute himself a director of a subject company, depending on what that individual procures the corporate director to do: see Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Hall [2006] EWHC 1995 (Ch), (2006) Times, 2 August, [2006] All ER (D) 432 (Jul). The jurisprudence that has built up in relation to the term is often 'read across' in these different statutory contexts. See also note 1.

1576. Meaning of 'shadow director' under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986.

For the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, unless the context otherwise requires, 'shadow director', in relation to a company¹, means a person in accordance with whose directions or instructions the directors² of a company are accustomed to act³ (but so that a person is not deemed a shadow director by reason only that the directors act on advice given by him in a professional capacity)⁴. This statutory definition of a shadow director must be construed in the normal way to give effect to the parliamentary intention ascertainable from the mischief to be dealt with and the words used⁵.

It is not necessary that the alleged shadow director should conceal the part he plays in the affairs of the company⁶. However, it is necessary to examine the facts, bearing in mind that the purpose of the legislation is to identify those, other than professional advisers, with real influence in the corporate affairs of the company, albeit that it is not necessary that such influence should be exercised over the whole field of the company's corporate activities⁷. The directors of a holding company who give directions to the directors of one or other of its subsidiaries render themselves personally liable as shadow directors of the subsidiary but if they act merely in their capacity as directors of the holding company the holding company is the shadow director⁸.

A 'shadow director' is to be distinguished from a de facto director⁹, and a person is unlikely to be a de facto director and a shadow director simultaneously, although he may be both in succession¹⁰.

1 For these purposes, unless the context otherwise requires, 'company' means a company registered under the Companies Act 2006 in Great Britain, or a company that may be wound up under the Insolvency Act 1986 Pt V (ss 220-229) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1147 et seq): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(1), (2) (s 22(2) substituted by SI 2009/1941). As to the meaning of 'Great Britain' see PARA 1 note 5. As to registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 111 et seq. See also Re Seagull Manufacturing Co Ltd (in liquidation) (No 2) [1994] Ch 91, [1994] 2 All ER 767 (regarding director of a company in compulsory liquidation who was a British subject resident outside the jurisdiction). As to the application of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 to building societies, to incorporated friendly societies, and to NHS foundation trusts, see PARA 1578. Subject to the provisions of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22, expressions that are defined for the purposes of the Companies Acts (see the Companies Act 2006 s 1174 and Sch 8) have the same meaning in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986: s 22(9) (substituted by SI 2008/948; amended by SI 2009/1941). As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 1575 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1575. The definition of 'director' given for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 is stated in very similar terms to that given for the purposes of the Insolvency Act 1986 (see s 251; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 5) and for the purposes of the Companies Acts (see the Companies Act 2006 s 250; and PARA 478). The jurisprudence that has built up in relation to the term is often 'read across' in these different statutory contexts.

3 As to the use of the words 'direction' and 'instruction' in this definition see Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Deverell [2001] Ch 340 at 354, [2000] 2 All ER 365 at 376 per Morritt LJ (whether any particular communication from the alleged shadow director, whether by words or conduct, was to be classified as a direction or instruction had to be objectively ascertained by the court in the light of all the evidence and, in that connection, it was not necessary to prove the understanding of either the giver or the receiver; in many cases, it will suffice to prove the communication and the consequence); Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Becker [2002] EWHC 2200 (Ch), [2003] 1 BCLC 555 (proof required of a pattern of conduct in which a de jure director of a company was accustomed to act on the instructions or directions of the alleged shadow director; test for shadow director not satisfied if all that could be shown was that a de jure director acted on the instructions or directions of the alleged shadow director in relation to one event at the end of the company's life). Although it would doubtless be sufficient to show that in the face of 'directions or instructions' from the alleged shadow director the properly appointed directors or some of them had cast themselves in a subservient role or surrendered their respective discretions, it was not necessary to do so in all cases: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Deverell.

It is possible, though unlikely, that a company's bank might be a shadow director: Re a Company (No 005009 of 1987), ex p Copp [1989] BCLC 13, (1988) 4 BCC 424. See also Re Tasbian Ltd (No 3) [1993] BCLC 297, [1992] BCC 358, CA (outside investor).

4 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(1), (5). Non-professional advice might come within the statutory description; the proviso excepting advice given in a professional capacity appeared to assume that advice generally was or might be included: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Deverell [2001] Ch 340, [2000] 2 All ER 365, CA (the concepts of 'direction' and 'instruction' do not exclude the concept of 'advice' for all three share the common feature of 'guidance').

The definition of 'shadow director' given for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 (ie in s 22(1), (5)) is stated in very similar terms to that given for the purposes of the Insolvency Act 1986 (see s 251; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 5) and for the purposes of the Companies Acts (see the Companies Act 2006 s 251; and PARA 479). The jurisprudence that has built up in relation to the term is often 'read across' in these different statutory contexts.

1577. De facto directors.

A de facto director (or a 'director in fact') is a person who assumes to act as a director¹; he is held out as a director by the company², and claims and purports to be a director, although he is never actually or validly appointed as such³.

In order to establish that a person is a de facto director of a company, it is necessary to plead and prove that he undertakes functions in relation to the company which could properly be discharged only by a director⁴. The touchstone is whether the alleged de facto director has been part of the corporate governing structure, and inherent in that touchstone was the distinction between someone who participated (or had the right to participate) in collective decision making on corporate policy and strategy and its implementation, on the one hand, and others who might advise or act on behalf of, or otherwise for the benefit of, the company, but did not participate in decision making as part of the corporate governance of the company; a director is not a de facto director if in his decision making he is always subordinate to the de jure directors⁵. The definition of a de facto director cannot be extended to include an individual who has taken none of the courses of action which would normally qualify him as such simply because he was in a position to take those actions⁶.

A director of a corporate de jure director, in order to be constituted a de facto director of a subject company, had to cause the corporate director to take actions with relation to the subject company as would have constituted it a de facto director of that company were it not already a director de jure⁷.

1 See Re Lo-Line Electric Motors Ltd [1988] Ch 477, [1988] 2 All ER 692 (the word 'director' is capable of including and, given the protective purpose of disqualification, does include de facto directors) (decided under the Companies Act 1985 s 300 (repealed), which was a predecessor of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 but in more limited terms); and see PARA 1575. However, in an exclusively penal provision, the criminal liability of a de facto director has to be expressly referred to: see Re Lo-Line Electric Motors Ltd at 489, 699 per Browne-Wilkinson V-C. As to the meaning of 'director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1575. As to the meaning of 'director' for the purposes of the Companies Acts see PARA 478.

A de facto director owes to the company the usual duties eg to act in good faith in its interests: see Primlake Ltd (in liquidation) v Matthews Associates [2006] EWHC 1227 (Ch), [2007] 1 BCLC 666 (de facto director liable for breach of duty by enriching himself at the claimant's expense in paying large sums to himself which he was not, and knew he was not, entitled).

The formulation given in the text has been followed in subsequent cases under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 but in that context the courts have been careful not to treat the formulation as exhaustive or to postulate any one decisive test, preferring the issue to be judged objectively in the light of all relevant factors: see Re Moorgate Metals Ltd [1995] 1 BCLC 503; Re Richborough Furniture Ltd [1996] 1 BCLC 507, [1996] BCC 155; Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Tjolle [1998] 1 BCLC 333 at 343-344 per Jacob J (relevant factors include at least whether or not there was a holding out by the company of the individual as a director, whether the individual used the title, whether the individual had proper information (eg management accounts) on which to base decisions, and whether the individual had to make major decisions etc); Re Kaytech International plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Kaczer [1999] 2 BCLC 351 at 420-424, [1999] BCC 390 at 399-402, CA, per Robert Walker LJ (a person may be a de facto director where he has assumed the status and functions of a company director so as to make himself responsible as if he were a de jure director); Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Hollier [2006] EWHC 1804 (Ch) at [81], [2006] All ER (D) 232 (Jul) at [81] per Etherton J (whether a person is held out by the company, or claimed or purported, to be a director, and whether that person had access or the ability to obtain access to relevant company information is likely to be highly relevant and may be decisive); Re Mea Corpn Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Aviss [2006] EWHC 1846 (Ch), [2007] 1 BCLC 618.

1578. Disqualification order.

A disqualification order is an order made¹ against a person that for a period specified in the order² he must not be a director³ of a company⁴, act as receiver of a company's property⁵ or in any way, whether directly or indirectly, be concerned or take part in⁶ the promotion, formation or management⁷ of a company unless (in each case) he has the leave of the court⁸; nor may he act as an insolvency practitioner⁹.

Where a disqualification order is made against a person who is already subject to such an order or to a disqualification undertaking¹⁰, the periods specified in those orders or, as the case may be, in the order and the undertaking run concurrently¹¹.

A disqualification order may be made on grounds which are or include matters other than criminal convictions notwithstanding that the person in respect of whom it is to be made may be criminally liable in respect of those matters¹².

The Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 applies to building societies¹³, to incorporated friendly societies¹⁴, to NHS foundation trusts¹⁵, and to open-ended investment companies¹⁶, as it applies to companies¹⁷.

A person who is subject to a disqualification order or disqualification undertaking is disqualified from being a charity trustee or trustee for a charity, unless leave has been granted by the court¹⁸.

Where an insolvent partnership is wound up as an unregistered company, certain of the provisions of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 apply, subject to specified modifications¹⁹.

The Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 is applied with modifications to limited liability partnerships²⁰.

1 In the circumstances specified in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, a court may (and under s 6 (see PARA 1592) and s 9A (see PARA 1585) must) make a disqualification order: s 1(1) (amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 204(1), (3)). For these purposes, 'court' has the meaning given by the Companies Acts (see PARA 212 note 1): see the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(9) (substituted by SI 2008/948). As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 1575 note 1. See also notes 13-16.

2 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 1(1) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 5(1)). In each section of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 which gives to a court power or, as the case may be, imposes on it the duty to make a disqualification order there is specified the maximum (and in s 6 (as to which see PARA 1592) the minimum) period of disqualification which may or (as the case may be) must be imposed by means of the order; and, unless the court otherwise orders, the period of disqualification so imposed begins at the end of the period of 21 days beginning with the date of the order: s 1(2) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 5(2)). As to the period of disqualification see PARA 1610.

3 As to the meaning of 'director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1575.

4 As to the meaning of 'company' for these purposes see PARA 1576 note 1.

5 For these purposes, any references to acting as receiver includes acting as manager or as both receiver and manager, but does not include acting as administrative receiver; and 'receivership' is to be read accordingly: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(10) (added by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 5(3)). As to the construction of references to receivers and managers generally in the Companies Acts, and in the Insolvency Act 1986, see PARA 1336. As to administrative receivers generally see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 380 et seq.

6 This wording is intended to prevent persons, against whom an order of disqualification has been made, from taking part in the management of company affairs generally: R v Campbell [1984] BCLC 83, CA (decided under the Companies Act 1948 s 188(1) (now repealed) where the meaning of 'be concerned or take part in' was considered, and the conclusion drawn that 'be concerned in' should not be narrowly construed to mean 'take part in').

7 As to the meaning of 'management' see Re Clasper Group Services Ltd [1989] BCLC 143, (1988) 4 BCC 673 (decided under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 212(1)(c): see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 688); Comr for Corporate Affairs v Bracht (1989) 7 ACLC 40 at 47-48 per Ormiston J; Re Market Wizard Systems (UK) Ltd [1998] 2 BCLC 282 at 299-300 per Carnwath J.

8 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 1(1)(a) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 5(1)). As to obtaining the court's leave to act despite being disqualified see PARA 1611. The Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 1(1) envisages one disqualification with a number of different consequences and not several different categories of disqualification: R v Cole [1998] 2 BCLC 234, CA. An order disqualifying a person from acting as a director cannot be limited to a disqualification from holding directorships in public companies: R v Ward, R v Howarth [2001] EWCA Crim 1648, (2001) Times, 10 August.

9 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 1(1)(b) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 5(1)). References to acting as an insolvency practitioner are to be read in accordance with the Insolvency Act 1986 s 388 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 8): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(3) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 15(1), (2)).

13 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22A(1) (s 22A added by the Companies Act 1989 s 211(3)). References in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 to a company, or to a director or an officer of a company include, respectively, references to a building society within the meaning of the Building Societies Act 1986 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 1856) or to a director or officer, within the meaning of the Building Societies Act 1986 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 1944), of a building society: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22A(2) (as so added). In relation to a building society the definition of 'shadow director' in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(5) (as to which see PARA 1575) applies with the substitution of 'building society' for 'company': s 22A(3) (as so added). In the application of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 Sch 1 (see PARAS 1593-1594) to the directors of a building society, references to provisions of the Companies Act 2006 or the Insolvency Act 1986 include references to the corresponding provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22A(4) (as so added; amended by SI 2009/1941).

In relation to an incorporated friendly society every reference to a shadow director must be omitted: s 22B(3) (as so added). References in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 to a company, or to a director or officer of a company, include, respectively, references to an NHS foundation trust or to a director or officer of the trust; but references to shadow directors are omitted: s 22C(2) (as so added). In the application of Sch 1 (see PARAS 1593-1594) to the directors of an NHS foundation trust, references to the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 or the Insolvency Act 1986 include references to the corresponding provisions of the National Health Service Act 2006 Pt 2 Ch 5 (ss 30-65) (NHS foundation trusts) (see HEALTH SERVICES vol 54 (2008) PARA 174 et seq): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22C(3) (as so added; amended by the National Health Service (Consequential Provisions) Act 2006 s 2, Sch 1 para 92; and SI 2009/1941).

1579. Disqualification undertaking.

A disqualification undertaking is an undertaking accepted¹ by the Secretary of State² made by any person that, for a period specified³ in the undertaking, the person⁴ will not be a director⁵ of a company⁶, act as receiver of a company's property⁷ or in any way, whether directly or indirectly, be concerned or take part in⁸ the promotion, formation or management⁹ of a company unless, in each case, he has the leave of a court¹⁰; nor will he act as an insolvency practitioner¹¹.

Where a disqualification undertaking by a person who is already subject to such an undertaking or to a disqualification order¹² is accepted, the periods specified in those undertakings or, as the case may be, the undertaking and the order will run concurrently¹³.

In determining whether to accept a disqualification undertaking by any person, the Secretary of State may take account of matters other than criminal convictions, notwithstanding that the person may be criminally liable in respect of those matters¹⁴; and he must, as respects the person's conduct as a director of any company concerned, have regard to the matters for determining unfitness of directors¹⁵.

1 He accepted in the circumstances specified in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 ss 7, 8 (see PARAS 1584, 1596-1599).

2 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. See Re Blackspur Group plc, Eastaway v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry [2007] EWCA Civ 425, [2008] 1 BCLC 153 (affirming Re Blackspur Group plc, Eastaway v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry [2006] EWHC 299 (Ch), [2006] 2 BCLC 489) (acceptance of understanding does not impugn a director's entitlement under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6 to a fair trial (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 134 et seq); there is no compulsion on a director to give an understanding but rather an option to dispose of proceedings on mutually agreed terms). The Secretary of State's discretion under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7(2A) (see PARA 1599) is unfettered and he is entitled to decide that it would be inexpedient in the public interest to accept an undertaking without a schedule of unfit conduct: Re Blackspur Group plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Davies [2001] EWCA Civ 1595, [2002] 2 BCLC 263.

3 The maximum period which may be specified in a disqualification undertaking is 15 years, and the minimum period which may be specified in a disqualification undertaking under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7 is two years: s 1A(2) (s 1A added by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 6(1), (2)). The court may, on the application of a person who is subject to a disqualification undertaking, reduce the period for which the undertaking is to be in force, or provide for it to cease to be in force: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 8A(1) (s 8A added by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 6(1), (5)). On the hearing of such an application, the Secretary of State must appear and call the attention of the court to any matters which seem to him to be relevant, and may himself give evidence or call witnesses: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 8A(2) (as so added). Section 8A(2) does not apply to an application in the case of an undertaking given under s 9B (see PARA 1586), and in such a case on the hearing of the application whichever of the Office of Fair Trading (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARAS 6-8) or a specified regulator (within the meaning of s 9E: see PARA 1585) accepted the undertaking must appear and call the attention of the court to any matters which appear to it or him (as the case may be) to be relevant, and may give evidence or call witnesses: s 8A(2A) (s 8A as so added; and s 8A(2A) added by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 204(1), (4)). For these purposes, 'court': (1) means, in the case of an undertaking given under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9B, the High Court; and (2) in any other case has the same meaning as in s 7(2) (see PARA 1599 note 6) or s 8 (see PARA 1584 note 7) (as the case may be): s 8A(3) (as so added; and substituted by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 204(1), (5)). As to the meaning of 'court' generally see PARA 212 note 1. As to exercise of the court's jurisdiction under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 8A see Re INS Realisations Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Jonkler [2006] EWHC 135 (Ch), [2006] 2 All ER 902, [2006] 1 WLR 3433 (in particular, there is no power to annul an undertaking as if it never existed).

(ii) Grounds for Disqualification

1580. Disqualification on conviction of indictable offence.

The court¹ may make a disqualification order² against a person where he is convicted of an indictable offence³, whether on indictment or summarily, in connection with the promotion, formation, management, liquidation or striking off of a company⁴, with the receivership of a company's property⁵ or with his being an administrative receiver⁶ of a company⁷.

The maximum period of disqualification which may be imposed under these provisions is, where the disqualification order is made by a court of summary jurisdiction, five years, and in any other case, 15 years⁸.

1 For these purposes, 'court' means: (1) any court having jurisdiction to wind up the company in relation to which the offence was committed; or (2) the court by or before which the person is convicted of the offence; or (3) in the case of a summary conviction in England and Wales, any other magistrates' court acting in the same local justice area: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 2(2) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 300(a)). As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5.

2 As to disqualification orders see PARA 1578.

3 For these purposes, the definition of 'indictable offence' in the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1386) applies: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 2(2). It is wrong in principle to make a compensation order against a person for fraudulent trading at the same time as to make a disqualification order: R v Holmes [1991] BCC 394. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS/(ii) Grounds for Disqualification/1581. Disqualification for persistent breaches of companies legislation.

1581. Disqualification for persistent breaches of companies legislation.

The court¹ may make a disqualification order² against a person where it appears to it that he has been persistently in default in relation to provisions of the companies legislation³ requiring any return, account or other document to be filed with, delivered or sent to the registrar of companies, or notice of any matter to be given to the registrar of companies⁴.

On an application⁵ to the court for such an order to be made, the fact that a person has been persistently in default in relation to such provisions as are mentioned above may, without prejudice to its proof in any other manner, be conclusively proved by showing that in the five years ending with the date of the application he has been adjudged guilty⁶, whether or not on the same occasion, of three or more defaults in relation to those provisions⁷.

The maximum period of disqualification which may be imposed under these provisions is five years⁸.

1 For these purposes, 'court' means any court having jurisdiction to wind up any of the companies in relation to which the offence or other default has been or is alleged to have been committed: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 3(4).

2 As to disqualification orders see PARA 1578.

3 For these purposes, the 'companies legislation' means the Companies Acts and the Insolvency Act 1986 Pts I-VII (ss 1-251) (company insolvency and winding up): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 3(4A) (added by SI 2009/1941). As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 1575 note 1.

4 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 3(1). For these purposes, no account is to be taken of any offence which was committed, or any default order which was made, before 1 June 1977 (ie the date on which the Companies Act 1976 s 28 (now repealed) came into force): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 19(b), Sch 2 para 5. As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to delivery to the registrar of documents see PARA 135 et seq.

5 See further PARA 1601 et seq.

6 A person is to be treated under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 3(2) as being adjudged guilty of a default in relation to any provision of that legislation if:

2288 (1) he is convicted, whether on indictment or summarily, of an offence consisting of a contravention of or failure to comply with that provision, whether on his own part or on the part of any company (s 3(3)(a)); or

2289 (2) a default order is made against him under:

9. (a) the Companies Act 2006 s 452 (order requiring delivery of company accounts: see PARA 883);

10. (b) s 456 (order requiring preparation of revised accounts: see PARA 901);
10

11. (c) s 1113 (enforcement of company's filing obligations: see PARA 166);
11

12. (d) the Insolvency Act 1986 s 41 (enforcement of receiver's or manager's duty to make returns: see PARA 1353);
12

13. (e) s 170 (enforcement of liquidator's duty to make returns: see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 570),

2290 in respect of any such contravention of or failure to comply with that provision, whether on his own part or on the part of any company (Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 3(3)(b) (amended by the Companies Act 1989 s 23, Sch 10 para 35(1), (2)(a), (b); and SI 2008/948; SI 2009/1941)).

7 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 3(2). Under the Companies Act 1948 s 188 (repealed), it was not necessary to show that a person had been culpable, in the sense of evincing a deliberate disregard of the relevant provisions, in order to prove that he had been 'persistently in default'; but culpability could be taken into account in considering whether or not to disqualify and for how long: Re Arctic Engineering Ltd (No 2) [1986] 2 All ER 346, [1986] 1 WLR 686.

1582. Disqualification for fraud etc in a winding up.

The court¹ may make a disqualification order² against a person if, in the course of the winding up of a company³, it appears that he⁴:

- 1004 (1) has been guilty of an offence for which he is liable under the fraudulent trading provisions⁵, whether he has been convicted or not⁶; or
- 1005 (2) has otherwise been guilty, while an officer⁷ or liquidator of the company, receiver of the company's property⁸ or administrative receiver⁹ of the company, of any fraud in relation to the company or of any breach of his duty as such officer, liquidator, receiver or administrative receiver¹⁰.

The maximum period of disqualification which may be imposed under these provisions is 15 years¹¹.

See Re Denis Hilton Ltd [2002] 1 BCLC 302 (a person could not complain of the fact that the civil proceedings followed in the train of criminal proceedings as the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 4 specifically envisages those events; and a suggestion that the Secretary of State was somehow represented at the criminal proceedings and in substance a party, so that he was to be treated as having refrained from seeking or as having failed to obtain a disqualification order, is wholly unrealistic and fanciful). See also note 8. As to the situation where a director is subject to both criminal and civil proceedings see also PARA 1599 note 2.

7 For these purposes, 'officer' includes a shadow director: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 4(2). As to the meaning of 'shadow director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1576. 'Officer' has the same meaning as in the Companies Acts (see the Companies Act 2006 s 1173(1); and PARA 607): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(1), (6) (s 22(6) substituted by SI 2009/1941). 1583. Disqualification on summary conviction.

Where a person is convicted of a summary offence¹, being for these purposes an offence of which a person is convicted, either on indictment or summarily, in consequence of a contravention of, or failure to comply with, any provision of the companies legislation² requiring a return, account or other document to be filed with, delivered or sent, or notice of any matter to be given, to the registrar of companies³, whether the contravention or failure is on the person's own part or on the part of any company⁴, the court by which he is convicted, or, in England or Wales⁵, any other magistrates' court acting in the same local justice area, may make a disqualification order⁶ against him⁷ if, during the five years ending with the date of the conviction, the person has had made against him, or has been convicted of, in total not less than three default orders⁸ and offences counting for the purposes of these provisions⁹.

The maximum period of disqualification which may be imposed under these provisions is five years¹⁰.

1 For these purposes, the definition of 'summary offence' in the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1386) applies: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 5(4)(a).

2 For these purposes, the 'companies legislation' means the Companies Acts and the Insolvency Act 1986 Pts I-VII (ss 1-251) (company insolvency and winding up): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 5(4A) (added by SI 2009/1941). 9 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 5(3). The offences counting for the purposes of these provisions may include that of which he is convicted as mentioned in s 5(2) (see the text and notes 1-7) and any other offence of which he is convicted on the same occasion: s 5(3).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS/(ii) Grounds for Disqualification/1584. Application for disqualification order after investigation of company.

1584. Application for disqualification order after investigation of company.

If it appears to the Secretary of State¹ from investigative material² that it is expedient in the public interest that a disqualification order³ should be made against any person who is or has been a director⁴ or shadow director⁵ of a company⁶, he may apply to the court⁷ for such an order⁸. The court may make a disqualification order against a person where, on an application under these provisions, it is satisfied that his conduct in relation to the company⁹ makes him unfit to be concerned in the management of a company¹⁰.

However, where it appears to the Secretary of State from such material¹¹ that, in the case of a person who has offered to give him a disqualification undertaking¹², the conduct of the person in relation to a company of which the person is or has been a director or shadow director makes him unfit to be concerned in the management of a company¹³, and it is expedient in the public interest that he should accept the undertaking, instead of applying, or proceeding with an application, for a disqualification order¹⁴, he may accept the undertaking¹⁵.

The maximum period of disqualification which may be imposed under these provisions is 15 years¹⁶.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 For this purpose, 'investigative material' means: (1) a report made by inspectors under the Companies Act 1985 s 437 (see PARA 1554) or the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 167-169 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARAS 449-450) or s 284 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 448); and (2) information or documents obtained under the Companies Act 1985 s 437 (see PARA 1554), s 446E (see PARA 1553), s 447 (see PARA 1558), s 448 (see PARA 1559), s 451A (see PARA 1563) or s 453A (see PARA 1565), the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2 (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(3) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1090), the Criminal Law (Consolidation) (Scotland) Act 1995 s 28, the Companies Act 1989 s 83 (see PARA 1569) or the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 165 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 447), ss 171-173 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 449) or s 175 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 453): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 8(1A) (added by SI 2001/3649; and amended by the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 25(1), Sch 2 Pt 3 para 28; the Companies Act 2006 s 1039(a), (b); and by SI 2009/1941). Where the company is an open-ended investment company, the reference to investigative material in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 8(1) must be read as including a report made by inspectors under regulations made by virtue of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 262(2)(k) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 621): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22D(2) (added by SI 2009/1941). 1585. Competition disqualification order.

The court¹ must make a disqualification order² against a person if³:

- 1006 (1) an undertaking which is a company⁴ of which he is a director⁵ commits a breach of competition law⁶; and
- 1007 (2) the court considers that his conduct⁷ as a director makes him unfit to be concerned in the management of a company⁸.

The maximum period of disqualification under these provisions is 15 years⁹.

An application under these provisions for a disqualification order may be made by the Office of Fair Trading¹⁰ or by a specified regulator¹¹.

1 For these purposes, the court is the High Court: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9E(1), (3) (s 9E added by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 204(1), (2)).

6 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9A(2) (as added: see note 3). An undertaking commits a breach of competition law if it engages in conduct which infringes any of the following: (1) the 'Chapter 1 prohibition' within the meaning of the Competition Act 1998 (prohibition on agreements, etc preventing, restricting or distorting competition: see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 116 et seq); (2) the 'Chapter 2 prohibition' within the meaning of the Competition Act 1998 (prohibition on abuse of a dominant position: see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 125 et seq); (3) the Treaty Establishing the European Community (Rome, 25 March 1957; TS 1 (1973); Cmd 5179) (the 'EC Treaty') art 81 (prohibition on agreements, etc preventing, restricting or distorting competition: see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 61 et seq); or (4) the EC Treaty art 82 (prohibition on abuse of a dominant position: see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 68 et seq); Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9A(4) (as added: see note 3). For the purposes of head (1) or head (3) references to the conduct of an undertaking are references to its conduct taken with the conduct of one or more other undertakings: s 9A(8) (as added: see note 3). The Competition Act 1998 s 60 (consistent treatment of questions arising under United Kingdom and Community law) applies in relation to any question arising by virtue of head (1) or head (2) as it applies in relation to any question arising under the Competition Act 1998 Pt 1 (ss 1-60) (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 150); Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9A(11) (as added: see note 3).

8 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9A(3) (as added: see note 3). For the purpose of deciding under s 9A(3) whether a person is unfit to be concerned in the management of a company, the court: (1) must have regard to whether s 9A(6) applies to him; (2) may have regard to his conduct as a director of a company in connection with any other breach of competition law; (3) must not have regard to the matters mentioned in Sch 1 (see PARA 1593); s 9A(5) (as added: see note 3). Section s 9A(6) applies to a person if as a director of the company: (a) his conduct contributed to the breach of competition law mentioned in s 9A(2) (see head (1) in the text); (b) his conduct did not contribute to the breach but he had reasonable grounds to suspect that the conduct of the undertaking constituted the breach and he took no steps to prevent it; (c) he did not know but ought to have known that the conduct of the undertaking constituted the breach: s 9A(6) (as added: see note 3). For the purposes of head (a), it is immaterial whether the person knew that the conduct of the undertaking constituted the breach: s 9A(7) (as added: see note 3).

Each of the following is a specified regulator for the purposes of a breach of competition law in relation to a matter in respect of which he or it has a function: (1) the Office of Communications (see TELECOMMUNICATIONS vol 97 (2010) PARA 2 et seq); (2) the Gas and Electricity Markets Authority (see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 708 et seq); (3) the Water Services Regulation Authority (see WATER AND WATERWAYS); (4) the Office of Rail Regulation (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 49 et seq); and (5) the Civil Aviation Authority (see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 50 et seq): s 9E(1), (2) (s 9E as added (see note 1); and s 9E(2) amended by the Communications Act 2003 s 406(1), Sch 17 para 83; the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 16(5), Sch 2 Pt 2 para 19(j); and the Water Act 2003 s 101(1), Sch 7 Pt 2 para 25).

1586. Competition undertakings.

If:

- 1008 (1) the Office of Fair Trading¹ or a specified regulator² thinks that in relation to any person an undertaking which is a company³ of which he is a director⁴ has committed or is committing a breach of competition law⁵;
- 1009 (2) the Office of Fair Trading or the specified regulator thinks that the conduct of the person as a director⁶ makes him unfit⁷ to be concerned in the management of a company⁸; and
- 1010 (3) the person offers to give the Office of Fair Trading or the specified regulator, as the case may be, a disqualification undertaking⁹, the Office of Fair Trading or the specified regulator, as the case may be, may accept a disqualification undertaking from the person instead of applying for or proceeding with an application for a disqualification order¹⁰.

The maximum period which may be specified in a disqualification undertaking is 15 years¹¹.

If a disqualification undertaking is accepted from a person who is already subject to a disqualification undertaking under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 or to a disqualification order the periods specified in those undertakings or the undertaking and the order, as the case may be, run concurrently¹².

1 As to the Office of Fair Trading see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARAS 6-8. The Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9A(4)-(8) (see PARA 1585) applies for the purposes of s 9B as it applies for the purposes of s 9A but in the application of s 9A(5) (factors to be taken into consideration by a court when deciding whether a person is unfit to be concerned in the management of a company: see PARA 1585 note 8), the reference to the court must be construed as a reference to the Office of Fair Trading or a specified regulator (as the case may be): s 9B(7) (s 9B added by Enterprise Act 2002 s 204(1), (2)).

7 As to the factors to be taken into consideration by a court (see note 1) when deciding under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9A(3) whether a person is unfit to be concerned in the management of a company see PARA 1585 note 8.

8 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9B(1)(b) (as added: see note 1).

9 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9B(1)(c) (as added: see note 1). A disqualification undertaking is an undertaking by a person that for the period specified in the undertaking he will not: (1) be a director of a company; (2) act as receiver of a company's property; (3) in any way, whether directly or indirectly, be concerned or take part in the promotion, formation or management of a company; (4) act as an insolvency practitioner: s 9B(3) (as added: see note 1). However, a disqualification undertaking may provide that a prohibition falling within heads (1) to (3) does not apply if the person obtains the leave of the court: s 9B(4) (as added: see note 1). See PARA 1578 notes 3-9. As to the meaning of references to acting as receiver for these purposes see PARA 1578 note 5.

1587. Competition investigations.

If the Office of Fair Trading¹ or a specified regulator² has reasonable grounds for suspecting that a breach of competition law has occurred³ it or he (as the case may be) may carry out an investigation for the purpose of deciding whether to make an application⁴ for a disqualification order⁵. If as a result of such an investigation, the Office of Fair Trading or a specified regulator proposes to apply⁶ for a disqualification order⁷, before making the application the Office of Fair Trading or regulator (as the case may be) must⁸:

- 1011 (1) give notice to the person likely to be affected by the application⁹; and
- 1012 (2) give that person an opportunity to make representations¹⁰.

1588. Co-ordination.

The Secretary of State¹ may make regulations² for the purpose of co-ordinating the performance of functions connected with competition disqualification orders and undertakings³ which are exercisable concurrently by two or more persons⁴.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 The Competition Act 1998 s 54(5)-(7) applies to regulations made under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9D as it applies to regulations made under the Competition Act 1998 s 54 (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 147), and for that purpose in s 54: (1) references to 'Pt 1 functions' must be read as references to relevant functions (see note 3); (2) references to 'a regulator' must be read as references to a specified regulator; (3) 'a competent person' also includes any of the specified regulators: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9D(2) (s 9D added by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 204(1), (2)). As to specified regulators for the purposes of a breach of competition law see PARA 1585 note 11. The power to make regulations under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9D must be exercised by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 9D(3) (as so added). Such a statutory instrument may contain such incidental, supplemental, consequential and transitional provision as the Secretary of State thinks appropriate and may make different provision for different cases: s 9D(4) (as so added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made.

1589. Disqualification for participation in fraudulent or wrongful trading.

Where the court¹ makes a declaration under the fraudulent trading provisions² or the wrongful trading provisions³ that a person is liable to make a contribution to a company's assets⁴, then, whether or not an application for such an order is made by any person, the court may, if it thinks fit, also make a disqualification order⁵ against the person to whom the declaration relates⁶.

The maximum period of disqualification which may be imposed under these provisions is 15 years⁷.

1590. Undischarged bankrupts.

A person who acts as director¹ of a company² or who directly or indirectly takes part in or is concerned in the promotion, formation or management of a company³, without the leave of the court⁴, at a time when⁵ he is an undischarged bankrupt⁶, a moratorium period under a debt relief order applies in relation to him⁷ or a bankruptcy restrictions order or a debt relief restrictions order is in force in respect of him⁸, commits an offence⁹. The offence is one of strict liability¹⁰.

A person who acts in contravention of these provisions is also personally responsible for all the relevant debts of the company incurred whilst he was involved in its management¹¹.

In England and Wales¹², the leave of the court may not be given unless notice of intention to apply for it has been served on the official receiver¹³; and it is the latter's duty, if he is of the opinion that it is contrary to the public interest that the application should be granted, to attend on the hearing of the application and oppose it¹⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1575.

2 For these purposes, 'company' includes a company incorporated outside Great Britain that has an established place of business in Great Britain: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 11(4) (added by SI 2009/1941). As to the meaning of 'Great Britain' see PARA 1 note 5.

3 Under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 11, the question of whether or not a defendant is concerned in the management of a company is an issue for the jury to determine, and any belief (including any positive belief) held by the defendant with regard to the nature and quality of his or her actions is irrelevant in relation to the necessary mental element: R v Doring [2002] EWCA Crim 1695, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep 143.

Where a court¹ revokes an administration order² against an individual, it may order that that person may not, except with the leave of the court which made the order, act as director³ or liquidator⁴ of, or directly or indirectly take part or be concerned in the promotion, formation or management of, a company⁵, for such period not exceeding one year as may be specified in the order⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS/(ii) Grounds for Disqualification/1592. Duty of court to disqualify unfit directors of insolvent companies.

1592. Duty of court to disqualify unfit directors of insolvent companies.

The court¹ must make a disqualification order² against a person in any case where, on an application for this purpose³, the court is satisfied⁴:

- 1013 (1) that he is or has been a director⁵ of a company⁶ which has at any time become insolvent⁷, whether while he was a director or subsequently⁸; and
- 1014 (2) that his conduct as a director⁹ of that company, either taken alone or taken together with his conduct as a director of any other company or other companies¹⁰, makes him unfit¹¹ to be concerned in the management of a company¹².

The minimum period of disqualification which may be imposed under these provisions is two years, and the maximum period which may be imposed is 15 years¹³.

These provisions apply both to foreigners outside the jurisdiction and to conduct which occurred outside the jurisdiction¹⁴.

1 For these purposes, and for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7(2) (see PARA 1599 note 7), 'court' means: (1) where the company in question is being or has been wound up by the court (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 438 et seq), that court; (2) where the company in question is being or has been wound up voluntarily (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 939 et seq), any court which has or (as the case may be) had jurisdiction to wind it up; (3) where neither head (1) nor (2) applies but an administrator (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 146 et seq) or administrative receiver (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 380 et seq) has at any time been appointed in respect of the company in question, any court which has jurisdiction to wind it up: s 6(3) (substituted by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 8, Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 5; and amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 248(3), Sch 17 paras 40, 41(b)). The Insolvency Act 1986 s 117 (jurisdiction (England and Wales): see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 438 et seq) and s 120 (jurisdiction (Scotland)) apply for these purposes as if the references in the definitions of 'registered office' to the presentation of the petition for winding up were references: (a) in a case within head (2), to the passing of the resolution for voluntary winding up; and (b) in a case within head (3), to the appointment of the administrator or (as the case may be) administrative receiver: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(3A) (added by the Insolvency Act 2000 Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 5; and amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 Sch 17 paras 40, 41(c)). However, nothing in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(3) invalidates any proceedings by reason of their being taken in the wrong court; and proceedings for or in connection with a disqualification order under s 6, or in connection with a disqualification undertaking accepted under s 7 (see PARA 1599), may be retained in the court in which the proceedings were commenced, although it may not be the court in which they ought to have been commenced: s 6(3B) (added by the Insolvency Act 2000 Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 5). In head (2), the court having jurisdiction to wind up the company is the court having jurisdiction to wind up the company at the date when the disqualification proceedings are brought: Re Lichfield Freight Terminal Ltd [1997] 2 BCLC 109. The court continues to have jurisdiction to hear disqualification proceedings even after winding up is concluded: Re Working Project Ltd, Re Fosterdown Ltd, Re Davies Flooring (Southern) Ltd [1995] 1 BCLC 226. As to whether the definition of 'court' given in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(3) allows the transfer of directors' disqualification proceedings brought under s 6 from one county court to another or to a specialist county court or to the Companies Court in London or to a Chancery District Registry see Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Shakespeare [2005] 2 BCLC 471.

2 As to disqualification orders see PARA 1578.

3 As to the mode of application and the procedure see PARA 1584 et seq.

4 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(1).

5 For these purposes, and for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7 (see PARAS 1596, 1598-1599), 'director' includes a shadow director: s 6(3C) (added by the Insolvency Act 2000 Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 5). As to the meaning of 'director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 (which for these purposes includes a de facto director) see PARA 1575. As to the meaning of 'shadow director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1576. As to de facto directors see PARA 1577. See also Re Promwalk Services Ltd, Frewen v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry [2002] EWHC 2688 (Ch), [2003] 2 BCLC 305 (director believed himself to have resigned before the relevant period but his resignation was found by the court to be ineffective and the director was held to account).

6 As to the meaning of 'company' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1576 note 1.

7 For these purposes, and for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7, a company becomes insolvent if: (1) the company goes into liquidation at a time when its assets are insufficient for the payment of its debts and other liabilities and the expenses of the winding up; (2) the company enters administration; or (3) an administrative receiver of the company is appointed: s 6(2) (amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 Sch 17 paras 40, 41(a)).

The Insolvency Act 1986 s 247 applies as regards references to a company's insolvency and to its going into liquidation (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 9): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(1), (3).

A company which has entered compulsory liquidation becomes insolvent for these purposes when the winding-up order is made and not when the winding-up petition is presented: Re Walter L Jacob & Co Ltd, Official Receiver v Jacob [1993] BCC 512. Where a petition for an administration order has been presented against a company, and an interim order has been made under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 9(4) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 154), followed later by an administration order, the relevant date is the date of the latter order and not the interim order: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Palmer [1993] BCC 650, Ct of Sess. Note that the Insolvency Act 1986 Pt II (ss 8-27) has been replaced by s 8 except in relation to special administration regimes: see the Enterprise Act 2002 ss 248, 249; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 145). Where the company became insolvent by reason of more than one of the triggering events, namely liquidation, administration, or administrative receivership, the time ran from the first of those events; but, where a company has returned to solvency after one of the triggering events, and then returns to insolvency and a further triggering event occurs, then the two-year period may start to run again from the second triggering event: Re Tasbian Ltd [1991] BCLC 54, [1990] BCC 318, CA.

8 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(1)(a).

9 For these purposes, references to a person's conduct as a director of any company or companies include, where that company or any of those companies has become insolvent, that person's conduct in relation to any matter connected with or arising out of the insolvency of that company: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(2). The finding of the court on a person's conduct as a defendant in the proceedings, including as a witness, is capable of amounting to an additional ground of his unfitness: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Reynard [2002] EWCA Civ 497, [2002] 2 BCLC 625. There is no good reason for cutting down the width of the words 'matter connected with or arising out of the insolvency' so as to exclude the conduct of the director at the hearing of the disqualification proceedings: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Reynard at [10] per Mummery LJ.

10 See Re Bath Glass Ltd [1988] BCLC 329, 4 BCC 130. There is no limitation on the number of companies to which an application might refer: Re Surrey Leisure Ltd, Official Receiver v Keam [1999] 2 BCLC 457, CA (the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(1)(b) envisages a single 'lead' company and one or more collateral companies as sufficient to found the jurisdiction; but there may be more than one 'lead' company, and permitting a number of 'lead' companies would not give rise to any unfair procedure, nor would imposing a maximum on the number of 'lead' companies advance the cause of public protection). As to the relevance of a director's conduct with respect to his participation in the management of collateral companies other than the lead company see Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Ivens [1997] 2 BCLC 334, CA. The conduct of a director whilst director of a foreign company may be taken into account: Re Eurostem Maritime Ltd [1987] PCC 190. The word 'companies' is not limited to companies of limited liability: Re Polly Peck International plc (No 2), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Ellis (No 2) [1994] 1 BCLC 574 at 579, [1993] BCC 890 at 895 per Lindsay J.

11 As to the matters to be taken into account for determining unfitness of directors see PARA 1593.

12 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(1)(b). Despite the use of the word 'makes' in the present tense in s 6(1)(b), the question which the court must ask itself is not whether the director is presently unfit to be a director, but whether the relevant conduct specified in s 6(1)(b) alone has fallen below the standards of probity and competence appropriate for persons to be directors of companies; the court does not need to be satisfied that a disqualification order is necessary in the public interest; and evidence tending to show that the director is unlikely to re-offend is relevant to mitigation and any application for leave under s 17 (see PARA 1611) only: Re Grayan Building Services Ltd (in liquidation) [1995] Ch 241, sub nom Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Gray [1995] 1 BCLC 276, CA; Re Landhurst Leasing plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Ball [1999] 1 BCLC 286 at 345 per Hart J (where the court has found that relevant misconduct has occurred, disqualification must follow even though the court is of the opinion that the director is not, at the date of the hearing, unfit). The burden of proof is upon the Secretary of State to establish that the requirements of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(1)(a), (b) are satisfied: Re Living Images Ltd [1996] 1 BCLC 348; Re Verby Print for Advertising Ltd, Fine v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry [1998] 2 BCLC 23. See further PARA 1609. The more serious the allegation made against a director, the more the court will need the assistance of cogent evidence (Re Living Images Ltd) and the more important it is for the case against him to be set out clearly and with adequate particularity (Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Swan [2003] EWHC 1780 (Ch), (2003) Times, 18 August, [2003] All ER (D) 372 (Jul)). See also Re Deaduck Ltd, Baker v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry [2000] 1 BCLC 148 (disqualification order reconsidered despite a finding of breach of duty because the latter conduct was not the subject of the charge). As to the admissibility of evidence in disqualification proceedings see PARA 1607. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

As to the correct approach where criminal and civil disqualification orders potentially overlap, ie by way of criminal proceedings under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 2 (see PARA 1580) and civil proceedings under s 6, see Re Cedarwood Productions Ltd, Re Inter City Print and Finishing Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Rayna [2001] 2 BCLC 48 at 57-60 per Anthony Mann QC (disqualification is but one of a range of sentences available for conviction under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 2; and the s 6 proceedings, if successful, will result in a civil finding of unfitness, and an appropriate disqualification order, rather than a conviction).

It has been clearly established that in disqualification proceedings under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, whether brought under s 8 (see PARA 1584) or under s 7 (see PARA 1599) for an order under s 6, that there is an implied exception to the strict rules of evidence on hearsay evidence, opinion evidence and the rule in Hollington v Hewthorn [1943] KB 587, [1943] 2 All ER 35 (as to which see ESTOPPEL vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 953), against admitting hearsay evidence: Secretary of State for Business Enterprise and Regulatory Reform v Aaron [2008] EWCA Civ 1146, [2009] 1 BCLC 55 (affg Secretary of State for Business Enterprise and Regulatory Reform v Aaron [2008] EWHC 2467 (Ch), [2009] 1 BCLC 55, [2008] All ER (D) 298 (Apr)) (the primary objective of the implied exception permitting admissibility was to enable the Secretary of State to put before the court material already obtained under the statutory scheme for investigation, thereby avoiding the considerable and unnecessary expense and delay of carrying out a second investigation covering the same ground). See also Re David M Aaron (Personal Financial Planners) Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Aaron [2007] NLJR 859, [2007] All ER (D) 32 (Jun), regarding the admission of expert evidence in directors' disqualification proceedings (the court might at times need expert assistance on fact from an expert or experts but, generally speaking, it was hard to see why a court should need expert evidence that was simply expert opinion evidence, when it came to applying 'the standard laid down by the courts'). 1593. Matters for determining unfitness of directors.

Where it falls to a court¹ to determine whether a person's conduct as a director² of any particular company³ or companies makes him unfit to be concerned in the management of a company⁴, the court must, as respects his conduct as a director of that company or, as the case may be, each of those companies, have regard in particular to the matters specified⁵ below⁶.

In determining whether he may accept a disqualification undertaking⁷ from any person, the Secretary of State must, as respects the person's conduct as a director of any company concerned, have regard to the same matters⁸.

In all cases the court must have regard to:

- 1015 (1) any misfeasance or breach of any fiduciary or other duty⁹ by the director in relation to the company¹⁰;
- 1016 (2) any misapplication or retention by the director of, or any conduct by the director giving rise to an obligation¹¹ to account for, any money or other property of the company¹²;
- 1017 (3) the extent of the director's responsibility for the company entering into any transaction liable to be set aside under the provisions¹³ against debt avoidance¹⁴;
- 1018 (4) the extent of the director's responsibility for any failure by the company to comply with any of the provisions relating to:
- 165
405. (a) the obligation¹⁵ to keep and enter up the register of members¹⁶;
406. (b) the obligation¹⁷ to keep the register of members available for inspection¹⁸;
407. (c) the register of directors and secretaries, and of directors' residential addresses¹⁹;
408. (d) the duty to notify the registrar of changes in relation to directors and secretaries²⁰;
409. (e) the company's duty²¹ to keep accounting records²²;
410. (f) where and for how long accounting records are to be kept²³;
411. (g) the company's duty²⁴ to make annual returns²⁵;
412. (h) the company's duty²⁶ to register charges it creates²⁷;
- 166
- 1019 (5) the extent of the director's responsibility for any failure by the directors of the company to comply with the provisions relating to the duty to prepare annual accounts²⁸, the approval and signature of abbreviated accounts²⁹ or the name of the signatory to be stated³⁰ in the published copy of the accounts³¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' for these purposes see PARA 1578 note 1.

2 'Director' includes a shadow director: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9(2) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 8, Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 7(b)). As to the meaning of 'director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 (which for these purposes includes a de facto director) see PARA 1575. As to the meaning of 'shadow director' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1576. As to de facto directors see PARA 1577.

3 As to the meaning of 'company' for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 see PARA 1576 note 1.

4 In every case, the function of the court in addressing the question of unfitness is to decide whether the conduct of which complaint is made by the Secretary of State, viewed cumulatively and taking into account any extenuating circumstances, has fallen below the standards of probity and competence appropriate for persons fit to be directors of companies (as to which see PARA 1594); unfitness might be shown by conduct which is dishonest (including conduct showing a want of probity or integrity) or by conduct which is merely incompetent: Re Barings plc (No 5), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker (No 5) [1999] 1 BCLC 433 at 483 per Jonathan Parker J; affd [2000] 1 BCLC 523 at 535, CA, per Morritt LJ. Where the Secretary of State's case is based solely on allegations of incompetence (no dishonesty of any kind being alleged), the burden is on the Secretary of State to satisfy the court that the conduct complained of demonstrates incompetence of a high degree: Re Barings plc (No 5), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker (No 5) [1999] 1 BCLC 433 at 483 per Jonathan Parker J; affd [2000] 1 BCLC 523 at 535, CA, per Morritt LJ. The list of matters set out in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 Sch 1 is not exhaustive and the matters to which the court might have regard are not limited to the matters listed there: Re Barings plc (No 5), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker (No 5) [1999] 1 BCLC 433 at 483 per Jonathan Parker J (affd [2000] 1 BCLC 523 at 535, CA, per Morritt LJ); Re Migration Services International Ltd, Official Receiver v Webster [2000] 1 BCLC 666 at 677-678 per Neuberger J. In considering the question of unfitness, the respondent's conduct has to be evaluated in context, so that the only extenuating circumstances which might be taken into account in addressing the question of unfitness are those which accompanied the conduct in question: Re Barings plc (No 5), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker (No 5) [1999] 1 BCLC 433 at 483 per Jonathan Parker J (affd [2000] 1 BCLC 523 at 535, CA, per Morritt LJ). See also Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Goldberg [2003] EWHC 2843 (Ch), [2004] 1 BCLC 597. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

The determination of unfitness under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6 (see PARA 1592) is a two-stage process: (1) the Secretary of State has to establish as facts, to the requisite standard of proof, namely on a balance of probabilities, the matters on which the allegation of unfitness is based; (2) the court has to be satisfied that the conduct alleged is sufficiently serious to warrant disqualification: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Swan [2005] EWHC 603 (Ch), [2005] All ER (D) 102 (Apr). See also Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Swan [2003] EWHC 1780 (Ch), (2003) Times, 18 August, [2003] All ER (D) 372 (Jul); and Re AG (Manchester) Ltd (in liquidation), Official Receiver v Watson [2008] EWHC 64 (Ch), [2008] 1 BCLC 321, [2008] All ER (D) 188 (Jan) (second defendant had been content to allow her husband and the first defendant to run the company and to take substantial dividends from it regardless of how and whether they should have been paid; an abdication of responsibility of that kind did amount to unfitness to be a director).

5 In the matters mentioned in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 9(1)(a), Sch 1 Pt I (paras 1-5A) (see heads (1)-(5) in the text). References in Sch 1 to the director and the company are to be read accordingly: s 9(1). The Secretary of State may by order modify any of the provisions of Sch 1; and such an order may contain such transitional provisions as may appear to the Secretary of State necessary or expedient: s 9(4). The power to make such orders is exercisable by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 9(5).

In the application of Sch 1 Pt I in relation to any person who is a director of an open-ended investment company, any reference to a provision of the Companies Act 2006 is to be taken to be a reference to the corresponding provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, or of any rules made under reg 6 (Financial Services Authority rules: see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 621 et seq); Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22D(3) (added by SI 2009/1941). As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 1578 note 16.

9 Whether a director has been in breach of his duties to the company is commonly expressed in terms of a failure to meet the standards of competence and probity required: see Re Grayan Building Services Ltd (in liquidation) [1995] Ch 241, sub nom Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Gray [1995] 1 BCLC 276, CA; Re Landhurst Leasing plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Ball [1999] 1 BCLC 286; Re Barings plc (No 5), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker (No 5) [1999] 1 BCLC 433 (affd [2000] 1 BCLC 523, CA); Re Bradcrown Ltd, Official Receiver v Ireland [2001] 1 BCLC 547; Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Goldberg [2003] EWHC 2843 (Ch), [2004] 1 BCLC 597. However, a finding of breach of duty is neither necessary nor sufficient in itself to find a director unfit: Re Barings plc (No 5), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker (No 5) [1999] 1 BCLC 433 at 486 per Jonathan Parker J; affd [2000] 1 BCLC 523 at 535, CA, per Morritt LJ. 1595. Examples of misconduct.

The court may consider matters of general conduct in addition to the more limited questions of whether specific statutory provisions have been breached, although a typical application for disqualification will include more than one complaint of misconduct¹.

The types of misconduct, and cases where such misconduct has been discussed, are numerous but include the following:

- 1025 (1) failure to keep adequate accounting records or file returns²;
- 1026 (2) trading with 'phoenix' companies³;
- 1027 (3) continuing to draw remuneration whilst insolvent and drawing excessive remuneration⁴;
- 1028 (4) inadequate capitalisation of a company⁵;
- 1029 (5) preferences⁶ and other breaches of duty⁷;
- 1030 (6) trading with no reasonable prospect of paying creditors⁸;
- 1031 (7) trading at the expense of the Crown⁹;
- 1032 (8) failure to co-operate with the official receiver¹⁰.

1596. Reports to the Secretary of State.

If it appears to the official receiver¹, the liquidator², the administrator³, or the administrative receiver⁴, that the conditions which impose a duty on the court to make a disqualification order⁵ are satisfied as respects a person who is or has been a director⁶ of the company in question, the official receiver, the liquidator, the administrator or, as the case may be, the administrative receiver, must forthwith report the matter to the Secretary of State⁷.

4 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7(3)(d). This provision applies in the case of a company of which there is an administrative receiver (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 380 et seq.). For these purposes, 'administrative receiver' has the meaning given by the Insolvency Act 1986 s 251 (ie an administrative receiver as defined by s 29(2): see PARA 1337): Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(1), (3).

5 Ie the conditions mentioned in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(1) (see PARA 1592).

7 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7(3). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. The question whether statutory reports provided to the Secretary of State under s 7(3) are privileged depends on whether there is a public interest requiring protection from disclosure sufficient to override the concerns of the administration of justice reflected in the disclosure rights given to litigants: Re Barings plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker [1998] Ch 356, [1998] 1 All ER 673 (in the absence of a claim for public interest immunity, there was no public interest that required privilege to be accorded to the report and its disclosure to a respondent may be ordered).

Any report made to the Secretary of State under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7(3) by the liquidator of a company which the courts in England and Wales have jurisdiction to wind up and which passes a resolution for voluntary winding up on or after 30 September 1996, or by an administrative receiver of a company appointed otherwise than under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 51 (power to appoint receiver under the law of Scotland) on or after 30 September 1996, or by the administrator of a company which the courts in England and Wales have jurisdiction to wind up which enters administration on or after 30 September 1996, must be made in the form prescribed in the Insolvent Companies (Reports on Conduct of Directors) Rules 1996, SI 1996/1909, r 3(2), Schedule, Form D1 (substituted by SI 2001/764), or in a form which is substantially similar, and in the manner and to the extent required by the applicable form: Insolvent Companies (Reports on Conduct of Directors) Rules 1996, SI 1996/1909, rr 1(3), 3(1), (2) (r 3(1) amended by SI 2003/2096). The form referred to in the Insolvent Companies (Reports on Conduct of Directors) Rules 1996, SI 1996/1909, r 4(3) (see PARA 1597) may be used with such variations, if any, as the circumstances may require: r 5.

1597. Returns by office-holders.

Where it appears to the liquidator of a company¹, to the administrative receiver², or to the administrator³ (each of whom for these purposes is referred to as the 'office-holder'), that the company has at any time become insolvent⁴, there may be furnished to the Secretary of State by the office-holder at any time during the period of six months from the relevant date⁵, a return with respect to every person who was, on the relevant date, a director⁶ or shadow director⁷ of the company, or had been a director or shadow director of the company at any time in the three years immediately preceding that date⁸.

It is, however, the duty of an office-holder to furnish a return complying with these provisions to the Secretary of State⁹:

- 1033 (1) where he is in office in relation to the company on the day one week before the expiry of the period of six months from the relevant date, not later than the expiry of such period¹⁰;
- 1034 (2) where he vacates office (otherwise than by death) before the day one week before the expiry of the period of six months from the relevant date, within 14 days after his vacation of office except where he has furnished such a return on or prior to the day one week before the expiry of such period¹¹.

If an office-holder without reasonable excuse fails to comply with this duty, he is guilty of an offence¹².

5 For these purposes, 'relevant date' means:

2291 (1) in the case of a company in creditors' voluntary winding up, there having been no declaration of solvency by the directors under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 89 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 941), the date of the passing of the resolution for voluntary winding up;

2292 (2) in the case of a company in members' voluntary winding up, the date on which the liquidator forms the opinion that, at the time when the company went into liquidation, its assets were insufficient for the payment of its debts and other liabilities and the expenses of winding up;

2293 (3) in the case of the administrative receiver, the date of his appointment; and

and for the purpose of head (3), the only appointment of an administrative receiver to be taken into account in determining the relevant date is that appointment which is not that of a successor in office to an administrative receiver who has vacated office either by death or pursuant to s 45 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 429): Insolvent Companies (Reports on Conduct of Directors) Rules 1996, SI 1996/1909, r 4(4) (amended by SI 2003/2096).

In such a case, the court, on the application of the Secretary of State or, as the case may be, the official receiver, may make an order directing compliance within such period as may be specified⁹; and the court's order may provide that all costs of and incidental to the application are to be borne by the person to whom the order is directed¹⁰.

COMPANIES ACTS/(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS/(iii) Application for Disqualification/1599. Application by the Secretary of State: unfit directors of insolvent companies.

(iii) Application for Disqualification

1599. Application by the Secretary of State: unfit directors of insolvent companies.

If it appears to the Secretary of State¹ that it is expedient in the public interest² that a disqualification order³ should be made against any person, an application for the making of such an order against that person may be made by the Secretary of State or, if the Secretary of State so directs in the case of a person who is or has been a director⁴ of a company which is being or has been wound up by the court in England and Wales, by the official receiver⁵.

Except with the leave of the court⁶, such an application for the making of a disqualification order against any person may not be made after the end of the period of two years beginning with the day on which the company of which that person is or has been a director became insolvent⁷.

If the proceedings are prosecuted in a dilatory manner, the proceedings may be struck out for want of prosecution⁸.

Instead of applying, or proceeding with an application, for a disqualification order, the Secretary of State may, if it appears to him that the conditions regarding the court's duty to disqualify unfit directors of insolvent companies⁹ are satisfied as respects any person who has offered to give him a disqualification undertaking¹⁰, accept the undertaking if it appears to him that it is expedient in the public interest that he should do so¹¹.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 The question of expediency in the public interest is a matter for the Secretary of State rather than for the court: Re Blackspur Group plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Davies [1998] 1 WLR 422 at 426, [1998] 1 BCLC 676 at 680, CA, per Lord Woolf MR; Re Barings plc (No 2), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker [1999] 1 All ER 311 at 324 per Jonathan Parker J (affd [1999] 1 All ER 311 at 342, [1999] 1 WLR 1985 at 1989, CA, per Swinton Thomas LJ); Re Blackspur Group plc (No 3), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Davies (No 2) [2001] EWCA Civ 1595 at [10], [2002] 2 BCLC 263 at [10] per Chadwick LJ (the legislation must be taken to reflect Parliament's view that the Secretary of State is in a much better position than the court to gauge what the public interest requires in relation to the regulation of directors' conduct). However, the court may stay disqualification proceedings for abuse of process where to allow the proceedings to continue will bring the administration of justice into disrepute among right-thinking people: Re Barings plc (No 2), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Baker (no stay merely because a director had successfully resisted disciplinary proceedings from the regulatory authority, as the question to be answered in the different proceedings is materially different); Re Launchexcept Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Tillman [2000] 1 BCLC 36, CA (the fact that defendant's conduct as a director of one company and its named subsidiaries had been held not to be blameworthy did not prevent subsequent proceedings in respect of other companies where the issues before the court differed in the respective proceedings).

Where a director is subject to both criminal and civil proceedings, a balance must be struck between allowing a fair criminal trial and protecting the public against unfit directors: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Crane [2001] 2 BCLC 222 (refusal to stay proceedings pending outcome of possible criminal proceedings not breach of right to fair trial); and see Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Carr [2006] EWHC 2110 (Ch), [2007] 2 BCLC 495 (notwithstanding the respondent's acquittal on criminal charges, the Secretary of State was entitled to bring disqualification proceedings against him under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, because there were significant differences between the two sets of proceedings and their underlying purpose). See also Re Cedarwood Productions Ltd, Re Inter City Print and Finishing Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Rayna [2001] 2 BCLC 48 (application to restore proceedings following defendant's conviction not an abuse of process if founded on different basis to criminal proceedings); Re Denis Hilton Ltd [2002] 1 BCLC 302 (civil proceedings following criminal proceedings in which disqualification was not dealt with is not an abuse of process). The court has the power to intervene to prevent injustice where the continuation of one set of proceedings might prejudice the fairness of the trial of other proceedings: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Crane. See also PARA 1607. As to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6 (right to a fair trial) see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 134.

3 lie under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6 (see PARA 1592).

4 As to the meaning of 'director' for these purposes see the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6(3); and PARA 1592 note 5.

5 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7(1) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 8, Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 6(a)). As to the meaning of 'official receiver' see PARA 1590 note 13. Where the company is not yet being wound up by the court, the Secretary of State may still direct the official receiver to bring proceedings pursuant to the powers in the Insolvency Act 1986 s 400 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 504); but in such circumstances the proceedings must still be brought in the name of the Secretary of State, not the official receiver: Re Probe Data Systems Ltd (1989) 5 BCC 384; Re NP Engineering and Security Products Ltd [1995] 2 BCLC 585 (revsd on another point [1998] 1 BCLC 208, CA). Where the applicant relies on the appointment of a receiver, the disqualification proceedings may be stayed to allow the company to challenge the validity of the appointment; but, unless the appointment is set aside in validly constituted proceedings, the applicant may rely on it: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Jabble [1998] 1 BCLC 598, CA.

6 For these purposes, 'court' has the same meaning as in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 6: see s 6(3); and PARA 1592 note 1.

7 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7(2). As to the meaning of a company 'becoming insolvent' for these purposes see s 6(2); and PARA 1592 note 7. Where an application is made under s 7(2) to bring proceedings out of time, the test is whether the Secretary of State or the official receiver has shown a good reason for the extension of time: Re Crestjoy Products Ltd [1990] BCLC 677, [1990] BCC 23; Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v McTighe, Re Copecrest Ltd [1994] 2 BCLC 284, [1997] 2 BCLC 317, CA. The length of the delay, the reasons for the delay, the strength of the case against the director and the degree of prejudice caused by the delay are relevant factors to be taken into account by the court in determining whether to grant leave: Re Probe Data Systems Ltd (No 3), Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Desai [1992] BCLC 405 at 416, [1992] BCC 110 at 118 per Scott LJ; Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v McTighe, Re Copecrest Ltd; Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Davies [1996] 4 All ER 289, CA (the inadequacy of the reasons for the delay by the Secretary of State is merely one of the considerations that has to be taken into account); Re Stormont Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Cleland [1997] 1 BCLC 437 (for leave to be granted, the Secretary of State must show as a minimum that there is a fairly arguable case for saying that the respondent's conduct was such as to justify disqualification, and it is legitimate to examine the conduct of the relevant government department prior to the hearing of the application to see whether the department had acted with diligence). The list of factors is not exclusive of all other matters but in most cases it is likely to be so: Re Polly Peck International plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Ellis (No 2) [1994] 1 BCLC 574 at 578, [1993] BCC 890 at 894 per Lindsay J. Where it is sought to bring proceedings against a director of a company not originally joined as respondent, the correct procedure is to issue proceedings separate from the existing proceedings seeking leave to issue proceedings out of time: Re Westmid Packaging Services Ltd [1995] BCC 203. See also Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Vohora [2007] EWHC 2656 (Ch), (2007) Times, 10 December (the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7(2), being a limitation provision, came within the words 'any other relevant statute' in Practice Direction--How to Start Proceedings--The Claim Form PD 7 para 5.1 (see LIMITATION PERIODS vol 68 (2008) PARA 920)).

Where there has been a lengthy delay between the start of disqualification proceedings and their conclusion, the court must assess the events to make sure that there had been no contravention of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6 (right to a fair trial: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 134): Re Blackspur Group plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Eastaway [2001] 1 BCLC 653 (delay attributable to respondent's attempt to avoid hearing). See also EDC v United Kingdom [1998] BCC 370, ECtHR (failure to proceed within reasonable time). Before a claim is struck out on the grounds of delay, some prejudice arising from the delay must be shown: R v Abermeadow Ltd [2000] 2 BCLC 824 (delay had no effect on ability of witnesses to give evidence).

1600. Application on grounds of unfitness or following investigation into company's affairs.

The rules governing proceedings¹ apply to an application made under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986²:

- 1035 (1) for leave to commence proceedings for a disqualification order after the end of the two-year period³;
- 1036 (2) to enforce any duty⁴ to furnish the current or former liquidator⁵, administrator⁶ or administrative receiver⁷ of a company with information with respect to any person's conduct as a director of the company or to produce and permit inspection of books, papers and other records relevant to that person's conduct as a director;
- 1037 (3) for a disqualification order where made: (a) by the Secretary of State⁸ or the official receiver⁹ in relation to the disqualification of unfit directors of insolvent companies¹⁰; (b) by the Secretary of State in relation to disqualification after investigation of a company¹¹; or (c) a competition disqualification order¹² made by the Office of Fair Trading¹³ or a specified regulator¹⁴;
- 1038 (4) for the variation of a disqualification undertaking¹⁵; or
- 1039 (5) for leave to act under certain specified provisions of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986¹⁶.

Any such application must be made by claim form or application notice¹⁷.

2 See PARA 1578. The provisions of the Insolvent Companies (Disqualification of Unfit Directors) Proceedings Rules 1987, SI 1987/2023, r 1(3) extend to applications by disqualified directors for leave to continue to act as a director (see PARA 1611) since leave is part and parcel of the disqualification process: Re Britannia Homes Centres Ltd, Official Receiver v McCahill [2001] 2 BCLC 63.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS/(iii) Application for Disqualification/1601. Notice of intention to apply for disqualification order.

1601. Notice of intention to apply for disqualification order.

A person intending to apply for the making of a disqualification order¹ by the court having jurisdiction to wind up a company² must give not less than ten days' notice of his intention to the person against whom the order is sought³; and on the hearing of the application the last-mentioned person may appear and himself give evidence or call witnesses⁴. On the hearing of any application⁵ made by the Secretary of State⁶ or the official receiver⁷ or the Office of Fair Trading⁸ or the liquidator⁹ or a specified regulator¹⁰, the applicant must appear and call the attention of the court to any matters which seem to him to be relevant, and may himself give evidence or call witnesses¹¹.

2 See PARA 1578 note 1.

3 Failure to give proper notice is a procedural irregularity only which does not on its own invalidate the application: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Langridge [1991] Ch 402, [1991] 3 All ER 591, CA. However, taken with other factors, shortness of notice may be borne in mind by the court in determining whether the procedure adopted by the Secretary of State as a whole has been unfair to the director and an abuse of process: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Swan [2003] EWHC 1780 (Ch), (2003) Times, 18 August, [2003] All ER (D) 372 (Jul) (director suffered harm because lack of notice prevented him from responding to irrelevant evidence relied upon by the Secretary of State but an appropriate remedy would focus on the evidence rather than on the proceedings themselves). See also Re Uno plc and World of Leather plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Gill [2004] EWHC 933 (Ch) at [166]-[171], [2006] BCC 725 at [166]-[171], obiter, per Blackburne J (in a matter as grave to the professional reputation of a person as the prospect of a disqualification order, the courtesy of an interview or, at the very least, some kind of early warning of what is afoot should be afforded to the director in question if only to enable the director to take steps to preserve any relevant material and keep alive in his memory his recollection of relevant events); and Re Finelist Group Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Swan (No 2) [2005] EWHC 603 (Ch), [2005] BCC 596, [2005] All ER (D) 105 (Apr) (it was unacceptable for serious allegations, involving the finance director of a listed company, to be disposed of in a meeting lasting only 30 to 40 minutes, without any of steps having been taken beforehand in relation to information received).

Where the court can of its own motion make a disqualification order, there is no statutory requirement of notice, though the rules of natural justice require that a person should be given some notice that the court is contemplating making a disqualification order: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Langridge at 414 and 598 per Balcombe LJ.

An application to a court with jurisdiction to wind up companies for the making of a disqualification order¹ against any person on the grounds that that person has been convicted of an indictable offence², has been in persistent breach of companies legislation³, or has been guilty of fraud in the winding up⁴, may be made by the Secretary of State⁵ or the official receiver⁶ or the liquidator⁷ or any past or present member⁸ or creditor⁹ of any company in 1603. The case against the defendant.

There must, at the time when the claim form¹ is issued, be filed in court² evidence in support of the application for a disqualification order³; and copies of the evidence must be served with the claim form on the defendant⁴.

The evidence must be by one or more affidavits, except where the claimant is the official receiver⁵, in which case it may be in the form of a written report, with or without affidavits by other persons, which is treated as if it had been verified by affidavit by him and is prima facie evidence of any matter contained in it⁶.

There must in the affidavit or affidavits or, as the case may be, the official receiver's report, be included a statement of the matters by reference to which the defendant is alleged to be unfit⁷ to be concerned in the management of a company⁸.

Non-compliance with the Insolvent Companies (Disqualification of Unfit Directors) Proceedings Rules 1987, SI 1987/2023, r 3(1) is a mere irregularity; non-compliance does not nullify the proceedings and the court has power to waive any irregularity: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v

On the issue of the claim form¹, the following information to the defendant must be indorsed on it²:

- 1040 (1) that the application is made in accordance with the Insolvent Companies (Disqualification of Unfit Directors) Proceedings Rules 1987³;
- 1041 (2) the periods of disqualification which, in accordance with the relevant enactments, the court has power to impose⁴;
- 1042 (3) that the application for a disqualification order may⁵ be heard and determined summarily, without further or other notice to the defendant, and that, if it is so heard and determined, the court may impose disqualification for a period of up to five years⁶;
- 1043 (4) that if at the hearing of the application the court, on the evidence then before it, is minded to impose, in the defendant's case, disqualification for any period longer than five years, it will not make a disqualification order on that occasion but will adjourn the application to be heard, with further evidence, if any, at a later date to be notified⁷; and
- 1044 (5) that any evidence which the defendant wishes to be taken into consideration by the court must be filed in court⁸ in accordance with the time limits⁹ for the filing in court of evidence¹⁰.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS/(iii) Application for Disqualification/1605. Service and acknowledgment of claim form.

1605. Service and acknowledgment of claim form.

The claim form¹ must be served on the defendant by sending it by first class post to his last-known address; and the date of service is, unless the contrary is shown, deemed to be the seventh day next following that on which the claim form was posted².

Where any process or order of the court or other document is required³ to be served on any person who is not in England and Wales⁴, the court may order service on him of that process or order or other document to be effected within such time and in such manner as it thinks fit, and may also require such proof of service as it thinks fit⁵.

The claim form served on the defendant must be accompanied by a form⁶ of acknowledgment of service⁷.

The acknowledgment of service must state that the defendant should indicate⁸:

1045 (1) whether he contests the application on the grounds that, in the case of any particular company⁹:

169

419. (a) he was not a director¹⁰ or shadow director¹¹ of the company at a time when conduct of his, or of other persons, in relation to that company is in question¹²; or

420. (b) his conduct as a director or shadow director of that company was not as alleged in support of the application for a disqualification order¹³;

- 1046 (2) whether, in the case of any conduct of his, he disputes the allegation that it makes him unfit to be concerned in the management of a company¹⁴; and
- 1047 (3) whether he, while not resisting the application for a disqualification order, intends to adduce mitigating factors with a view to justifying only a short period of disqualification¹⁵.

1606. Evidence.

The defendant must, within 28 days from the date of service of the claim form¹, file in court² any affidavit evidence in opposition to the application he wishes the court to take into consideration, and must forthwith serve upon the claimant a copy of such evidence³. The claimant must, within 14 days from receiving the copy of the defendant's evidence, file in court

A defendant has no right to disclosure from the claimant where the claimant is the Secretary of State⁵ or the official receiver⁶ where he is not also the liquidator⁷, but he does have such a right where the claimant is the official receiver who is also the liquidator⁸.

A defendant does not have the option of omitting to file affidavit evidence and giving evidence orally at the trial: Re Rex Williams Leisure plc (in administration) [1994] Ch 350, [1994] 4 All ER 27, CA. If an applicant were able to satisfy the court that a requirement to file his evidence in disqualification proceedings before the start of a criminal trial would materially prejudice the preparation of his defence or carry a real risk of doing so, it would be oppressive and unfair to require him to file his evidence at that stage, as there was an overriding interest in the fair trial of criminal charges: see Re TransTec plc, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Carr [2005] EWHC 1723 (Ch), [2007] 1 BCLC 93.

1607. Admissibility in evidence of statements.

In any proceedings, whether or not under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, any statement made in pursuance of a requirement imposed by or under the provisions of that Act¹, or by or under rules made for the purposes of that Act under the Insolvency Act 1986², may be used in evidence against any person making or concurring in making that statement³.

However, in criminal proceedings in which any such person is charged with an offence⁴, no evidence relating to the statement may be adduced and no question relating to it may be asked, by or on behalf of the prosecution⁵, unless evidence relating to it is adduced, or a question relating to it is asked, in the proceedings by or on behalf of that person⁶.

2 See the Insolvency Act 1986 s 411; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1041 et seq. Evidence obtained by the official receiver by legal compulsion under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 235 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 678) is admissible in disqualification proceedings: Official Receiver v Stern [2001] 1 All ER 633, [2000] 1 WLR 2230, CA. See also PARAS 1594, 1598.

But see Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Bairstow [2003] EWCA Civ 321, [2004] Ch 1, [2003] 1 BCLC 696 (factual findings and conclusions of the judge in wrongful dismissal proceedings were not admissible in disqualification proceedings as evidence of the facts so found).

4 le an offence to which the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 20 applies, being any offence other than: (1) an offence which is created by rules made under the Insolvency Act 1986 for the purposes of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, and designated for the purposes of s 20(3) by such rules or by regulations made by the Secretary of State; (2) an offence which is created by regulations made under any such rules, and designated for the purposes of s 20(3) by such regulations; or (3) an offence under the Perjury Act 1911 s 5 (false statements made on oath otherwise than in judicial proceedings or made otherwise than on oath: see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(2) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 716-717); Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 20(3) (added by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 Sch 3 para 8(1), (3); amended by SI 2009/1941). Regulations under head (1) must be made by statutory instrument and, after being made, must be laid before each House of Parliament: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 20(4) (added by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 Sch 3 para 8(1), (3)).

5 Although the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 20(2) precludes only the use of statements made in disqualification proceedings 'by or on behalf of the prosecution', the responsibility for doing justice in criminal proceedings lies primarily with the criminal court: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Crane [2001] 2 BCLC 222.

6 Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 20(2) (added by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 Sch 3 para 8(1), (3)). The amendment was made to this provision as a consequence of the decision in Saunders v United Kingdom (Application 19187/91) (1996) 23 EHRR 313, ECtHR (evidence disclosed by applicant when questioned under compulsory powers not admissible in criminal proceedings). However, the prohibition on the use of such evidence does not extend to disqualification proceedings: EDC v United Kingdom (Application 24433/94) [1998] BCC 370, EComHR; R v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, ex p McCormick [1998] BCC 379; DC, HS and AD v United Kingdom (Application 39031/97) [2000] BCC 710, ECtHR. The issue of whether the conduct of disqualification proceedings has infringed a director's right to a fair trial as it is guaranteed under the Human Rights Act 1998 must be considered by the trial judge on the basis of all relevant factors including the degrees of coercion involved: R v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, ex p McCormick; WGS and MSLs v United Kingdom (Application 38172/97) [2000] BCC 719, ECtHR; Official Receiver v Stern [2001] 1 All ER 633, [2000] 1 WLR 2230, CA. There is nothing in the general law or in the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950) art 6 which makes it objectionable for a prosecuting authority to obtain helpful ideas from what was said in other proceedings concerning the same subject matter: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Crane [2001] 2 BCLC 222. As to the admissibility of evidence in other proceedings see PARAS 1544, 1558, 1569.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS/(iii) Application for Disqualification/1608. Hearing of application; making and setting aside of disqualification orders.

1608. Hearing of application; making and setting aside of disqualification orders.

Where a claim form is issued¹, the date fixed by the court for the first hearing of the claim must be not less than eight weeks from the date of issue of the claim form². The hearing must in the first instance be before the registrar³ in open court⁴; and the registrar must either determine the case on the date fixed or adjourn it⁵. The registrar must adjourn the case for further consideration⁶ if:

- 1048 (1) he forms the provisional opinion that a disqualification order ought to be made, and that a period of disqualification longer than five years is appropriate⁷; or
- 1049 (2) he is of the opinion that questions of law or fact arise which are not suitable for summary determination⁸.

If the registrar adjourns the case for further consideration, he must⁹:

- 1050 (a) direct whether the case is to be heard by a registrar, or, if he thinks it appropriate, by a judge, for determination by him¹⁰;
 - 1051 (b) state the reasons for the adjournment¹¹; and
 - 1052 (c) give directions as to the following matters¹²:
- 171
- 421. (i) the manner in which and the time within which notice of the adjournment and the reasons for it are to be given to the defendant¹³;
 - 422. (ii) the filing in court and the service of further evidence, if any, by the parties¹⁴;
 - 423. (iii) such other matters as the registrar thinks necessary or expedient with a view to an expeditious disposal of the application¹⁵; and
 - 424. (iv) the time and place of the adjourned hearing¹⁶.
- 172

Where a case is adjourned other than to a judge, it may be heard by the registrar who originally dealt with the case or by another registrar¹⁷.

In all disqualification applications, the court may direct a pre-trial review, a case management conference or pre-trial checklists¹⁸ and will fix a trial date or trial period¹⁹.

The court may make a disqualification order against the defendant, whether or not the latter appears, and whether or not he has completed and returned the acknowledgment of service of the claim form²⁰, or filed²¹ evidence²²; any disqualification order made in the absence of the defendant may be set aside or varied by the court on such terms as it thinks just²³.

Official receivers and deputy official receivers have right of audience in any proceedings to which the Insolvent Companies (Disqualification of Unfit Directors) Proceedings Rules 1987 apply, whether the application is made by the Secretary of State²⁴ or by the official receiver²⁵ at his direction, and whether made in the High Court or a county court²⁶.

No specific provision is made for appeals from disqualification orders, but it has been held that the provisions relating to appeals in winding-up proceedings apply to proceedings under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986²⁷.

The costs of disqualification proceedings are in the discretion of the court, but the usual rules on costs will apply, so that the claimant will normally be liable to pay the costs of an unsuccessful application or if proceedings are discontinued, and the defendant will pay the costs on the standard basis if the application is successful²⁸.

Although on an application for a disqualification order it is not permissible for the parties merely to seek a consent order, the court has jurisdiction to deal with an application for a disqualification order by a summary procedure where the court is satisfied that the undisputed evidence is sufficient to establish unfitness, and that the potential impact of disputed evidence would not substantially affect the seriousness of that unfitness²⁹.

1609. Proceedings are civil not criminal.

Director disqualification proceedings are civil regulatory proceedings and not criminal proceedings¹. The burden of proof is upon the Secretary of State to establish that the requirements of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 are satisfied; and the appropriate standard of proof upon the Secretary of State to establish those requirements is the balance of probabilities, notwithstanding the serious consequences of a disqualification order². However, the cogency of the evidence required to discharge the burden of proof to the requisite standard must be such as reflects the seriousness of the allegations and of the consequence³.

Period of disqualification.

(iv) Effect of Disqualification Order or Disqualification Undertaking; Consequences of Contravention

1610. Period of disqualification.

The fixing of the period of disqualification¹ is little different from any other sentencing exercise². The period of disqualification has been categorised in the follow manner:

- 1053 (1) the top bracket of disqualification for periods of ten to 15 years, is reserved for particularly serious cases, such as where a director had previously been disqualified³;
- 1054 (2) the middle bracket of six to ten years, is reserved for serious cases which do not merit the top bracket⁴; and
- 1055 (3) the bottom bracket of two to five years is applied where, although disqualification is mandatory, the conduct complained of is relatively not very serious⁵.

In determining the appropriate period of disqualification, the court should start with an assessment of the correct period to fit the gravity of the offence, bearing in mind that the period of disqualification has to contain deterrent elements, and then allow for mitigating factors, such factors not being restricted to the facts of the offence⁶.

6 Re Westmid Packing Services Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Griffiths [1998] 2 All ER 124, [1998] 2 BCLC 646, CA (relevant matters included the director's general reputation and conduct in discharge of the office of director, his age and state of health, the length of time he had been in jeopardy, whether he had admitted the offence, his general conduct before and after the offence and periods of disqualification of any co-directors that might have been ordered by other courts). The likelihood of granting an application under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 17 (see PARA 1611) is irrelevant to the determination of the period of disqualification and the fact that the court is minded to grant such leave is no reason for deciding to impose the minimum period of disqualification: Re Westmid Packing Services Ltd, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Griffiths. An appellate court may adjust a period of disqualification which has been imposed where it is satisfied that the period is too great to a significant extent or where appropriate factors were not or could not have been taken into account: Re Deaduck Ltd (in liquidation), Baker v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry [2000] 1 BCLC 148, [1999] All ER (D) 562. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(31) DISQUALIFICATION ORDERS AND UNDERTAKINGS/(iv) Effect of Disqualification Order or Disqualification Undertaking; Consequences of Contravention/1611. Application for leave under a disqualification order or disqualification undertaking.

1611. Application for leave under a disqualification order or disqualification undertaking.

As regards the court to which application must be made for leave under a disqualification order¹:

- 1056 (1) where a person is subject to a disqualification order made by a court having jurisdiction to wind up companies, any application for leave under that order² must be made to that court³; and
- 1057 (2) where a person is subject to a disqualification order made on conviction of an indictable offence⁴ by a court other than a court having jurisdiction to wind up companies, or a person is subject to a disqualification order made on summary conviction⁵, any application for leave⁶ must be made to any court which, when the order was made, had jurisdiction to wind up the company (or, if there is more than one such company, any of the companies) to which the offence (or any of the offences) in question related⁷.

As regards the court to which application must be made for leave under a disqualification undertaking⁸:

- 1058 (a) where a person is subject to a disqualification undertaking accepted at any time⁹, any application for leave¹⁰ must be made to any court to which, if the Secretary of State¹¹ had applied for a disqualification order at that time, his application could have been made¹²; and

- 1059 (b) where a person is subject to a disqualification undertaking accepted at any time under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 in relation to breaches of competition law¹³, any application for leave allowed under those provisions¹⁴ must be made to the High Court¹⁵; but
- 1060 (c) where a person is subject to two or more disqualification orders or undertakings (or to one or more disqualification orders and to one or more disqualification undertakings) any application for leave¹⁶ must be made to any court to which any such application relating to the latest order to be made, or undertaking to be accepted, could be made¹⁷.

On the hearing of an application for leave¹⁸, the Secretary of State must appear and call the attention of the court to any matters which seem to him to be relevant, and may himself give evidence or call witnesses¹⁹. However, where the application for leave pertains to a disqualification order made in relation to breaches of competition law²⁰, and also where an application for leave is made by a person seeking to disapply one of the statutory prohibitions²¹, on the hearing of the application whichever of the Office of Fair Trading²² or a specified regulator²³ applied for the order or accepted the undertaking (as the case may be) must appear and draw the attention of the court to any matters which appear to it or him (as the case may be) to be relevant and may give evidence or call witnesses²⁴.

It is desirable that, if proceedings to disqualify a director are outstanding, and the director wishes to apply for leave to continue as a director notwithstanding any disqualification order, that application should be heard at the same time as the disqualification proceedings²⁵. Leave will be granted under a disqualification order only where the director shows that there is a need for such an order to be granted, and where the court can be satisfied that there is adequate protection for the public²⁶. When considering whether to grant leave the court's discretion is unfettered by any consideration of the needs and interests of the applicant, either personal or business related²⁷, or by any statutory condition or criterion²⁸.

Where leave is granted, it may be subject to conditions or to suitable safeguards designed to protect the public²⁹.

It is open to the Secretary of State to appeal against any decision to grant leave where he considers that the court erred by so doing³⁰.

1612. Information to be provided to the Secretary of State in relation to disqualification orders and disqualification undertakings.

Where a disqualification order¹ or grant of leave² (as the case may be) is made by a specified court³, the specified officer of that court⁴ must furnish to the Secretary of State certain specified particulars in the specified form and manner⁵.

1 For these purposes, 'disqualification order' means an order of the court under any of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 ss 2-6, 8, 9A, 10 (see PARA 1578 et seq): Companies (Disqualification Orders) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2471, reg 2(1).

2 For these purposes, 'grant of leave' means a grant by the court of leave under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 17 (see PARA 1611) to any person in relation to a disqualification order or a disqualification undertaking: Companies (Disqualification Orders) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2471, reg 2(1). For these purposes, 'disqualification undertaking' means an undertaking accepted by the Secretary of State under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 7 (see PARAS 1598-1599) or s 8 (see PARA 1584) or s 9B (see PARA 1586): Companies (Disqualification Orders) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2471, reg 2(1). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

3 As to the specified courts see note 4. The Companies (Disqualification Orders) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2471, apply in relation to a disqualification order made after 1 October 2009, and they apply in relation to a grant of leave made after that date, or in relation to any action taken by a court after that date in consequence of which a disqualification order or a disqualification undertaking is varied or ceases to be in force, whether the disqualification order or disqualification undertaking to which the grant of leave or the action relates was made by the court or accepted by the Secretary of State before or after 1 October 2009: reg 4.

The Companies (Disqualification Orders) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2471, have been made in pursuance of powers which provide that the Secretary of State may make regulations requiring officers of courts to furnish him with such particulars as the regulations may specify of cases in which:

2295 (1) a disqualification order is made;

2296 (2) any action is taken by a court in consequence of which such an order or a disqualification undertaking is varied or ceases to be in force;

2297 (3) leave is granted by a court for a person subject to such an order to do anything which otherwise the order prohibits him from doing; or

and the regulations may specify the time within which, and the form and manner in which, such particulars are to be furnished: Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 18(1) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 8, Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 13(1), (2)(a), (b)). Regulations under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 18 must be made by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 18(5). Regulations under s 18 may extend s 18(1)-(4) (see further PARA 1613), to such extent and with such modifications as may be specified in the regulations, to disqualification orders or disqualification undertakings made under the Company Directors Disqualification (Northern Ireland) Order 2002, SI 2002/3150 (NI 4); Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 18(4A) (added by the Insolvency Act 2000 Sch 4 Pt I paras 1, 13(1), (5); and amended by SI 2004/1941; SI 2009/1941). See also the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 12A (added by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 7(1)); the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 12B (added by SI 2004/1941); and the Companies (Disqualification Orders) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2471, regs 2(2), 5, 9. As to the geographical extent of the Companies Acts, and issues arising, see PARA 29 et seq.

4 The specified officers of the specified courts are: (1) where a disqualification order is made by the Crown Court, the court manager (Companies (Disqualification Orders) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2471, reg 6(1)(a)); (2) where a disqualification order or grant of leave is made by the High Court, the court manager (reg 6(1)(b)); (3) where a disqualification order or grant of leave is made by a county court, the court manager (reg 6(1)(c)); (4) where a disqualification order is made by a magistrates' court, the designated officer for a magistrates' court (reg 6(1)(d)); (5) where a disqualification order is made by the High Court of Justiciary, the deputy principal clerk of justiciary (reg 6(1)(e)); (6) where a disqualification order or grant of leave is made by a sheriff court, the sheriff clerk (reg 6(1)(f)); (7) where a disqualification order or grant of leave is made by the Court of Session, the deputy principal clerk of session (reg 6(1)(g)); (8) where a disqualification order or grant of leave is made by the Court of Appeal, the court manager (reg 6(1)(h)); and (9) where a disqualification order or grant of leave is made by the Supreme Court, the registrar of the Supreme Court (reg 6(1)(i)).

Where a disqualification order is made by any of the courts mentioned in heads (1)-(9), or where a disqualification undertaking has been accepted by the Secretary of State, and subsequently any action is taken by a court in consequence of which that order or that undertaking is varied or ceases to be in force, the officer specified in heads (1)-(9) of the court which takes such action must furnish to the Secretary of State the particulars specified in reg 7(d) (see note 5 head (4)), in the form and manner there specified: reg 6(2).

5 Companies (Disqualification Orders) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2471, reg 6(1). The form in which the particulars are to be furnished is:

2300 (2) that set out in reg 7(b), Sch 2 with such variations as circumstances require when the person against whom the disqualification order is made is a body corporate, and the particulars contained therein are the particulars specified for that purpose (reg 7(b));

2301 (3) that set out in reg 7(c), Sch 3 with such variations as circumstances require when a grant of leave is made by the court in relation to a disqualification order or a disqualification undertaking, and the particulars contained therein are the particulars specified for that purpose (reg 7(c));

2302 (4) that set out in reg 7(d), Sch 4 with such variations as circumstances require when any action is taken by a court in consequence of which a disqualification order or a disqualification undertaking is varied or ceases to be in force, and the particulars contained therein are the particulars specified for that purpose (reg 7(d)).

The time within which the officer specified in reg 6(1) (see note 4) is to furnish the Secretary of State with such particulars is a period of 14 days beginning with the day on which the disqualification order or grant of leave is made, or any action is taken by a court in consequence of which the disqualification order or disqualification undertaking is varied or ceases to be in force: reg 8.

1613. Register of disqualification orders and disqualification undertakings.

The Secretary of State¹ must, from the particulars furnished² in accordance with the statutory provisions³, continue to maintain the register of orders⁴ and of cases in which leave has been granted⁵. When an order or undertaking of which entry is made in the register ceases to be in force, the Secretary of State must delete the entry from the register and all particulars relating to it which have been furnished to him under these provisions or any previous corresponding provision and, in the case of a disqualification undertaking, any other particulars he has included in the register⁶.

Where the affairs of a body corporate are managed by its members, these provisions apply in relation to the acts and defaults of a member in connection with his functions of management as if he were a director of the body corporate⁴.

A person is personally responsible for all the relevant debts¹ of a company² if at any time:

- 1061 (1) in contravention of a disqualification order³ or disqualification undertaking⁴, or of the provisions relating to undischarged bankrupts⁵, he is involved in the management of a company⁶; or
- 1062 (2) as a person who is involved in the management of the company, he acts or is willing to act on instructions given without the leave of the court by a person whom he knows at that time either to be the subject of a disqualification order made or disqualification undertaking accepted under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, or to be an undischarged bankrupt⁷.

Where a person is personally responsible under these provisions for the relevant debts of a company, he is jointly and severally liable in respect of those debts with the company and any other person who, whether under these provisions or otherwise, is so liable⁸.

1 For these purposes, the relevant debts of a company are: (1) in relation to a person who is personally responsible under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 15(1)(a) (see head (1) in the text), such debts and other liabilities of the company as are incurred at a time when that person was involved in the management of the company; and (2) in relation to a person who is personally responsible under s 15(1)(b) (see head (2) in the text), such debts and other liabilities of the company as are incurred at a time when that person was acting or was willing to act on instructions given as mentioned in s 15(1)(b): s 15(3).

- 1065 (3) he has, by reason of misconduct or unfitness, given undertakings to a court or other authority of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom not to act in connection with the affairs of a company, or restricting the extent to which, or the way in which, he may do so⁵.

1 Companies Act 2006 s 1182(1), (2). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5.

1618. Power to disqualify persons subject to foreign restrictions.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations disqualifying a person subject to foreign restrictions² from being a director of a UK company³, acting as receiver of a UK company's property⁴, or in any way, whether directly or indirectly, being concerned or taking part in the promotion, formation or management of a UK company⁵. The regulations may provide that a person subject to foreign restrictions: (1) is disqualified automatically by virtue of the regulations; or (2) may be disqualified by order of the court⁶ on the application of the Secretary of State⁷. The regulations may provide that the Secretary of State may accept a disqualification undertaking from a person subject to foreign restrictions that he will not do anything which would be in breach of a disqualification⁸. The regulations may also provide for applications to the court by disqualified persons⁹ for permission to act in a way which would otherwise be in breach of the disqualification¹⁰. The regulations must provide that a person ceases to be disqualified¹¹ on his ceasing to be subject to foreign restrictions¹².

Regulations under s 1184(2)(b) or s 1184(5) (see the text to notes 9-10) (provision for applications to the court): (1) must specify the grounds on which an application may be made; (2) may specify factors to which the court is to have regard in determining an application: s 1185(2). The regulations may, in particular, require the court to have regard to the following factors: (a) whether the conduct on the basis of which the person became subject to foreign restrictions would, if done in relation to a UK company, have led a court to make a disqualification order on an application under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 (see PARA 1578 et seq) or the Company Directors Disqualification (Northern Ireland) Order 2002, SI 2002/3150 (NI 4); (b) in a case in which the conduct on the basis of which the person became subject to foreign restrictions would not be unlawful if done in relation to a UK company, the fact that the person acted unlawfully under foreign law; (c) whether the person's activities in relation to UK companies began after he became subject to foreign restrictions; (d) whether the person's activities (or proposed activities) in relation to UK companies are undertaken (or are proposed to be undertaken) outside the United Kingdom: Companies Act 2006 s 1185(3).

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1184(3). Regulations under s 1184(3) may include provision allowing the Secretary of State, in determining whether to accept an undertaking, to take into account matters other than criminal convictions notwithstanding that the person may be criminally liable in respect of those matters: s 1185(4).

9 Ie a person disqualified under Pt 40 (see note 7).

(32) CRIMINAL OFFENCES UNDER THE COMPANIES LEGISLATION

1622. Meaning of 'daily default fine', and other definitions.

Where it is provided in the Companies Acts¹ that a person² guilty of an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding a specified amount 'and, for continued contravention, a daily default fine' not exceeding a specified amount³, this means that the person is liable on a second or subsequent summary conviction of the offence to a fine not exceeding the latter amount for each day on which the contravention is continued (instead of being liable to a fine not exceeding the former amount)⁴.

'Standard scale' means the standard scale of maximum fines for summary offences as set out in the Criminal Justice Act 1982⁵. The 'statutory maximum', with reference to a fine or penalty on summary conviction for an offence, is the prescribed sum⁶; and the 'prescribed sum' means £5,000 or such sum as is for the time being substituted in this definition by order under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980⁷.

1 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the meaning of 'person' see PARA 311 note 2.

3 See the Companies Act 2006 s 1125(1). The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 36 (ss 1121-1133) do not apply to offences committed before the commencement of the relevant provision: see s 1133. Section 1125 was brought into force for certain purposes on 20 January 2007 (see Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 1, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2006, SI 2006/3428, art 3) 6 April 2007 (see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 2, Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007, SI 2007/1093, art 2), 1 October 2007 (see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 3, Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007, SI 2007/2194, art 2), 6 April 2008 and 1 October 2008 (see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 5, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007, SI 2007/3495, art s 3, 5); and for the remaining purposes on 1 October 2009 (see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3).

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1125(2). See also note 3.

5 'Standard scale' means the standard scale of maximum fines for summary offences as set out in the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 37: see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (definition added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(1), Sch 15 para 58); and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142. At the date at which this volume states the law, the standard scale is as follows: level 1, £200; level 2, £500; level 3, £1,000; level 4, £2,500; level 5, £5,000: Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 37(2) (substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 17(1)). As to the determination of the amount of the fine actually imposed, as distinct from the level on the standard scale which it may not exceed, see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 164; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 144.

1623. Savings and transitional provisions relating to offences.

The repeal of any provision of the Companies Act 1985 Act¹ creating an offence does not affect the continued operation of that provision in relation to an offence committed before 1 October 2009².

Where a provision creating an offence is repealed and re-enacted without modification by or under the Companies Act 2006³:

- 1066 (1) an offence committed before the commencement of the new law is to be charged under the old law⁴;
- 1067 (2) an offence committed after the commencement of the new law is to be charged under the new law⁵, and
- 1068 (3) an offence committed partly before and partly after the commencement of the new law is to be charged under the new law and not under the old⁶.

Any saving in Schedule 2 for the effect of a provision of the Companies Act 1985 or the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6), that creates an offence extends to the entry relating to that provision in the Companies Act 1985 Sch 24 (repealed) or the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6), Sch 23 (revoked): Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 116(2).

A 'relevant event' means an act, omission or other event (including any result of one or more acts or omissions) proof of which is required for conviction of the offence: art 7(3).

1625. Summary proceedings.

Without prejudice to any jurisdiction otherwise¹ exercisable², summary proceedings for any offence under the Companies Acts³ may be taken:

- 1069 (1) against a body corporate⁴, at any place at which the body has a place of business⁵; and
- 1070 (2) against any other person⁶, at any place at which he is for the time being⁷.

An information relating to an offence under the Companies Acts that is triable by a magistrates' court in England and Wales⁸ may be so tried if it is laid (a) at any time within three years after the commission of the offence⁹; and (b) within 12 months¹⁰ after the date on which evidence sufficient in the opinion of the Director of Public Prosecutions¹¹ or the Secretary of State¹² (as the case may be) to justify the proceedings comes to his knowledge¹³. For these purposes a certificate of the Director of Public Prosecutions or the Secretary of State (as the case may be) as to the date on which such evidence as is referred to above came to his notice is conclusive evidence¹⁴.

Where any provision of the Companies Acts provides that a person guilty of an offence is liable on summary conviction in England and Wales to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months¹⁵, in relation to an offence committed before the commencement of the Criminal Justice Act 2003¹⁶ for '12 months' there is substituted 'six months'¹⁷.

An application may be made, in England and Wales¹, to a judge of the High Court² by the Director of Public Prosecutions³, the Secretary of State⁴ or a chief officer of police⁵. If on such an application there is shown to be reasonable cause to believe:

- 1071 (1) that any person⁶ has, while an officer⁷ of a company⁸, committed an offence in connection with the management of the company's affairs⁹; and
- 1072 (2) that evidence of the commission of the offence is to be found in any documents¹⁰ in the possession or control of the company¹¹, an order may be made¹². The order may: (a) authorise any person named in it to inspect the documents in question, or any of them, for the purpose of investigating and obtaining evidence of the offence¹³; or (b) require the secretary¹⁴ of the company, or such other officer of it as may be named in the order, to produce the documents (or any of them) to a person named in the order at a place so named¹⁵.

(1) INTRODUCTION

1630. Treaty basis for provisions regarding European company forms.

As has been stated earlier in this title, the EC Treaty contains various provisions relating to the establishment and operation of companies in the European Community¹. The Treaty also contains provision that if action by the Community should prove necessary to attain, in the course of the operation of the common market, one of the objectives of the Community, and the Treaty has not provided the necessary powers, the Council must, acting unanimously on a proposal from the Commission and after consulting the European Parliament, take the appropriate measures². It is this provision which forms the legal basis for provisions and proposals relating to European company forms³.

2 See the Treaty Establishing the European Community (Rome, 25 March 1957; TS 1 (1973); Cmnd 5179) art 308.

(2) EUROPEAN ECONOMIC INTEREST GROUPINGS

1631. EC Council Regulation on the European Economic Interest Grouping.

The Regulation on the European Economic Interest Grouping (EEIG)¹ creates a legal framework to enable natural persons, companies, firms and other legal bodies² to form groupings so as to co-operate effectively across frontiers for the purpose of facilitating the adaptation of their activities to the economic conditions of the Community³. The purpose of a grouping is to facilitate or develop the economic activities of its members and to improve or increase the results of those activities; its purpose is not to make profits⁴ for itself and its activity must be related to the economic activities of its members and must not be more than ancillary to those activities⁵.

EEIGs must be formed upon the terms, in the manner and with the effects laid down in the Regulation⁶. Accordingly, parties intending to form a grouping must conclude a contract⁷ which must be registered⁸, and from the date of its registration the grouping has the capacity, in its own name, to have rights and obligations of all kinds, to make contracts or accomplish other legal acts, and to sue and be sued⁹. It is for member states to determine whether or not registered groupings have legal personality¹⁰. Provision is made as to the management of groupings¹¹ and as to the manner in which decisions are to be made¹². Members may assign their interest in a grouping¹³. No grouping may invite investment by the public¹⁴. Provision is also made as to members leaving¹⁵, the acceptance of new members¹⁶, and winding up¹⁷.

1 See EC Council Regulation 2137/85 (OJ L199, 31.07.1985, p 1) on the European Economic Interest Grouping (EEIG).

2 As to the persons who may be members of a grouping see EC Council Regulation 2137/85 (OJ L199, 31.07.1985, p 1) art 4.

3 See EC Council Regulation 2137/85 (OJ L199, 31.07.1985, p 1) preamble. EC Regulations are of direct effect in the law of member states. As to the principle of direct effect see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 24. However, certain provisions of EC Council Regulation 2137/85 left matters to be subject to the national law of member states. As to the implementation of such matters in the UK see PARA 1632.

4 However, provision is made as to the sharing of any profits made (see EC Council Regulation 2137/85 (OJ L199, 31.07.1985, p 1) art 21) and for the bearing of liabilities (see arts 21, 24).

5 See EC Council Regulation 2137/85 (OJ L199, 31.07.1985, p 1) art 3(1). As a result certain restrictions are placed on the activities of groupings: see art 3(2).

8 See EC Council Regulation 2137/85 (OJ L199, 31.07.1985, p 1) art 1(1), (6). The law applicable to the contract for the formation of a grouping is the internal law of the state in which the official address is situated, as laid down in the contract for the formation of the grouping: see art 2. Certain documents must be filed with the contract on registration (see art 7) and provision is made as to the publication of information regarding the contract and its registration (see art 8). Provision is made as to the official address of a grouping: see arts 12-14.

9 See EC Council Regulation 2137/85 (OJ L199, 31.07.1985, p 1) art 1(2). Letters, order forms and similar documents must contain certain information as to the grouping: see art 25.

1632. Implementation of the Regulation.

The Regulation on the European Economic Interest Grouping (EEIG)¹ is directly applicable in UK law² but certain provisions of the Regulation left matters to be subject to the national law of member states and for this, and certain other purposes, it was necessary for domestic regulations to be made³.

The European Economic Interest Grouping Regulations 1989⁴ extend to the whole of the United Kingdom⁵, and provide that from the date of registration of an EEIG⁶ in the United Kingdom the EEIG is a body corporate by the name contained in the contract⁷. The registrar for the purposes of registration of an EEIG in the United Kingdom, where its official address is in the United Kingdom, is the registrar⁸. Provision is made as to the procedure on registration⁹, and for the filing, inspection and publication of documents¹⁰. It is an offence for an EEIG, or an officer or person acting on its behalf, to fail to comply with the provisions¹¹ relating to the inclusion of certain information in letters, order forms and similar documents¹². The regulations make supplemental provision as to the transfer of official address¹³, managers¹⁴, cessation of membership¹⁵, the competent authority¹⁶, and winding up and conclusion of liquidation¹⁷. Various statutory provisions are applied to EEIGs¹⁸.

(3) EUROPEAN COMPANY (SOCIETAS EUROPAEA)

(i) In general

1633. The nature of a European Company.

The Regulation on the Statute for a European Company¹ makes provision, in the context of the completion of the internal market and for the purpose of enabling companies whose business is not limited to satisfying purely local needs to be able to plan and carry out the reorganisation of their business on a Community scale, for the creation and management of companies with a European dimension free from the obstacles arising from the disparity and the limited territorial application of national company law². The Regulation is directly applicable in the law of member states³ but leaves a number of matters to be subject to the national law of member states and for this purpose it was necessary for domestic regulations to be made⁴.

A company may be set up within the territory of the European Community in the form of a European public limited liability company (known as a Societas Europaea or SE)⁵ on the conditions and in the manner laid down in the Regulation⁶. Such a company has legal personality⁷. Its capital⁸ must be divided into shares with no shareholder being liable for more than the amount he has subscribed⁹. Employee involvement in a European Company is governed by the provisions of the Directive¹⁰ supplementing the Statute for a European Company with regard to the involvement of employees¹¹.

Certain public limited liability companies, formed under the law of a member state¹², with registered offices and head offices within the Community may form a European Company by means of a merger provided that at least two of them are governed by the law of different member states¹³.

Certain public and private limited liability companies¹⁴, formed under the law of a member state, with registered offices and head offices within the Community may promote the formation of a holding European Company¹⁵ provided that each of at least two of them:

2308 (1) is governed by the law of a different member state¹⁶; or 2309 (2) has for at least two years had a subsidiary company governed by the law of another member state or a branch situated in another member state¹⁷.

Companies and firms¹⁸ and other legal bodies governed by public or private law, formed under the law of a member state, with registered offices and head offices within the Community may form a subsidiary European Company¹⁹ by subscribing for its shares, provided that each of at least two of them²⁰:

2310 (a) is governed by the law of a different member state²¹; or 2311 (b) has for at least two years had a subsidiary company governed by the law of another member state or a branch situated in another member state²².

A public limited liability company, formed under the law of a member state, which has its registered office and head office within the Community may be transformed into a European Company²³ if for at least two years it has had a subsidiary company governed by the law of another member state²⁴.

A member state may provide that a company the head office of which is not in the Community may participate in the formation of a European Company provided that company is formed under the law of a member state, has its registered office in that member state and has a real and continuous link with a member state's economy²⁵.

A European Company may itself set up one or more subsidiaries in the form of European Companies²⁶. The provisions of the law of the member state in which a subsidiary European Company has its registered office that require a public limited liability company to have more than one shareholder do not apply in the case of the subsidiary European Company²⁷.

The capital of a European Company¹ must be expressed in euro², and the subscribed capital must not be less than 120,000 euro³. The laws of a member state requiring a greater subscribed capital for companies carrying on certain types of activity apply to European Companies with registered offices in that member state⁴.

Subject to the provisions regarding subscribed capital⁵, the capital of a European Company, its maintenance and changes to it, together with the European Company's shares, bonds and other similar securities are governed by the provisions which would apply to a public limited liability company with a registered office in the member state in which the European Company is registered⁶.

A European Company may, in any case, express its capital in euro as well and, in that event, the national currency or euro conversion rate must be that for the last day of the month preceding that of the formation of the European Company: art 67(1). 3. (c) the provisions of its statutes, in the same way as for a public limited liability company formed in accordance with the law of the member state in which the European Company has its registered office⁶.

Subject to the provisions of the Regulation on the Statute for a European Company, a European Company must be treated in every member state as if it were a public limited liability company formed in accordance with the law of the member state in which it has its registered office⁷.

1637. Name and registration; publicity.

The name of a European Company¹ must be preceded or followed by the abbreviation 'SE'²; and only European Companies may include the abbreviation 'SE' in their name³. Nevertheless, companies, firms and other legal entities registered in a member state before 8 October 2004⁴ in the names of which the abbreviation 'SE' appears are not required to alter their names⁵.

Every European Company must be registered in the member state in which it has its registered office in a register designated by the law of that member state in accordance with the First Council Directive on co-ordination of safeguards⁶ which, for the protection of the interests of members and others, are required by member states of companies with a view to making such safeguards equivalent throughout the Community⁷. A European Company must make arrangements (or must have attempted to make arrangements) for employee involvement prior to registration⁸.

Publication of the documents and particulars concerning a European Company which must be publicised under the Regulation on the Statute for a European Company must be effected in the manner laid down in the laws of the member state in which the European Company has its registered office in accordance with the First Council Directive on co-ordination of safeguards⁹. After such publication, notice of a European Company's registration and of the deletion of such a registration must be published for information purposes in the Official Journal of the European Communities¹⁰. That notice must state the name, number, date and place of registration of the European Company, the date and place of publication and the title of publication, the registered office of the European Company and its sector of activity¹¹. Where the registered office of a European Company is transferred¹², notice must be published giving the same information¹³, together with that relating to the new registration¹⁴.

1638. Employee involvement.

A European Company¹ may not be registered² unless an agreement on arrangements for employee involvement has been concluded³, or a decision has been taken⁴, or the period for negotiations⁵ has expired without an agreement having been concluded⁶.

In order for a European Company to be registered in a member state which has made use of the option referred to in the Directive supplementing the Statute for a European Company with regard to the involvement of employees⁷, it must be the case that either an agreement⁸ has been concluded on the arrangements for employee involvement, including participation, or none of the participating companies has been governed by participation rules prior to the registration of the European Company⁹.

The statutes of the European Company¹⁰ must not conflict at any time with the arrangements for employee involvement¹¹. Where new arrangements determined pursuant to the Directive conflict with the existing statutes, the statutes must to the extent necessary be amended¹²; and, in this case, a member state may provide that the management organ or the administrative organ of the European Company¹³ is entitled to proceed to amend the statutes without any further decision from the general shareholders meeting¹⁴.

A. IN GENERAL

1639. Registration.

Subject to the Regulation on the Statute for a European Company¹, the formation of a European Company² is governed by the law applicable to public limited liability companies in the member state in which the European Company establishes its registered office³. The registration must be publicised⁴.

A European Company acquires legal personality on the date on which it is registered in the register⁵. If acts have been performed in the name of a European Company before such registration⁶ and the European Company does not assume the obligations arising out of such acts after its registration, the natural persons, companies, firms or other legal entities which performed those acts are jointly and severally liable for them, without limit, in the absence of agreement to the contrary⁷.

A European Company¹ may be formed² by means of a merger³. Such a merger may be carried out in accordance with:

2316 (2) the procedure for merger by the formation of a new company laid down⁶ in that Directive⁷.

In the case of a merger by acquisition, the acquiring company must take the form of a European Company when the merger takes place⁸; and in the case of a merger by the formation of a new company, the European Company must be the newly formed company⁹.

The laws of a member state may provide that a company governed by the law of that member state may not take part in the formation of a European Company by merger if any of that member state's competent authorities¹⁰ opposes it before the issue of a certificate¹¹ conclusively attesting to the completion of the pre-merger acts and formalities¹². Such opposition may be based only on grounds of public interest and review by a judicial authority must be possible¹³.

NOTE 3--Directive 68/151 art 3 replaced: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/101 (OJ L258, 1.10.2009, p 11) art 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/3. EUROPEAN FORMS OF COMPANY, ETC/(3) EUROPEAN COMPANY (SOCIETAS EUROPAEA)/(ii) Formation/B. FORMATION BY MERGER/1643. Scrutiny of the draft terms and approval.

1643. Scrutiny of the draft terms and approval.

As an alternative to experts operating on behalf of each of the merging companies, one or more independent experts¹, appointed for those purposes at the joint request of the companies by a judicial or administrative authority in the member state of one of the merging companies or of the proposed European Company², may examine the draft terms of merger³ and draw up a single report to all the shareholders⁴. The experts have the right to request from each of the merging companies any information they consider necessary to enable them to complete their function⁵.

The general meeting of each of the merging companies must approve the draft terms of merger⁶. The general meetings of each of the merging companies may reserve the right to make registration of the European Company⁷ conditional upon its express ratification of the arrangements decided for employee involvement in the European Company⁸.

The law of the member state governing each merging company applies as in the case of a merger of public limited liability companies, taking into account the cross-border nature of the merger, with regard to the protection of the interests of: (1) creditors of the merging companies⁹; (2) holders of bonds of the merging companies¹⁰; (3) holders of securities (other than shares) which carry special rights in the merging companies¹¹. A member state may, in the case of the merging companies governed by its law, adopt provisions designed to ensure appropriate protection for minority shareholders who have opposed the merger¹².

The legality of a merger must be scrutinised, as regards the part of the procedure concerning each merging company, in accordance with the law on mergers of public limited liability companies of the member state to which the merging company is subject¹³. In each member state concerned, the court, notary or other competent authority¹⁴ must issue a certificate conclusively attesting to the completion of the pre-merger acts and formalities¹⁵. If the law of a member state to which a merging company is subject provides for a procedure to scrutinise and amend the share-exchange ratio, or a procedure to compensate minority shareholders, without preventing the registration of the merger, such procedures only apply if the other merging companies situated in member states which do not provide for such procedure explicitly accept, when approving the draft terms of the merger¹⁶, the possibility for the shareholders of that merging company to have recourse to such procedure¹⁷. In such cases, the court, notary or other competent authorities may issue the certificate¹⁸ even if such a procedure has been commenced¹⁹. The certificate must, however, indicate that the procedure is pending²⁰. The decision in the procedure is binding on the acquiring company and all its shareholders²¹.

The legality of a merger must be scrutinised, as regards the part of the procedure concerning the completion of the merger and the formation of the European Company, by the court, notary or other authority competent in the member state of the proposed registered office of the European Company to scrutinise that aspect of the legality of mergers of public limited liability companies²². To that end each merging company must submit to the competent authority the certificate²³ within six months of its issue together with a copy of the draft terms of merger approved by that company²⁴. The scrutinising authority²⁵ must in particular:

- 2331 (a) ensure that the merging companies have approved draft terms of merger in the same terms and that arrangements for employee involvement have been determined²⁶; and
- 2332 (b) satisfy itself that the European Company has been formed in accordance with the requirements of the law of the member state in which it has²⁷ its registered office²⁸.

1644 Completion of the merger

NOTE 6--Directive 68/151 art 3 replaced: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/101 (OJ L258, 1.10.2009, p 11) art 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/3. EUROPEAN FORMS OF COMPANY, ETC/(3) EUROPEAN COMPANY (SOCIETAS EUROPAEA)/(ii) Formation/B. FORMATION BY MERGER/1645. Effects of the merger.

1645. Effects of the merger.

A merger by acquisition¹ has the following consequences ipso jure and simultaneously:

- 2333 (1) all the assets and liabilities of each company being acquired are transferred to the acquiring company²;
- 2334 (2) the shareholders of the company being acquired become shareholders of the acquiring company³;
- 2335 (3) the company being acquired ceases to exist⁴;
- 2336 (4) the acquiring company adopts the form of a European Company⁵.

A merger by the formation of a new company⁶ has the following consequences ipso jure and simultaneously:

- 2337 (a) all the assets and liabilities of the merging companies are transferred to the European Company⁷;
- 2338 (b) the shareholders of the merging companies become shareholders of the European Company⁸;
- 2339 (c) the merging companies cease to exist⁹.

Where, in the case of a merger of public limited liability companies, the law of a member state requires the completion of any special formalities before the transfer of certain assets, rights and obligations by the merging companies becomes effective against third parties, those formalities apply and must be carried out either by the merging companies or by the European Company following its registration¹⁰.

The rights and obligations of the participating companies on terms and conditions of employment arising from national law, practice and individual employment contracts or employment relationships, and existing at the date of the registration, must, by reason of such registration, be transferred to the European Company upon its registration¹¹.

A merger of public companies limited by shares or public companies limited by guarantee having a share capital¹² may not be declared null and void once the European Company has been registered¹³. The absence of scrutiny of the legality of the merger¹⁴ may be included among the grounds for the winding up of the European Company¹⁵.

National law governing each merging company and mergers of public limited liability companies in accordance with EC Council Directive 78/855 (OJ L295, 20.10.1978, p 36) art 24 nevertheless apply: EC Council Regulation 2157/2001 (OJ L294, 10.11.2001, p 1) art 31(1). Where a merger by acquisition is carried out by a company which holds 90% or more (but not all) of the shares and other securities conferring the right to vote at general meetings of another company, reports by the management or administrative body, reports by an independent expert or experts and the documents necessary for scrutiny are required only to the extent that the national law governing either the acquiring company or the company being acquired so requires: art 31(2). Member states may, however, provide that art 31(2) applies where a company holds shares conferring 90% or more (but not all) of the voting rights: art 31(2). The shareholders of the companies promoting the formation of a holding European Company¹ have a period of three months in which to inform the promoting companies whether they intend to contribute their shares to the formation of the holding European Company². That period begins on the date upon which the terms for the formation of the holding European Company have been³ finally determined⁴. The holding European Company is formed only if, within this period, the shareholders of the companies promoting the operation have assigned the minimum proportion of shares in each company in accordance with the draft terms of formation and if all the other conditions are fulfilled⁵.

If the conditions for the formation of the holding European Company are all so fulfilled⁶, that fact must, in respect of each of the promoting companies, be publicised in the manner laid down in the national law⁷ governing each of those companies⁸. Shareholders of the companies promoting the operation who have not indicated whether they intend to make their shares available to the promoting companies for the purpose of forming the holding European Company within the specified period⁹ have a further month in which to do so¹⁰.

Shareholders who have contributed their securities to the formation of the European Company must receive shares in the holding European Company¹¹. The holding European Company may not be registered until it is shown that the necessary formalities have been completed¹² and that the necessary conditions¹³ have been fulfilled¹⁴.

A member state may, in the case of companies promoting such an operation, adopt provisions designed to ensure protection for minority shareholders who oppose the operation, creditors and employees¹⁵.

(iii) Conversion from an Existing Public Limited Liability Company

1651. Conversion of a public limited liability company.

A European Company¹ may be formed² by transforming a public limited liability company³. The conversion of a public limited liability company into a European Company does not result in the winding up of the company or in the creation of a new legal person⁴.

The management⁵ or administrative organ⁶ of the company in question must draw up draft terms of conversion and a report explaining and justifying the legal and economic aspects of the conversion and indicating the implications for the shareholders and for the employees of the adoption of the form of a European Company⁷. The draft terms of conversion must be publicised in the manner laid down in each member state's law⁸ at least one month before the general meeting called upon to decide upon them⁹. Before the general meeting is called to approve the draft terms¹⁰, one or more independent experts appointed or approved¹¹ by a judicial or administrative authority in the member state to which the company being converted into a European Company is subject must certify¹² that the company has net assets at least equivalent to its capital plus those reserves which must not be distributed under the law or the statutes of the company¹³.

The general meeting of the company in question must approve the draft terms of conversion together with the statutes of the European Company¹⁴. The decision of the general meeting must be passed as laid down in provisions of national law¹⁵. Member states may condition a conversion to a favourable vote of a qualified majority or unanimity in the organ of the company to be converted within which employee participation is organised¹⁶.

The rights and obligations of the company to be converted on terms and conditions of employment arising from national law, practice and individual employment contracts or employment relationships and existing at the date of the registration must, by reason of such registration, be transferred to the European Company¹⁷.

1651 Conversion of a public limited liability company

NOTE 8--Directive 68/151 art 3 replaced: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/101 (OJ L258, 1.10.2009, p 11) art 3.

(iv) Structure

A. IN GENERAL

1652. Structure.

Under the conditions laid down by the Regulation on the Statute for a European Company¹, a European Company comprises:

- 2340 (1) a general meeting of shareholders²; and
- 2341 (2) either a supervisory organ and a management organ (a 'two-tier' system) or an administrative organ (a 'one-tier' system) depending on the form adopted in the statutes³.

1 Ie EC Council Regulation 2157/2001 (OJ L294, 10.11.2001, p 1) on the Statute for a European Company. As to the meaning of 'European Company' see PARA 1633 note 5. As to EC Council Regulation 2157/2001 see PARA 1633.

B. THE GENERAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS

1653. General matters.

The general meeting decides on matters for which it is given sole responsibility by:

- 2342 (1) the EC Council Regulation on the Statute for a European Company¹; or
- 2343 (2) the legislation of the member state² in which the European Company's registered office is situated³.

Furthermore, the general meeting must decide on matters for which responsibility is given to the general meeting of a public limited liability company governed by the law of the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated, either by the law of that member state or by the European Company's statutes in accordance with that law⁴.

Without prejudice to the rules laid down in relation to the general meeting⁵, the organisation and conduct of general meetings together with voting procedures are governed by the law applicable to public limited liability companies in the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated⁶.

Amendment of a European Company's statutes requires a decision by the general meeting taken by a majority which may not be less than two thirds of the votes cast, unless the law applicable to public limited liability companies in the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated requires or permits a larger majority⁷. A member state may, however, provide that where at least half of a European Company's subscribed capital is represented, a simple majority of the votes⁸ suffice⁹. Amendments to a European Company's statutes must be publicised in accordance with the appropriate provisions¹⁰.

1654. Holding of meetings.

A European Company¹ must hold a general meeting² at least once each calendar year, within six months of the end of its financial year, unless the law of the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated³ applicable to public limited liability companies carrying on the same type of activity as the European Company provides for more frequent meetings⁴. A member state may, however, provide that the first general meeting may be held at any time in the 18 months following a European Company's incorporation⁵.

General meetings may be convened at any time by the management organ⁶, the administrative organ⁷, the supervisory organ⁸ or any other organ or competent authority⁹ in accordance with the national law applicable to public limited liability companies in the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated¹⁰.

One or more shareholders who together hold at least 10 per cent of a European Company's subscribed capital may request the European Company to convene a general meeting and draw up the agenda for the meeting; the European Company's statutes¹¹ or national legislation may provide for a smaller proportion under the same conditions as those applicable to public limited liability companies¹². The request that a general meeting be convened must state the items to be put on the agenda¹³. If, following a request to convene a general meeting¹⁴, the meeting is not held in due time and, in any event, within two months, the competent judicial or administrative authority¹⁵ within the jurisdiction of which the European Company's registered office is situated may order that a general meeting be convened within a given period or authorise either the shareholders who have requested it or their representatives to convene a general meeting¹⁶. This is without prejudice to any national provisions which allow the shareholders themselves to convene general meetings¹⁷.

1655. Conduct of meetings.

One or more shareholders who together hold at least 10 per cent of a European Company's¹ subscribed capital may request that one or more additional items be put on the agenda of any general meeting². The procedures and time limits applicable to such requests must be laid down by the national law of the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated³ or, failing that, by the European Company's statutes⁴. The above proportion may be reduced by the statutes or by the law of the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated under the same conditions as are applicable to public limited liability companies⁵.

Except where the Regulation on the Statute for a European Company⁶ or, failing that, the law applicable to public limited liability companies in the member state in which a European Company's registered office is situated requires a larger majority, the general meeting's decisions must be taken by a majority of the votes validly cast⁷. Where a European Company has two or more classes of shares, every decision by the general meeting must be subject to a separate vote by each class of shareholders whose class rights are affected thereby⁸.

1656. The two-tier system: the management organ.

The management organ¹ is responsible for managing a European Company² with a two-tier system³. A member state may provide that a managing director or managing directors are responsible for the current management under the same conditions as for public limited liability companies that have registered offices within that member state's territory⁴. The member or members of the management organ must be appointed and removed by the supervisory organ⁵. A member state may, however, require or permit the statutes⁶ to provide that the member or members of the management organ must be appointed and removed by the general meeting⁷ under the same conditions as for public limited liability companies that have registered offices within its territory⁸.

No person may at the same time be a member of both the management organ and the supervisory organ of the same European Company⁹. The supervisory organ may, however, nominate one of its members to act as a member of the management organ in the event of a vacancy¹⁰. During such a period the functions of the person concerned as a member of the supervisory organ must be suspended¹¹. A member state may impose a time limit on such a period¹².

The number of members of the management organ or the rules for determining it must be laid down in the European Company's statutes¹³. A member state may, however, fix a minimum number or a maximum number (or both)¹⁴.

Where no provision is made for a two-tier system in relation to public limited liability companies with registered offices within its territory, a member state may adopt the appropriate measures in relation to European Companies¹⁵.

1657. The two-tier system: the supervisory organ.

The supervisory organ of a European Company with a two-tier system¹ supervises the work of the management organ². It may not itself exercise the power to manage the European Company³.

The members of the supervisory organ must be appointed by the general meeting⁴. The members of the first supervisory organ may, however, be appointed by the statutes⁵. The number of members of the supervisory organ or the rules for determining it must be laid down in the statutes⁶. A member state may, however, stipulate the number of members of the supervisory organ for European Companies registered within its territory⁷ or a minimum number or a maximum number (or both)⁸.

The management organ must report to the supervisory organ at least once every three months on the progress and foreseeable development of the European Company's business⁹. In addition to this regular information, the management organ must promptly pass the supervisory organ any information on events likely to have an appreciable effect on the European Company¹⁰. The supervisory organ may require the management organ to provide information of any kind which it needs to exercise supervision¹¹; and a member state may provide that each member of the supervisory organ also be entitled to this facility¹². The supervisory organ may undertake or arrange for any investigations necessary for the performance of its duties¹³. Each member of the supervisory organ is entitled to examine all information submitted to it¹⁴.

The supervisory organ must elect a chairman from among its members¹⁵. If half of the members are appointed by employees, only a member appointed by the general meeting of shareholders may be elected chairman¹⁶.

1658. The one-tier system.

In the case of a European Company with a one-tier system¹, the administrative organ manages the European Company². A member state may provide that a managing director is or managing directors are responsible for the day-to-day management under the same conditions as for public limited liability companies that have registered offices within that member state's territory³. Where no provision is made for a one-tier system in relation to public limited liability companies with registered offices within its territory, a member state may adopt the appropriate measures in relation to European Companies⁴.

The number of members of the administrative organ or the rules for determining it must be laid down in the European Company's statutes⁵. A member state may, however, set a minimum and, where necessary, a maximum number of members⁶. The administrative organ must, however, consist of at least three members where employee participation is regulated in accordance with the Directive⁷ supplementing the Statute for a European Company with regard to the involvement of employees⁸.

The member or members of the administrative organ must be appointed by the general meeting⁹. The members of the first administrative organ may, however, be appointed by the statutes¹⁰.

The administrative organ must meet at least once every three months at intervals laid down by the statutes to discuss the progress and foreseeable development of the European Company's business¹¹. Each member of the administrative organ is entitled to examine all information submitted to it¹². The administrative organ must elect a chairman from among its members¹³. If half of the members are appointed by employees, only a member appointed by the general meeting of shareholders may be elected chairman¹⁴.

EUROPEAN FORMS OF COMPANY, ETC/(3) EUROPEAN COMPANY (SOCIETAS EUROPAEA)/(iv) Structure/C. THE ONE-TIER OR TWO-TIER MANAGEMENT STRUCTURE/1659. Rules common to both systems.

1659. Rules common to both systems.

Members of the organs of a European Company¹ must be appointed for a period laid down in the statutes² not exceeding six years³. Members may be reappointed once or more than once for the period so determined, subject to any restrictions laid down in the statutes⁴.

A European Company's statutes may permit a company or other legal entity to be a member of one of its organs, provided that the law applicable to public limited liability companies in the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated⁵ does not provide otherwise⁶. That company or other legal entity must designate a natural person to exercise its functions on the organ in question⁷.

No person may be a member of any European Company organ or a representative of a member⁸ who:

- 2344 (1) is disqualified, under the law of the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated, from serving on the corresponding organ of a public limited liability company governed by the law of that member state⁹; or
- 2345 (2) is disqualified from serving on the corresponding organ of a public limited liability company governed by the law of a member state owing to a judicial or administrative decision delivered in a member state¹⁰.

The statutes of a European Company may, in accordance with the law applicable to public limited liability companies in the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated, lay down special conditions of eligibility for members representing the shareholders¹¹. The Regulation on the Statute for a European Company¹² does not affect national law permitting a minority of shareholders or other persons or authorities to appoint some of the members of a company organ¹³.

A European Company's statutes must list the categories of transactions which require authorisation of the management organ by the supervisory organ in the two-tier system¹⁴ or an express decision by the administrative organ in the one-tier system¹⁵. A member state may determine the categories of transactions which must at least be indicated in the statutes of European Companies registered within its territory¹⁶.

The members of a European Company's organs are under a duty, even after they have ceased to hold office, not to divulge any information which they have concerning the European Company, the disclosure of which might be prejudicial to the company's interests, except where such disclosure is required or permitted under national law provisions applicable to public limited liability companies or is in the public interest¹⁷.

Unless otherwise provided by the Regulation on the Statute for a European Company or the statutes of the company, the internal rules relating to quorums and decision-taking in European Company organs must be as follows:

- 2346 (a) for a quorum, at least half of the members must be present or represented¹⁸;
- 2347 (b) for decision-taking, a majority of the members must be present or represented¹⁹.

Where there is no relevant provision in the statutes, the chairman of each organ has a casting vote in the event of a tie²⁰. There must be no provision to the contrary in the statutes, however, where half of the supervisory organ consists of employees' representatives²¹. Where employee participation is provided for in accordance with the Directive supplementing the Statute for a European Company with regard to the involvement of employees²², a member state may provide that the supervisory organ's quorum and decision-making must, by way of derogation from these provisions²³, be subject to the rules applicable, under the same conditions, to public limited liability companies governed by the law of the member state concerned²⁴.

Members of a European Company's management, supervisory and administrative organs are liable, in accordance with the provisions applicable to public limited liability companies in the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated, for loss or damage sustained by the European Company following any breach on their part of the legal, statutory or other obligations inherent in their duties²⁵.

1660. Annual accounts and consolidated accounts.

Subject to the Regulation on the Statute for a European Company¹, a European Company is governed by the rules applicable to public limited liability companies under the law of the member state in which its registered office is situated² as regards the preparation of its annual and, where appropriate, consolidated accounts including the accompanying annual report and the auditing and publication of those accounts³.

A European Company which is a credit or financial institution is governed by the rules laid down in the national law of the member state in which its registered office is situated in implementation of the Directive relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of credit institutions⁴ as regards the preparation of its annual and, where appropriate, consolidated accounts, including the accompanying annual report and the auditing and publication of those accounts⁵.

A European Company which is an insurance undertaking is governed by the rules laid down in the national law of the member state in which its registered office is situated in implementation of the Directive on the annual accounts and consolidated accounts of insurance undertakings⁶ as regards the preparation of its annual and, where appropriate, consolidated accounts, including the accompanying annual report and the auditing and publication of those accounts⁷.

If and so long as the third phase of European monetary union ('EMU') does not apply to the member state in which a European Company has its registered office, the European Company may, however, prepare and publish its annual and, where appropriate, consolidated accounts in euro: art 67(2). The member state may require that the European Company's annual and, where appropriate, consolidated accounts be prepared and published in the national currency under the same conditions as those laid down for public limited liability companies governed by the law of that member state: art 67(2). These provisions do not prejudice the additional possibility for a European Company of publishing its annual and, where appropriate, consolidated accounts in euro in accordance with EC Council Directive 90/604 (OJ L317, 16.11.1990, p 57) (see PARA 23): art 67(2).

EUROPEAN FORMS OF COMPANY, ETC/(3) EUROPEAN COMPANY (SOCIETAS EUROPAEA)/(vi) Transfer to another Member State/1661. Transfer of the registered office to another member state.

(vi) Transfer to another Member State

1661. Transfer of the registered office to another member state.

The registered office of a European Company¹ may be transferred to another member state in accordance with the following provisions². Such a transfer does not result in the winding up of the European Company or in the creation of a new legal person³.

The management or administrative organ⁴ must draw up a transfer proposal and publicise it in accordance with the appropriate provisions⁵, without prejudice to any additional forms of publication provided for by the member state of the registered office⁶. The proposal must state the current name, registered office and number of the European Company and must cover:

- 2348 (1) the proposed registered office of the European Company⁷;
- 2349 (2) the proposed statutes of the European Company including, where appropriate, its new name⁸;
- 2350 (3) any implication the transfer may have for employees' involvement⁹;
- 2351 (4) the proposed transfer timetable¹⁰;
- 2352 (5) any rights provided for the protection of shareholders or creditors or both¹¹.

The management or administrative organ must draw up a report explaining and justifying the legal and economic aspects of the transfer and explaining the implications of the transfer for shareholders, creditors and employees¹². A European Company's shareholders and creditors are entitled, at least one month before the general meeting called upon to decide on the transfer, to examine at the European Company's registered office the transfer proposal and the report¹³ and, on request, to obtain copies of those documents free of charge¹⁴. A member state may, in the case of European Companies registered within its territory, adopt provisions designed to ensure appropriate protection for minority shareholders who oppose a transfer¹⁵. No decision to transfer may be taken for two months after publication of the proposal¹⁶.

In the member state in which a European Company has its registered office, the court, notary or other competent authority¹⁷ must issue a certificate attesting to the completion of the acts and formalities to be accomplished before the transfer¹⁸. The new registration may not be effected until such a certificate has been submitted, and evidence produced that the formalities required for registration in the country of the new registered office have been completed¹⁹.

The transfer of a European Company's registered office and the consequent amendment of its statutes take effect on the date on which the European Company is registered²⁰ in the register for its new registered office²¹. When the European Company's new registration has been effected, the registry for its new registration must notify the registry for its old registration²²; and deletion of the old registration must be effected on receipt of that notification, but not before²³. The new registration and the deletion of the old registration must be publicised in the member states concerned in accordance with the appropriate provisions²⁴.

On publication of a European Company's new registration, the new registered office may be relied on as against third parties²⁵. However, as long as the deletion of the European Company's registration from the register for its previous registered office has not been publicised, third parties may continue to rely on the previous registered office unless the European Company proves that such third parties were aware of the new registered office²⁶.

The laws of a member state may provide that, as regards European Companies registered in that member state, the transfer of a registered office which would result in a change of the law applicable does not take effect if any of that member state's competent authorities opposes it within the two-month period allowed²⁷. Such opposition may be based only on grounds of public interest²⁸. Where a European Company is supervised by a national financial supervisory authority according to Community Directives, the right to oppose the change of registered office applies to this authority as well²⁹. Review by a judicial authority must be possible³⁰.

A European Company may not transfer its registered office if proceedings for winding up, liquidation, insolvency or suspension of payments or other similar proceedings have been brought against it³¹.

A European Company which has transferred its registered office to another member state must be considered, in respect of any cause of action arising prior to the transfer³², as having its registered office in the member states where the European Company was registered prior to the transfer, even if the European Company is sued after the transfer³³.

transfer: art 8(7). A member state may extend this provision so that it applies to liabilities that arise (or may arise) prior to the transfer; and in either case these provisions are without prejudice to the application to European Companies of the national legislation of member states concerning the satisfaction or securing of payments to public bodies: art 8(7). (vii) Termination of the Company 1662. Winding up, liquidation, insolvency and cessation of payments.

As regards winding up, liquidation, insolvency, cessation of payments and similar procedures, a European Company¹ is governed by the legal provisions which would apply to a public limited liability company formed in accordance with the law of the member state in which its registered office is situated², including provisions relating to decision-making by the general meeting³.

When a European Company no longer complies with the requirement to have its registered office in the same member state as its head office⁴, the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated must take appropriate measures to oblige the European Company to regularise its position within a specified period:

- 2353 (1) by re-establishing its head office in the member state in which its registered office is situated⁵; or
- 2354 (2) by transferring the registered office by means of the procedure laid down⁶.

Where a European Company fails to regularise its position in this way, the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated must put in place the measures necessary to ensure that the European Company is liquidated⁷. The member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated must set up a judicial remedy with regard to any established infringement of the requirement for a European Company to have its registered office in the same member state as its head office⁸; and that remedy has a suspensory effect on these procedures⁹.

Where it is established on the initiative of either the authorities or any interested party that a European Company has its head office within the territory of a member state in breach of the requirement for a European Company to have its registered office in the same member state as its head office¹⁰, the authorities of that member state must immediately inform the member state in which the European Company's registered office is situated¹¹.

Without prejudice to provisions of national law requiring additional publication, the initiation and termination of winding up, liquidation, insolvency or cessation of payment procedures and any decision to continue operating must be publicised in accordance with the appropriate requirements¹².

EUROPEAN FORMS OF COMPANY, ETC/(3) EUROPEAN COMPANY (SOCIETAS EUROPAEA)/(vii) Termination of the Company/1663. Conversion from a European Company into a public limited liability company.

1663. Conversion from a European Company into a public limited liability company.

A European Company¹ may be converted into a public limited liability company governed by the law of the member state in which its registered office² is situated³. However, no decision on conversion may be taken before two years have elapsed since its registration or before the first two sets of annual accounts have been approved⁴. The conversion of a European Company into a public limited liability company does not result in the winding up of the company or in the creation of a new legal person⁵.

The management⁶ or administrative⁷ organ of the European Company must draw up draft terms of conversion and a report explaining and justifying the legal and economic aspects of the conversion and indicating the implications of the adoption of the public limited liability company for the shareholders and for the employees⁸. The draft terms of conversion must be publicised in the manner laid down in each member state's law⁹ at least one month before the general meeting¹⁰ called to decide upon them¹¹.

Before the general meeting called to approve the draft terms of conversion together with the statutes¹², one or more independent experts appointed or approved¹³ by a judicial or administrative authority in the member state to which the European Company being converted into a public limited liability company is subject must certify that the company has assets at least equivalent to its capital¹⁴.

The general meeting of the European Company must approve the draft terms of conversion together with the statutes of the public limited liability company¹⁵. The decision of the general meeting must be passed as laid down in the appropriate provisions¹⁶.

UPDATE

NOTE 9--Directive 68/151 art 3 replaced: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/101 (OJ L258, 1.10.2009, p 11) art 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/3. EUROPEAN FORMS OF COMPANY, ETC/ (4) PRIVATE EUROPEAN COMPANY (SOCIETAS PRIVATA EUROPAEA)/1664. Proposal for a Private European Company (Societas Privata Europaea).

(4) PRIVATE EUROPEAN COMPANY (SOCIETAS PRIVATA EUROPAEA)

1664. Proposal for a Private European Company (Societas Privata Europaea).

The proposal for a Council Regulation on the Statute for a European private company¹ has as its objective the creation of a new European legal form intended to enhance the competitiveness of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) by facilitating their establishment and operation in the single market². The proposal is adapted to the specific needs of SMEs and aims to allow entrepreneurs to set up a European private company following the same, simple, flexible company law provisions across the member states³. The proposal also aims to reduce compliance costs on the creation and operation of businesses arising from the disparities between national rules both on the formation and on the operation of companies⁴. The proposal does not regulate matters related to labour law, tax law, accounting, or the insolvency of the European private company; nor does it deal with the contractual rights and obligations of the European private company or those of its shareholders other than those deriving from the articles of association of the company. These matters will continue to be governed by national law and existing Community law instruments, where relevant⁵.

1 Ie the Proposal for a Council Regulation on the Statute for a European private company (Brussels, COM(2008) 396/3) presented by the Commission. The European Private Company Statute (Societas Privata Europaea) forms part of a package of measures designed to assist small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), referred to as the Small Business Act for Europe (SBA). The objective of the SBA is to make it easier for SMEs to do business in the single market and consequently to improve their market performance: see para 1.

4. UNREGISTERED COMPANIES

1665. Unregistered companies and the Companies Acts etc.

Certain provisions of the Companies Act 2006 may be applied to unregistered companies¹, being bodies corporate² incorporated in and having a principal place of business in the United Kingdom³, other than⁴:

- 2355 (1) bodies incorporated by, or registered under, any public general Act of Parliament⁵;
- 2356 (2) bodies not formed for the purpose of carrying on a business that has for its object the acquisition of gain by the body or its individual members⁶;
- 2357 (3) bodies for the time being exempted for these purposes⁷ by direction of the Secretary of State⁸; and
- 2358 (4) open-ended investment companies⁹.

Notwithstanding the repeal of the Chartered Companies Act 1837 and the Chartered Companies Act 1884¹⁰, the power of Her Majesty to grant a charter of incorporation of limited duration or to extend or renew such a charter or privileges of such a charter is not affected¹¹.

For the purposes of those provisions of the Insolvency Act 1986 that govern the winding up of unregistered companies¹², the meaning of 'unregistered company' is defined separately (and distinctly)¹³. Where an insolvent partnership is wound up as an unregistered company¹⁴, certain of the provisions of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 also apply, subject to specified modifications¹⁵.

1 See the Companies Act 2006 s 1043, which applies to the bodies described in the text and notes 2-9: see s 1043(1). The provisions are applied by means of regulations made by the Secretary of State: see s 1043(2), (3), (5), (6); and PARA 1666. It should be noted that companies incorporated by special Act are not customarily registered under the Companies Acts but that certain provisions of the Companies Act 2006, by means of regulations made under s 1043, are specified to apply to them as unregistered companies: see PARA 1666 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'body corporate' for the purposes of the Companies Acts see PARA 1 note 5; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. See also PARAS 2, 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/4. UNREGISTERED COMPANIES/1666. Application of Companies Acts provisions to unregistered companies.

1666. Application of Companies Acts provisions to unregistered companies.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² applying specified provisions³ of the Companies Acts⁴ to all, or any specified description of, the bodies which fall within the unregistered companies provisions of the Companies Act 2006⁵. The regulations may provide that the specified provisions of the Companies Acts apply subject to any specified limitations and to such adaptations and modifications (if any) as may be specified⁶.

In this way, certain provisions of the Companies Act 1985⁷ and of the Companies Act 2006⁸ have been applied⁹ to an unregistered company¹⁰ as to a company within the meaning of the 2006 Act¹¹, subject to certain limitations, adaptations or modifications that have also been specified¹².

For the purposes of the application to an unregistered company of the provisions of the Companies Acts applying to it¹³, any reference to:

2359 (1) the company's registered office¹⁴ must be read as a reference to the company's principal office in the United Kingdom¹⁵;

2361 (3) the company's registered number¹⁷ must be read as a reference to the reference number allocated to the company by the registrar¹⁸.

In the application of any provision of the Companies Acts¹⁹, any reference to:

2362 (a) a public company²⁰ must be read, in relation to an unregistered company, as a reference to a company that has power under its constitution to offer its shares or debentures to the public²¹;

2363 (b) a private company²² must be read, in relation to an unregistered company, as a reference to a company that does not have power to offer its shares or debentures to the public²³;

2364 (c) a company's constitution, or to its articles of association²⁴, must be read, in relation to an unregistered company, as a reference to any instrument constituting or regulating the company²⁵;

2365 (d) the common seal of the company²⁶ must be read, in relation to an unregistered company, as a reference to the common or authorised seal of the company²⁷.

General provision is made for the adaptation of any expression defined, or otherwise having a particular meaning or effect, in relation to a company within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006²⁸, for the purposes of applying any provision of the Companies Acts to an unregistered company by virtue of the regulations²⁹.

The application of Companies Acts provisions to unregistered companies³⁰ does not:

2366 (i) repeal or revoke in whole or in part any enactment³¹, royal charter or other instrument constituting or regulating any body in relation to which provisions of the Companies Acts are applied by regulations³²; or

2367 (ii) restrict the power of Her Majesty to grant a charter in lieu or supplementary to any such charter³³;

but, in relation to any such body, the operation of any such enactment, charter or instrument is suspended in so far as it is inconsistent with any of those provisions as they apply for the time being to that body³⁴.

5. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES CLAUSES ACTS

(1) IN GENERAL

1667. Object of the Companies Clauses Acts.

The Companies Clauses Acts 1845 to 1889¹ are:

2368 (1) the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 as amended by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1888 and the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1889²; and 2369 (2) the Companies Clauses Act 1863 as amended by the Companies Clauses Act 1869.

The Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 was passed in order to comprise in one general Act the provisions relating to the constitution and management of companies which were at that time usually introduced into special Acts of Parliament incorporating a company; and the Companies Clauses Act 1863 was passed with the same object. By passing these general Acts the legislature has to a great extent avoided the necessity for repeating in each special Act incorporating a company provisions with regard to its constitution and management which are common to all such companies³.

Many companies have been and are from time to time incorporated by special Act of Parliament for the purpose of carrying on undertakings of a public nature. In some cases, the special Act incorporating the company provides for the dissolution of a company previously incorporated, either by a special Act or pursuant to the Companies Act 2006 or the Acts which it replaces, and also for the transfer to the new company of the undertaking and assets of the dissolved company⁴.

However, the Companies Clauses Acts are of declining importance as more and more companies are incorporated under the Companies Acts⁵ and the class of companies incorporated by special Act is thereby diminished⁶.

1 This collective title is given by the Short Titles Act 1896 s 2, Sch 2.

2 This Act was repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act 1908.

3 Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 preamble (repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act 1891). The Companies Act 2006, following the precedent set out in the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856, the Companies Act 1862, the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908, the Companies Act 1929, the Companies Act 1948 and the Companies Act 1985, allows the tables referred to in those Acts to be adopted as standard forms of the regulations governing companies registered under that Act. As to the continuance of the former Tables A etc see PARA 18. For a comparison between the Acts mentioned and the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 see Barton v London and North Western Rly Co (1889) 24 QBD 77 at 87, CA.

4 Stamp duty is chargeable on the special Act as a conveyance on sale (see STAMP DUTIES AND STAMP DUTY RESERVE TAX vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1050; and see also A-G v Felixstowe Gas Light Co [1907] 2 KB 984), subject to exemptions from duty on certain transactions by way of reconstruction and amalgamation.

5 On the registration of a company, the registrar of companies must give a certificate that the company is incorporated: see the Companies Act 2006 s 15(1); and PARA 119. As to the registrar of companies see PARA 131 et seq. As from the date of incorporation (ie the date mentioned in the certificate of incorporation), the subscribers of the memorandum of association, together with such other persons as may from time to time become members of the company, are a body corporate by the name stated in the certificate of incorporation: see s 16(1), (2); and PARA 120.

6 See PARA 1 et seq.

1668. Application of the Companies Clauses Acts.

All the clauses and provisions of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 apply to every joint stock company incorporated by any special Act of Parliament passed after 8 May 1845 for the purpose of carrying on any undertaking¹ whatsoever, unless they are expressly varied or excepted by the special Act²; and the special Act and the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, and any other Act incorporated with the special Act are, save as mentioned above, to be construed together as forming one Act³.

Part III of the Companies Clauses Act 1863⁴, which provides for the creation and issue of debenture stock, applies to every company having power to raise money on mortgage or bond by virtue of any Act of Parliament and is deemed to be incorporated with the special Act of every such company⁵. None of the other provisions of the Companies Clauses Act 1863 applies to a company unless made expressly applicable by its special Act⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'undertaking' see PARA 1738.

2 Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 1. To the extent that companies incorporated by special Act are unregistered companies falling within the Companies Act 2006 s 1043 (see PARA 1666), certain provisions of the 2006 Act, by means of regulations made under s 1043, are specified to apply to them as unregistered companies (see PARAS 1665-1666); and the operation of any provision contained in other Acts, charters or instruments is suspended in so far as it is inconsistent with any of the Companies Act 2006 provisions as they apply for the time being to such a body (see s 1043(4); and PARA 1666).

1669. Differences between companies incorporated under special Acts and under the Companies Act 2006.

The process of incorporating a company by special Act¹ is to be distinguished from the quite different method, lately from time to time adopted by Parliament, of conferring by statute special powers for special purposes on a company, incorporated or to be incorporated, in the ordinary way by registration under the Companies Act 2006².

Except where the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 have been specifically applied to companies incorporated by special Acts as unregistered companies³, such companies differ in many important respects of constitution, powers and management from companies regulated by the Companies Acts⁴.

1 See PARAS 1667, 1668.

2 See PARA 1667.

3 As to the application of the Companies Clauses Acts see PARA 1668 note 2.

4 See PARA 1670 et seq.

1670. Statutory definitions.

In the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845¹ and in the special Act² certain words³ and expressions have special meanings unless there is something in the subject or the context repugnant to such a construction⁴. Thus 'lands' extends to messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments of any tenure; and 'lease' includes an agreement for a lease⁵.

The 'company' is the company constituted by the special Act⁶; and the 'directors' are the directors of the company and include all persons having the direction of the undertaking⁷, whether under the name of directors, managers, committee of management or under any other name⁸. The 'secretary' means the secretary of the company and includes a clerk⁹.

'Shareholder' means a shareholder, proprietor or member of the company; and in referring to any such shareholder, expressions properly applicable to a person are to apply to a corporation¹⁰.

1 The Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 and the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1888 are to be construed together as one Act: s 1. As to the application of the Companies Clauses Acts see PARA 1668 note 2. These statutory definitions are, therefore, also relevant to the construction of the 1888 Act: see eg Phillips v Parnaby [1934] 2 KB 299, DC.

2 In the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 (and in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1888), the 'special Act' must be construed to mean any Act incorporating a joint stock company for the purpose of carrying on any undertaking which incorporates the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845: s 2. As to the meaning of 'undertaking' see PARA 1738.

3 The singular includes the plural, the masculine gender includes the feminine, and 'month' is a calendar month: Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 3.

4 Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 3. 'Prescribed' as used in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 is to be construed to refer to such matter as the same is prescribed or provided for in the special Act; and the sentence in which that word occurs is to be construed as if, instead of the expression 'prescribed', the expression 'prescribed for that purpose in the special Act' had been used: s 2.

1671. Inspection of special Acts.

The company¹ must at all times after the expiration of six months² after the passing of its special Act³ keep in its principal office of business a copy of the special Act, printed by the Queen's printers⁴. If it fails to do so, it is liable to a penalty not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale for every such offence and also, in the case of a continuing offence, to a penalty of £5 a day⁵. It must permit persons interested to inspect its Act and make extracts and copies from it at all reasonable hours on payment⁶.

6 Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 161. Section 161 also requires the deposit in the offices of local authorities of copies of special Acts by railway, canal and similar undertakings operating in more than one place, and the same provisions as to inspection apply. As to the meaning of 'undertaking' see PARA 1738.

(2) POWERS AND LIABILITIES OF COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES CLAUSES ACTS

1672. Powers conferred by statute.

The powers of a company to which the Companies Clauses Acts apply are limited and circumscribed by the special Act creating it and any Act altering its powers. They extend no further than is therein expressly stated or is necessarily required for carrying into effect the purposes of its incorporation. It does not have power to deal with its property and incur liabilities in the same way as an ordinary individual, as is the case with a corporation created by charter¹. Such a company, therefore, has only the powers expressly or by inference given to it by its special Act or Acts, with the extra powers given to it by the Companies Clauses Acts or such of those Acts as are applicable.

Even with the consent of all its shareholders, the company cannot do or contract to do anything outside the scope of its powers, however advantageous it may appear to be; and any act purported to be done by the company which exceeds these powers is *ultra vires*². Such companies, being bodies corporate, may acquire and hold real or personal property in joint tenancy in the same manner as if they were individuals; but this acquisition and holding is subject to the same restrictions as attach to the acquisition and holding of property by a body corporate in severalty³.

However, for companies under the Companies Act 2006, the validity of an act done by the company cannot be called into question on the ground of a lack of capacity by reason of anything in the company's constitution: see s 39; and PARA 265. As to the meaning of references to a company's constitution see PARA 227. As to the extension of the provisions of ss 39, 40 (power of directors to bind company) (see PARAS 256, 265) to companies incorporated by Act of Parliament, to the extent that such companies are unregistered companies falling within s 1043 (as to which see PARA 1668 note 2), see PARA 1666.

1673. Form of contracts.

The former general rule that contracts entered into by a corporation aggregate had, with certain exceptions, to be made under seal¹ never applied to companies governed by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, which have always been subject to the special provision in that Act with respect to the making of contracts², not radically different from those contained in the Corporate Bodies' Contracts Act 1960³.

2 See the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 97; and PARA 1775.

3 The Corporate Bodies' Contracts Act 1960 (see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1272 et seq) does not apply to a company registered under the Companies Act 2006, to a company incorporated outside the United Kingdom, or to a limited liability partnership: Corporate Bodies' Contracts Act 1960 s 2 (substituted by SI 2009/1941). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. As to formation and registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 102 et seq. 1674. Liability for torts and crimes.

(3) NAME, OFFICE AND SERVICE

1675. Manner and effect of change of name.

The name given to the company¹ by its special Act² cannot be changed except by another Act³. If the special Act incorporates the statutory provisions relating to change of name⁴, the provisions described below apply. The change of name does not affect the powers vested in the company by its original name, and any reference in any statute to the company by its original name is interpreted as if a reference to the company by its new name was substituted⁵.

No proceeding, whether civil or criminal, which is pending at the passing of the special Act either at the instance of or against the company, by its original name, is affected in any way by its change of name⁶. Nor is any document or instrument whatever discharged or affected by reason of the company or its undertaking⁷ being called in it by the original name of the company or undertaking⁸. It is not necessary in any such proceeding, document or instrument to aver that the company or its undertaking had been known by its original name, and that by the special Act the name of the company and its undertaking were changed, and that the company had since been known by its new name, and its undertaking by its new name: but it is sufficient to describe the company by its new name and its undertaking by its new name⁹.

The change of name does not invalidate anything done before the passing of the special Act effecting the change under or by virtue of any other Act¹⁰; nor does it affect any deeds, instruments, purchases, sales, securities and contracts made before the passing of the special Act under any other Act or with reference to its purposes¹¹.

Any proceeding requiring to be served upon the company¹ may be served by being left at or transmitted through the post² directed to its principal office, or one of its principal offices where there are more than one, or by being given personally to the secretary³ or, in case there is no secretary, then by being given to any one director of the company⁴. Where there is a secretary, service on a director is not sufficient⁵. A notice requiring to be served by the company¹ upon a person holding its shares or stock may, unless expressly required to be served personally, be served by being sent by post to his registered or other known address within such period as to admit of its being delivered in the due course of delivery within the period, if any, prescribed for the giving of the notice². In proving such service it is sufficient to prove that the notice was properly directed and put into the post office³.

With respect to any share or stock to which two or more persons are jointly entitled, notice must be given to the person named first in the appropriate register, and notice so given is sufficient notice to all the proprietors of the share or stock⁴.

1681. Subscribed capital.

The special Act¹ may provide for the division of the subscribed capital² into shares of prescribed³ number and amount, or it may provide that the subscribed capital is to be in the form of a general capital stock, each subscriber being entitled to an aliquot part of the stock proportionate to the amount subscribed by him. It may also confer upon the company⁴ power to issue different classes of shares and different classes of stock with preferential or other rights attached to them.

The Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 contains provisions with regard to shares and shareholders⁵, and provides for the conversion of fully paid shares into stock⁶; but it does not contain any provisions with regard to preference shares, nor does it provide for the issue of stock. The Companies Clauses Act 1863, however, remedies this deficiency⁷.

1682. Loan capital.

In the case of a company¹ authorised by a special Act² to raise capital by way of loan, the special Act may prescribe how the capital may be obtained, whether by the creation of mortgages or the issue of bonds³ or debentures or debenture stock⁴ or in any other form. In certain cases, a company may issue redeemable debenture stock⁵. Mortgages or bonds must be carefully distinguished from debenture stock. The principal distinction is that the holder of debenture stock, instead of being a lender entitled to repayment of his capital at the time fixed by the instrument, obtains a charge on the company's undertaking for the interest on the money paid by him, which is in the nature of a perpetual annuity⁶.

1683. Excess borrowing.

A limit on the amount of the capital which may be raised by way of loan is usually prescribed by the special Act, and borrowing in excess of the amount so prescribed is ultra vires and creates no debt¹. Directors are in the position of special agents, having authority to affix the company's seal² to mortgage and other deeds which are intra vires the company, but having no power to affix the seal so as to bind the company in any case where the deed is one the execution of which the legislature has expressly or impliedly forbidden³.

Prohibition against borrowing more than a specified sum is, in substance, disobeyed only when and so far as an obligation to pay more than that sum is contracted. So far as money borrowed has been applied in discharging debts or liabilities which could be enforced against the company, the lender is entitled to have the loan treated as valid⁴.

Money borrowed to pay off bonds or mortgages given or made under the statutory powers and so applied is deemed to be borrowed within the statutory powers⁵.

Certain statutory companies¹ are empowered by statute², where preference or debenture stock³ was authorised to be created or issued before 19 May 1915⁴, to create and issue that stock so as to be redeemable on terms and conditions specified in a resolution⁵ passed at a special company meeting⁶. If the resolution so provides, the company may call in and pay off the stock or any part of it at any time before the fixed redemption date⁷ and redeem it either by paying it off or by issuing to any consenting stockholder any other stock in substitution⁸. Further, such companies may, for the purpose of providing money for paying off the stock or providing substituted stock, create and issue new stock, either redeemable or irredeemable, or reissue stock originally created and issued in pursuance of these provisions⁹. The creation and issue of stock of any particular class must not make the total nominal amount of that stock issued exceed the amount of that class of stock which the company is for the time being authorised to create¹⁰.

1 For these purposes, 'statutory company' means any railway, canal, dock, water or other company incorporated by special Act which is for the time being authorised under an Act to construct, work, own or carry on any railway, canal, dock, water or other public undertaking, and includes any person or body of persons so authorised: Statutory Companies (Redeemable Stock) Act 1915 s 2(1).

5 For the purposes of the Act, a resolution passed before the commencement of the Act (ie 19 May 1915: see the text and note 4) and after the outbreak of the 1914-18 war for the creation or issue of redeemable stock has the same effect as if the Act had been in operation when the resolution was passed: Statutory Companies (Redeemable Stock) Act 1915 s 1(4).

If, when any increase of the subscribed capital takes place by the creation of new shares, the existing shares are at a premium, the sum to be raised must, unless it is otherwise provided by the special Act¹, be divided into shares of such an amount as will conveniently allow them to be apportioned among the shareholders² in proportion to their holding³. The new shares must be offered by letter under the hand of the secretary⁴ to the shareholders, in proportion to their holding⁵.

The new shares vest in and belong to the shareholders who accept them and pay for them at the time and by the instalments fixed by the company⁶. If any shareholder fails for one month⁷ after the offer of new shares to accept them and pay the required instalments, the company may dispose of them in such manner as it deems most for its advantage⁸.

If the existing shares are not at a premium, the new shares may be of such amount and may be issued in such manner and on such terms as the company thinks fit⁹. They may be issued at a discount¹⁰.

1688. Preference shares.

There was no general provision in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 authorising the creation of preference shares or regulating, as to companies empowered by special Act to create such shares, the exercise of that power. Before the passing of the Companies Clauses Act 1863, however, certain companies had been empowered by special Acts to issue preference shares and, in effect, to attach to them the right to a dividend, not only of a preferential but also of a cumulative character¹.

The Companies Clauses Act 1863 provides that a company authorised by a special Act² to raise any additional sum or sums by the issue of new preference shares or new preference stock or, at the company's option, by either of these modes, may from time to time with the same sanction as for the issue of new ordinary shares, create and issue, according to the authority given by the special Act, such new shares or new stock, either ordinary or preference, and either of one class and with the same privileges, or of several classes and with different privileges, and of the same or different amounts, and respectively with any fixed, fluctuating, contingent, preferential, perpetual, terminable, deferred or other dividend or interest, not exceeding the rate prescribed by the special Act, or, if no rate is so prescribed, 5 per cent³, and subject to the payment of calls of such amounts and at such times as the company thinks fit⁴. Any preference assigned to any shares or stock so issued does not affect any guarantee, preference or priority in the payment of dividend or interest on any shares or stock that may have been granted by the company under or confirmed by any previous Act, or that may be otherwise lawfully subsisting⁵.

The preference shares or stock so issued are entitled to the preferential dividend or interest assigned to them out of the annual profits in priority to the company's ordinary shares and stock, but they are non-cumulative⁶.

In the absence of special provision, the preference shareholders have no priority over ordinary shareholders as to repayment of capital, but the assets must be distributed rateably among all the shareholders in proportion to their capital⁷.

The terms and conditions to which any preference share or preference stock is subject must be clearly stated on the certificate of that preference share or portion of preference stock⁸.

1690. Disposal of new shares.

If, at the time of the issue of new shares or new stock, the ordinary shares are or ordinary stock is at a premium, then, unless before the issue of the new shares or stock the company otherwise determines, the new shares or stock must be of such amount as will conveniently allow the same to be apportioned among the holders of the ordinary stock and ordinary shares in proportion, as nearly as conveniently may be, to their holding, and must be offered to them at par in that proportion¹. It is not obligatory on the company so to apportion or offer any new shares or stock unless the amount of every new share or portion of new stock to be so offered would, if so apportioned, be at least the sum prescribed in the special Act, and, if no such sum is prescribed, then at least £10².

The offer must be made by letter under the hand of the company treasurer or secretary, given to every holder of ordinary shares or stock or sent by post addressed to him according to his address in the shareholders' or stockholders' address book, or left for him at his usual or then last known place of abode in England, Scotland or Northern Ireland³, as the case may require; and every such offer made by letter sent by post is considered as made on the day on which the letter in due course of delivery ought to be delivered at the place to which it is addressed⁴.

The new shares or portions of new stock so offered vest in and belong to the shareholders or stockholders who accept them, or their nominees⁵.

Any shareholder or stockholder failing to signify his acceptance of the whole or part of the new shares or stock offered him within the time prescribed by the special Act or, if no time is so prescribed, within one month⁶ is deemed to have declined the offer either wholly or in part⁷; but, where, from absence abroad or other cause satisfactory to the directors, he omits to signify his acceptance within the time prescribed, the directors may permit him to accept them⁸.

Subject to the above right of pre-emption, the company may from time to time dispose of new shares and new stock at such times, to such persons, on such terms and conditions, and in such manner as the directors think advantageous to the company⁹.

The only persons entitled to require and, if necessary, sue for, payment out of the proposed company's funds of the costs they have incurred are those who have acted directly for the company contemplated by the Bill, without being employed to do the work by any other person for hire or reward; those who have been employed by some other person for hire or reward to do the work must look for payment to the person who employed them¹.

These costs and expenses include money advanced for the purpose of paying parliamentary fees². A promise by promoters of a railway company to pay a sum of money to an influential landowner for his countenance and support does not constitute an expense incident to obtaining the special Act which the company is liable to or lawfully can pay³.

The period of limitation⁴ does not begin to run against a person who is entitled to sue a company for costs and expenses until the company has assets with which to pay him⁵.

They are choses or things in action⁴ and not goods⁵. Certificates for shares or for the stock into which they have been converted are not goods or documents of title to goods⁶.

1695. Issue of shares at a discount.

New shares issued under the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845¹ and new shares or stock to which the Companies Clauses Act 1863² applies³ may be issued at a discount⁴.

The Companies Clauses Act 1863⁵ regulates the issue of any shares forming part of the capital, whether original or additional, authorised to be raised by any special Act of a company passed before the parliamentary session of 1869⁶. Any shares the creation of which has been authorised by a company, but which have not been issued before the passing of the Companies Clauses Act 1869, must not be issued on any terms other than those on which they might have been issued if that Act had not been passed, except where the company has authorised the issue on other terms in the proper manner⁷. The Companies Clauses Act 1869 does not alter or extend the provisions of any Act relating to share capital in respect of which the amount of profits to be divided is limited to a fixed rate per cent upon the company's paid up capital⁸.

5 See the Companies Clauses Act 1863 ss 12-21 (see PARAS 1687-1690); and the Companies Clauses Act 1869 ss 5, 6. It is clear that, in the particular cases to which those statutory provisions refer, companies may issue their unissued original shares, as well as new shares, at a discount. The question whether, in other cases and in the absence of power in the special Act, original as opposed to new shares or stock may be issued at a discount was left open in Webb v Shropshire Rlys Co [1893] 3 Ch 307, CA (decided upon the terms of the special Act). In Statham v Brighton Marine Palace and Pier Co [1899] 1 Ch 199, Romer J held that original shares not subscribed for may be issued at a discount. (ii) Shareholders

A. DESCRIPTION OF SHAREHOLDER

Every person who has subscribed¹ the prescribed² sum or more to the capital of the company³ or has otherwise become entitled to a share in the company and whose name has been entered on the register of shareholders⁴ is deemed to be a shareholder of the company⁵.

A scrip holder may be entitled, in certain events and on certain terms, to come in and take shares without being liable to be registered against his will as a shareholder⁶. Generally a person becomes entitled to shares by sending the company a signed application form and receiving notice of an allotment pursuant to the application, and consequently a binding contract, by offer and acceptance, is constituted, as in the cases of companies under the Companies Act 2006⁷. Although there cannot be a register in the strict sense of the term until the book containing it is sealed at the first ordinary meeting of a company⁸, there are shareholders before that time, inasmuch as the first ordinary meeting is a meeting of shareholders⁹. A transferee whose name is on the register of transfers¹⁰ may be a shareholder without his name being on the register of shareholders¹¹.

Where the special Act contains the usual provision that the company must not issue any share and that no share will vest in the person accepting it unless and until a sum not being less than one-fifth part of the amount of the share has been paid up in respect of it, anyone who has subscribed for shares and whose name is entered on the register is deemed to be a shareholder, and accordingly is liable for calls, notwithstanding that, when the call is made, the prescribed one-fifth has not been paid up on the shares¹². Where, however, there is a provision as to the issue and vesting of shares, and a person who has agreed to take shares but has paid nothing on them executes a transfer which is registered by the company, the transfer operates as a new contract between the transferor, the transferee and the company, whereby the transferee becomes the taker of the shares and the transferor is discharged from his agreement to take them¹³.

1 'Subscribed' primarily referred to the signing of the subscription or parliamentary contracts (formerly in vogue when application was made for a special Act to incorporate a company for the execution of some public undertaking), whereby a number of signatories bound themselves to contribute specified sums for the purpose of the undertaking: Porter v Emmens (1876) 1 CPD 664 at 669, CA. A subscription contract is now neither necessary nor usual, and signing such a contract is not the only way of subscribing; anyone who has agreed in writing to take shares is for this purpose a subscriber: Portal v Emmens (1876) 1 CPD 664 at 669, CA; Re Littlehampton Steamship Co Ltd, Gregg's Case (1866) 15 WR 82.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES CLAUSES ACTS/(5) SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL/(ii) Shareholders/A. DESCRIPTION OF SHAREHOLDER/1698. Non-recognition of trust affecting shares.

1698. Non-recognition of trust affecting shares.

The company is not bound to see to the execution of any trust, whether express, implied or constructive, to which any shares are subject¹. The receipt of the party in whose name any share stands in the company's books or, if it stands in the names of more persons than one, the receipt of one of the persons named in the register of shareholders, is a sufficient discharge to the company for any dividend or other sum payable in respect of the share, notwithstanding any trusts to which the share may then be subject, and whether or not the company has had notice of them; and the company is not bound to see to the application of the money paid upon such receipt². Therefore, as between themselves and the company, executors or trustees registered as the holders of shares have and are subject to precisely the same rights and liabilities as other joint holders; they are joint holders in their individual capacity, and any transfer of the shares must be executed by all of them; the company has nothing to do with the character in which they hold the shares³.

Where, however, directors make an illegal application of the company's funds by investing them in the purchase, in the name of the chairman of the board, of shares in another company, notwithstanding the illegality of the transaction, the chairman is a trustee of the shares for his company and may be compelled to transfer them as it directs⁴.

1699. Register of shareholders.

The company¹ must keep a book, called the 'register of shareholders', in which must be entered in alphabetical order the names of the corporations, and the names and additions² of the persons entitled to shares in the company, with the number of shares to which each shareholder³ is entitled, distinguishing each share by its number and the amount of the subscriptions paid on the shares⁴. This book must be authenticated by the company's common seal⁵ being affixed to it at the first ordinary meeting⁶, or at the next subsequent meeting, and so from time to time at each ordinary meeting of the company⁷. The provision as to distinguishing each share by its number is directory only, and the insertion of the distinguishing numbers in the register is not essential⁸. Nor is the direction as to the time at which the register is to be made up an essential condition to its validity, and a register made up later may be valid⁹. The register need not necessarily consist of a single volume; where it is contained in several volumes, and only the last one of the series is sealed, the whole of the register is admissible in evidence¹⁰.

1700. Shareholders' address book.

In addition to the register of shareholders¹, the company² must provide a book called the 'shareholders' address book', in which the secretary³ must from time to time enter in alphabetical order the corporate names and places of business of the shareholders⁴ who are corporations, and the surnames of the other shareholders with their respective christian names, places of abode and descriptions, so far as these are known to the company⁵.

Every shareholder or, if a corporation, its clerk or agent may at all convenient times examine this book without charge, and may require a copy of the whole or of any part of it⁶. This right to have a copy is a private right conferred on a person as a member of the company and not as a member of the public⁷. The remedy to enforce the right is by an injunction to restrain the company from continuing to refuse to supply him, or a mandatory injunction directing the company to supply him; and the court cannot inquire into the applicant's motives⁸.

B. SHARE CERTIFICATES

1701. Delivery and effect of certificates.

On the demand of the holder of any share¹, a company² must cause to be delivered to him a certificate of the proprietorship of the share under its common seal³, specifying the share in the undertaking⁴ to which he is entitled⁵. The certificate may be according to the statutory form or to the like effect⁶; and for the certificate the company may demand any sum not exceeding the amount prescribed in the special Act or, if no amount is prescribed, a sum not exceeding 12 pence⁷. The certificate is a solemn affirmation under the company's seal that a certain amount of shares or stock stands in the name of the holder named in the certificate⁸, and is a representation, binding on the company by way of estoppel, that the amount stated in the certificate to have been paid on the shares has been paid⁹.

The certificate is admissible in all courts as prima facie evidence of the title of the shareholder, his executors, administrators, successors or assigns to the share specified in it¹⁰, but it is not conclusive evidence of title¹¹; and the want of it does not prevent the holder of any share from disposing of it¹².

If a share certificate¹ is worn out or damaged, it may be produced at some meeting of the directors² and they may order it to be cancelled, and thereupon another similar certificate must be given to the person in whom the property of the certificate, and of the share mentioned in it, is at the time vested³. If the certificate is lost or destroyed and the loss is proved to the satisfaction of the directors, a similar certificate must be given to the person entitled to it⁴. In either case the secretary⁵ must make a due entry of the substituted certificate in the register of shareholders⁶. For every certificate so given or exchanged the company⁷ may demand any sum not exceeding the amount prescribed⁸ by the special Act⁹ or, if no amount is prescribed, a sum not exceeding 12 pence¹⁰.

1703. Shareholders' liability in general.

The persons who have subscribed¹ any money towards an undertaking², or their legal representatives³, must pay the sums subscribed or those portions as are from time to time called for by the company⁴ at the times and places it appoints⁵. The company's remedy by making a claim for recovery of calls is enforceable only against persons who were shareholders⁶ when the calls were made⁷.

1 'Subscribed' is used with reference primarily to subscription of the parliamentary contract and subscribers' agreement which, in 1845, were required by the standing orders of both Houses of Parliament in the case of companies to which the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 applies: see PARA 1697 note 1. As to the application of the Companies Clauses Acts see PARA 1668 note 2. See also Cromford Rly Co v Lacey (1829) 3 Y & J 80 at 86, 90. The provision also applies to the modern method of subscription by application for shares in a company after its incorporation. shares: Waterford, Wexford, Wicklow and Dublin Rly Co v Pidcock (1853) 8 Exch 279 at 283, 285; Edwards v Kilkenny and Great Southern and Western Rly Co (1863) 14 CBNS 526.

A company¹ may from time to time make calls upon the shareholders² in respect of the amount of capital subscribed or owing by them, as it thinks fit, provided that at least 21 days' notice is given of each call, that no call exceeds the amount, if any, prescribed³ by the special Act⁴, that successive calls are not made at less than the interval, if any, prescribed, and that the aggregate amount of calls made in any one year does not exceed the prescribed amount, if any⁵. Every shareholder is liable to pay the amount of the calls so made in respect of the shares held by him to the persons and at the times and places from time to time appointed by the company⁶.

The power to make calls upon the shareholders¹ may be, and usually is, exercised by the directors². A call is generally deemed to have been made when the resolution to call for the money is passed; the resolution need not specify either the time or the place for payment, it being only a determination that an application is to be made to each shareholder for a portion of the amount of his shares³. The resolution is not invalid merely because it is prospective. Thus a resolution may be passed on 13 March that a call be made on 30 March, payable on 1 May following⁴. A call may validly be made payable by instalments⁵; but probably, in that case, the company⁶ cannot maintain a claim for any part of the call until the last instalment is due, the day appointed for payment of the last instalment being, in that case, the day appointed for the payment of the call within the meaning of the statute⁷.

If the directors make a call which is for any reason invalid, they must before proceeding to make a valid call rescind the resolution for the invalid call⁸.

The making of the call upon the shareholders¹ and notice of its having been made are two distinct things². Consequently a shareholder who transfers his shares after a call has been made on them continues liable to pay the call, as between himself and the company³, even if at the time of the transfer he has not received the notice⁴. This right of the company against a transferor does not, however, affect any right of his against the transferee under the contract of transfer⁵.

The person whose name appears on the register⁶ is alone personally liable to the company for calls⁷. The company cannot, therefore, compel an equitable mortgagee or other owner of shares to pay calls on them⁸; nor can it sue a transferee for calls until his name has been entered on a duly sealed register⁹.

1707. Minor's liability.

A minor¹ is capable of becoming a shareholder² in a company³ governed by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, and it seems that a claim for calls may be maintained against him even during his minority⁴. If, having been registered while a minor, he attains his majority and then permits his name to continue registered, he is liable to be sued for calls, whether made during or since his minority⁵. Where, however, he has become a shareholder by contract, he may repudiate the contract either during his minority or when he comes of age, and after that repudiation cannot be sued for calls⁶.

1708. Recovery of payment and interest.

If, before or on the day appointed for payment, a shareholder¹ does not pay the amount of any call to which he is liable², he is liable to pay interest at the rate allowed by law from the day appointed for payment to the time of the actual payment³. The company⁴ may sue him in any court having competent jurisdiction and recover the amount, with lawful interest, from the day on which the call was payable⁵.

In a claim for calls it is sufficient for the company to allege that the defendant is the holder of one share or more in the company, stating the number of shares, and is indebted to it in the sum to which the calls in arrear amount in respect of one call or more upon one share or more (stating the number and amount of each of those calls), by which a claim has accrued to the company by virtue of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 and the special Act⁶. An allegation in the pleading that the defendant is a holder may be supported by proof that he was so when the call was made⁷. A claim in this statutory form cannot be maintained against the executors of a deceased shareholder personally, where the call was made in his lifetime⁸. The limitation period in a claim in the statutory form is six years⁹.

COMPANIES CLAUSES ACTS/(5) SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL/(ii) Shareholders/C. SHAREHOLDERS' LIABILITY FOR CALLS OR CAPITAL NOT PAID UP/1709. Evidence.

At the trial of a claim for calls¹ it is sufficient to prove that, at the time of making the call, the defendant was a holder of one share or more in the undertaking² and that the call was in fact made, and notice of the making of the call given as directed by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 or the special Act³. It is not necessary to prove the appointment of the directors⁴ who made the call, or any other matter⁵. The company⁶ is thereupon entitled to recover what is due upon the call, with interest⁷, unless it appears that the call exceeds the prescribed⁸ amount, that due notice was not given⁹, that the prescribed interval between two successive calls had not elapsed, or that calls amounting to more than the sum prescribed for the total amount of calls in one year had been made within that period¹⁰.

The production of the register of shareholders¹¹ is prima facie evidence of the defendant being a shareholder, and of the number and amount of his shares¹², without proof that the company's seal has been duly affixed at a meeting¹³. If the company relies on this provision, the register must contain within itself all the particulars necessary to charge the defendant with liability in the claim¹⁴, and all the provisions of the enactment as to how the register is to be kept must be scrupulously observed¹⁵. In addition, if it is proved that such person has become, by subscribing the prescribed sum or otherwise, entitled to a share in the company, the evidence that he is a shareholder is conclusive.

If there is no register or if the register is so defective as to be inadmissible in evidence, other evidence must be adduced to prove that a person is a shareholder¹⁶.

The defendant may disprove the prima facie liability arising from his name being on the register by showing that the company had no authority to put, and ought not to have put, his name there¹⁷. He may, however, be precluded by his own conduct from denying, as against the company, that he is a shareholder; and, if he has so acted as, in effect, to claim the position of a shareholder, he may be estopped from raising some objection which he might otherwise have raised to his liability for calls¹⁸.

1710. Proceedings in Scotland to recover calls.

Although in general the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 does not extend to Scotland¹, if any shareholder² residing in Scotland fails to pay the amount of any call made upon him by the company³, the company may proceed against him in Scotland and sue for and recover the amount of the call, or declare his share forfeited, in the manner provided by the Companies Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act 1845 in regard to shareholders of any company in Scotland⁴.

1711. Execution against shareholders for company's debts.

If any execution has been issued against the property or effects of a company¹, and there cannot be found sufficient on which to levy that execution, then execution may be issued against any of the shareholders² to the extent of their shares respectively in the company's capital not then paid up, upon an order of the court in which the claim or other proceeding has been brought or instituted made upon application in open court after notice to the persons sought to be charged or in chambers³.

Execution against shareholders will be granted only after proof of total⁴ or partial⁵ failure of execution against the company, and only against persons who were shareholders at the time of the failure of that execution, whether they were so at the date of the judgment or not⁶.

The court may grant permission in accordance with the application or may order that any issue or question necessary to determine the rights of the parties be tried in any of the ways in which any question in a claim may be tried, and in either case such terms as to costs or otherwise as are just may be imposed⁷.

For the purpose of ascertaining the names of the shareholders¹ and the amount of capital remaining to be paid upon their respective shares, any person entitled to execution² may at all

The register is prima facie evidence that any particular person is or is not a shareholder, but is not conclusive⁸. A shareholder who is registered in respect of partly paid shares may show that, as between himself and the company, he is not liable for calls⁹.

If it thinks fit, a company¹ may receive from any of its shareholders² payment in advance of all or any part of the money due upon their shares, beyond the sums actually called for³. Upon the principal money so paid in advance, or so much of it as from time to time exceeds the amount of the calls then made upon the shares in respect of which the advance is made, the company may pay interest at such rate as the shareholder paying that sum in advance and the company agree upon, but not exceeding the legal rate of interest for the time being⁴.

D. TRANSFER AND TRANSMISSION OF SHARES

1715. Obligations of seller and buyer of shares.

In ordinary cases, the mutual obligations of the seller and the buyer of shares are briefly as follows. The seller must at the time fixed by the contract or, if no time is fixed, within a reasonable time¹, deliver to the buyer, against payment of the agreed price, a duly executed transfer of, and the certificate for, the shares agreed to be sold, and must do nothing to prevent the registration of the buyer as transferee. Where the contract is subject to the rules and regulations of the Stock Exchange, there is no implied term that, if the company refuses to register the transfer, the price is to be refunded². The buyer must:

- 2372 (1) prepare a proper instrument of transfer and send it to the seller for execution, although in practice the seller's broker prepares and procures the seller's execution of the transfer and then sends it to the buyer³;
- 2373 (2) on receipt of a transfer duly executed by the seller and of the relative certificates, pay the agreed price;

- 2374 (3) procure the registration of the transfer⁴; and 2375 (4) pay and indemnify the seller against all liability for calls made subsequently to the contract of sale⁵.

In the absence of any stipulation in the contract to the contrary, a purchaser of shares is entitled to all dividends on them declared after the date of the contract⁶ but not to dividends declared before the date of the contract the payment of which is postponed⁷.

A contract for the sale of shares may be enforced by a claim for specific performance⁸.

Where a company acting on a forged transfer alters its register of shareholders by striking out the name of the true owner and inserting that of the transferee, the true owner is in general entitled to obtain rectification of the register⁹. Statutory provision is made by which a company may form a compensation fund in respect of losses arising from forged transfers¹⁰.

1716. How shares are transferred.

The statutory provisions¹ relating to the transfer and transmission of shares govern all cases in which the property in shares or stock passes from the proprietor to another person². They are not restricted to transfers by actual sale and purchase for money, and apply to a transfer for a nominal consideration by way of voluntary settlement³.

Subject to the regulations in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845⁴ or in the special Act⁵, every shareholder⁶ may sell and transfer all or any of his shares or stock⁷. Every transfer must be by duly stamped deed in which the consideration must be truly stated; the deed may be according to the statutory form or to the like effect⁸. A deed executed by the transferor and duly registered is essential to pass the legal title⁹. The company¹⁰ is not bound to register a deed differing materially from the statutory form¹¹, which requires execution by the transferee as well as by the transferor¹².

When duly executed, the transfer deed must be delivered to the secretary¹³, and must be kept by him¹⁴. This delivery is essential to the legal efficacy of a transfer¹⁵.

1717. Registration of transfers.

The secretary¹ must enter a memorial of the transfer in a book called the 'register of transfers', indorsing the entry on the transfer deed and, on demand, delivering a new certificate to the purchaser². For every entry, indorsement and certificate, the company³ may demand any sum not exceeding the prescribed⁴ amount or, if no amount is prescribed, a sum not exceeding 12 pence⁵. On the request of the purchaser of any share, an indorsement of the transfer must be made on the certificate⁶ instead of a new certificate being granted, and this indorsement, signed by the secretary, is considered in every respect the same as a new certificate⁷. Until the transfer has been delivered to the secretary, the seller of the share continues liable to the company for any calls that may be made upon the share, and the purchaser is not entitled to receive any share of the profits of the undertaking or to vote in respect of the share⁸.

Where a valid and duly executed deed of transfer of shares has been left with the secretary for registration, mere neglect on the company's part to register the transfer does not affect the transferee's right to be treated as the legal owner of the shares⁹. Registration, unless preceded by a valid transfer, does not, however, give the transferee a good title¹⁰. In the absence of a power provided for in the articles of association to reject a transferee, a company cannot refuse to register a real and absolute transfer merely because it is made to a person without means with the object of escaping from liability to calls¹¹.

Registration of a transfer may be enforced by mandatory order¹².

1718. Transfer when calls unpaid.

A shareholder¹ is not entitled to transfer any share after a call has been made² until he has paid the call or until he has paid all calls for the time being due on every share held by him³. Neglect to do so, if waived, as it may be, by the company, does not make the transfer void; and, if directors consent to and register a transfer of shares on which there is a call in arrear, the property in the shares passes, and the transferor ceases to be a shareholder in respect of them, though he may remain liable to the company for the amount of the call⁴. Where a shareholder executes a transfer after the directors have passed a resolution to make a call but before he has received notice of it, the company is not bound to register the transfer and a mandatory order to compel registration will be refused⁵. The company's right in such a case to compel the transferor to pay a call does not, however, affect any right which he in his turn may have against the transferee under the contract between them⁶.

The company cannot refuse to register a transfer of fully paid shares or stock on the ground that the transferor holds other shares on which a call is in arrear⁷.

If the interest in any share becomes transmitted in consequence of the death, bankruptcy or insolvency¹ of any holder, or by any lawful means² other than by a transfer under the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 or the special Act³, the transmission must be authenticated by a declaration in writing⁴ or in such other manner as the directors⁵ require⁶. The declaration must state the manner in which and the person to whom the share has been so transmitted, and must be made and signed by some credible person before a justice or a person authorised to administer oaths⁷. It must be left with the secretary⁸, who must thereupon enter the name of the person entitled under the transmission in the register of shareholders⁹. For every entry, the company¹⁰ may demand a sum not exceeding the prescribed¹¹ amount and, where no amount is prescribed, a sum not exceeding 25 pence; until the transmission has been so authenticated, no person claiming by virtue of it is entitled to receive any share of the profits of the undertaking, or to vote as a shareholder in respect of any such share¹².

If the transmission has taken place by virtue of any testamentary instrument or by intestacy¹³, the probate or letters of administration, or an official extract, together with the declaration, must be produced to the secretary, who must then enter the declaration in the register of transfers¹⁴.

The personal representative of a deceased shareholder may, however, leave the shares standing in the deceased's name, in which case he cannot transfer or vote in respect of them, or receive dividends on them and, though he may be liable for calls, will be so only in his representative capacity. If he wishes to deal with the shares or to vote or receive dividends in respect of them, he may procure himself to be registered as a shareholder in the manner described above, in which case he will become a shareholder in the company, with and subject to the ordinary rights and liabilities of a shareholder¹⁵. If two or more personal representatives are so registered as joint holders, a transfer by one only is invalid¹⁶.

E. FORFEITURE, CANCELLATION AND SURRENDER OF SHARES

1721. When shares may be forfeited.

If a shareholder¹ fails to pay any call payable by him, together with interest, if any², then, at any time after the expiration of two months³ from the day appointed for payment, the directors⁴ may declare forfeited the share in respect of which the call was payable, whether the company⁵ has sued for the amount of the call or not⁶.

The remedy of forfeiture is additional to the power to make a claim⁷, and is a further security for unpaid calls, in the nature of a mortgage or pledge. Hence, until the company has finally disposed of the shares and the debts and the costs have been satisfied, it may go on with its claim for calls in arrear⁸. When it has sold the forfeited shares and converted them into money, the defendant is entitled to credit to the extent of the net proceeds of the sale. If the forfeited shares are cancelled and converted into other shares, he is entitled to the benefit of the value of the new shares, in satisfaction wholly or pro tanto of his liability⁹.

1722. Notice of intention to forfeit shares.

Before declaring any share forfeited, the directors¹ must cause notice of their intention to be left at or transmitted by post to the usual or last place of abode of the person appearing by the register of shareholders² to be the proprietor of the share³. If the shareholder is abroad, or if his usual or last place of abode is not known to the directors, by reason of its being imperfectly described in the shareholders' address book⁴ or otherwise, or if the interest in the share is known by the directors to have become transmitted otherwise than by transfer⁵, but a declaration of the transmission has not been registered, and so the address of the parties to whom the share may have been transmitted, or may for the time being belong, is not known to the directors, they must give public notice of their intention in the London Gazette, if the company's⁶ principal place of business is situated in England, and also in some newspapers⁷. These notices must be given 21 days at least before the directors make a declaration of forfeiture⁸.

1723. Confirmation of declaration of forfeiture.

The declaration of forfeiture does not take effect so as to authorise the sale or other disposition of any share until it has been confirmed at a general meeting¹ of the company² to be held after the expiration of two months at least from the day on which the notice of intention to make the declaration has been given³. At that meeting the company may confirm the forfeiture, and by an order at that meeting or at any subsequent general meeting may direct the forfeited share to be sold or otherwise disposed of⁴.

After confirmation¹, the directors² of the company³ may sell the forfeited share⁴ either by public auction or by private contract and, if there is more than one forfeited share, then either separately or together⁵. Any shareholder⁶ may purchase any share so sold⁷.

The company must not sell or transfer more of a defaulter's shares than will be sufficient, as nearly as can be ascertained at the time of the sale, to pay the arrears then due from him on account of any calls, together with interest and the expenses attending the sale and declaration of forfeiture⁸. If the money produced by the sale of any forfeited shares is more than sufficient, the surplus must, on demand, be paid to the defaulter⁹. A declaration in writing by some credible person not interested in the matter, made before any justice or a person authorised to administer oaths, that the call in respect of a share was made, that due notice was given, that default was made in payment of the call, and that the forfeiture of the share was declared and confirmed in the proper manner¹, is sufficient evidence of the facts stated in it².

This declaration, and the receipt of the treasurer of the company³ for the price of the share, constitute a good title to the share, and a certificate of proprietorship must be delivered to the purchaser⁴. He is then deemed the holder of the share and discharged from all calls due prior to the purchase⁵. He is not bound to see to the application of the purchase money, nor is his title to the share affected by any irregularity in the proceeding in reference to the sale⁶.

1727. Cancellation of forfeited shares.

Where any share of the capital of a company¹ whose special Act² incorporates the statutory provisions as to cancellation³ is declared forfeited⁴, and the forfeiture is confirmed by a meeting, and notice of the forfeiture has been given, then, if the directors⁵ are unable to sell the share for a sum equal to the arrears of calls, interest and expenses, the company may, at any general meeting⁶ held not less than two months after the notice is given, in case payment of the arrears of calls, interest and expenses is not made by the registered holder of the share before the meeting is held, resolve that the share be cancelled instead of being sold, and the share is then cancelled accordingly⁷. If payment is made before the meeting is held, the share reverts to the shareholder⁸ and must be re-entered in the company's register⁹.

A declaration in writing made by some credible person before a justice stating that a sum of money sufficient to pay the arrears of calls, interest and expenses due in respect of the share could not, at the time of the cancellation of the share, be obtained for the same upon the stock exchange prescribed¹⁰ in the special Act, or if no stock exchange is prescribed, the Stock Exchange¹¹, is sufficient evidence of the fact so declared¹².

(iii) Stock and Stockholders

1732. Issue of stock and conversion of shares.

The special Act¹ may authorise the company² to issue stock instead of shares, and the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 provides for the conversion of fully paid shares into stock. Under that Act, with the consent of three-fifths of the votes of the shareholders³ present in person or by proxy at any general meeting⁴, when due notice for that purpose has been given, the company may from time to time convert or consolidate all or any part of the shares then existing in the capital and in respect of which the whole money subscribed has been paid up, into a general capital stock to be divided amongst the shareholders according to their respective interests in it⁵.

After the conversion, all the provisions of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 or the special Act which require or imply that the capital must be divided into shares of any fixed amount and distinguished by numbers cease to have effect as to so much of the capital as is converted into stock⁶. The stock is transferable in the same manner and subject to the same regulations and provisions as the original shares⁷.

The company must keep a register of transfers⁸, and for every entry may demand any sum not exceeding the amount prescribed⁹ in the special Act or, if no amount is prescribed, a sum not exceeding 12 pence¹⁰.

1736. Power to borrow on mortgage or bond.

If so authorised by its special Act¹, the company² may, subject to the restrictions contained in that Act, borrow on mortgage or bond such sums of money as are from time to time authorised by a general meeting³, not exceeding in the whole the sum prescribed⁴; and, for securing the repayment of the money so borrowed, with interest, the company may mortgage the undertaking and the future calls on the shareholders⁵ or give bonds⁶. The giving of a power to borrow on mortgage or bond, without more, impliedly prohibits any other mode of borrowing, for example on Lloyd's bonds⁷ or by overdrawing a bank account⁸.

Mortgages and bonds under the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 may validly be issued at a discount⁹. They are not bills of sale¹⁰ within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Acts 1878 and 1882¹¹.

1 The power to borrow money is not conferred on a company by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, but the Act nevertheless regulates the exercise of any such power that might be conferred by the special Act. If, after having borrowed any part of the money authorised by its special Act¹ to be borrowed on mortgage or bond, the company² pays it off, it may again borrow the amount paid off, and so from time to time³. This power of reborrowing may not be exercised without the authority of a general meeting⁴ of the company unless the money is reborrowed in order to pay off any existing mortgage or bond⁵. A mortgage or bond issued for cash by way of reborrowing to a lender who has no notice of any irregularity may, however, be valid even though the reborrowing was not authorised by a general meeting⁶.

If a company's goods are sold under a judgment obtained by a mortgagee or a bondholder who obtains payment of his debt out of the proceeds of sale, the transaction is equivalent to payment off by the company⁷.

1738. Meaning of 'undertaking'.

In the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, the 'undertaking' means the undertaking or works of whatever nature which by the special Act¹ is or are authorised to be executed².

Although various ingredients go to make up an undertaking, the term describes not the ingredients but the complete work³ from which the earnings arise. So far as mortgage contracts are concerned, the undertaking is made over as a thing complete or to be completed, as a going concern, with internal and parliamentary powers of management not to be interfered with; and under a contract pledging it as security the undertaking cannot be destroyed, broken up or annihilated⁴. The undertaking's tolls and other earnings are available to satisfy the mortgage, but the mortgagees cannot, by seizing the company's assets or calling on the court to seize them, either prevent its completion or reduce it into its original elements when it has been completed⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'special Act' see PARA 1670 note 2.

2 Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 2. As to the application of the Companies Clauses Acts see PARA 1668 note 2.

In the case of a railway company, the undertaking included the land actually used for the railway, with the stations and other buildings and the rails, and, under a mortgage in the statutory form, the mortgagee had a title to them paramount to that of a judgment creditor of the company who had issued an elegit. The court would interfere by injunction, at the instance of a mortgagee, to restrain a subsequent judgment creditor from impairing the subject matter of the mortgage by elegit proceedings: Legg v Mathieson (1860) 2 Giff 71 at 78-79; Gardiner v London, Chatham and Dover Rly Co, Drawbridge v Same, ex p Grissell (1866) 15 LT 494; Wildy v Mid-Hants Rly Co (1868) 18 LT 73 (where the money secured by the mortgage had not become due at the date when the proceedings were commenced but the security was in jeopardy).

3 A company with powers to mortgage its undertaking may mortgage surplus land not required for the purposes of the undertaking (Stagg v Upper Medway Navigation Co [1903] 1 Ch 169, CA), or chattels, such as barges, which it has a statutory power to own and use (Reeve v Upper Medway Navigation Co (1905) 21 TLR 400).

1739. Evidence of authority to borrow.

Where the special Act¹ restricts the company² from borrowing any money on mortgage or bond until a definite portion of its capital has been subscribed or paid up, or where by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 or the special Act the authority of a general meeting³ is required for such borrowing, the certificate of a justice that that definite portion of the capital has been subscribed or paid up, and a copy of the order of a general meeting authorising the borrowing, certified by a director⁴ or by the secretary⁵, are sufficient evidence of the fact of the capital having been subscribed or paid up, and of the order having been made⁶. Upon production to a justice of the company's books and of such other evidence as he thinks sufficient, he must grant the certificate⁷. A copy of an order of a general meeting is not conclusive evidence as between the directors and the company, if no such order has in fact been made, but it is evidence on which a lender may reasonably act⁸.

Every mortgage or bond securing money borrowed by the company¹ must be by deed under its common seal², duly stamped and truly stating the consideration, and it may be either according to the statutory form or to the like effect³. Where the seal has been affixed without due authority, the company is not bound by the instrument⁴, except as against a lender who takes the security without notice, actual or imputed, of the irregularity⁵. The mortgage or bond is not invalid if the true consideration is not disclosed in express terms in it⁶. The consideration is required to be stated for the purpose of enabling the document to be properly stamped⁷.

1741. Effect of mortgages in statutory form.

Although the statutory form of mortgage purports to assign the whole undertaking to each mortgagee as if he were the sole and first incumbrancer, the respective mortgagees are entitled only to the property comprised in the mortgages in proportion to the sums advanced by them¹. The sums advanced must be repaid with interest, without any preference by reason of priority of the date of any mortgage or of the meeting at which it was authorised². Whatever the property charged by the mortgage may be, every mortgagee must bring that property into hotchpot with all the other mortgagees. All the mortgage claims and all the subject matters of the mortgages are consolidated, the whole charge being made upon the whole subject matter, and the whole proceeds being distributed *pari passu*³. The mortgagees are entitled rateably to the tolls, sums and premises comprised in their mortgages, and, further, to be repaid their advances, with interest generally, and not merely out of tolls and the like⁴; but they are not entitled to any specific lien on any of the company's property or effects⁵.

A mortgage in the statutory form does not entitle the mortgagee to bring a claim to recover the company's land⁶, or for sale or foreclosure of it⁷. Where, however, a railway has been sold under a special Act and the proceeds paid into court, a holder of a mortgage in the statutory form is entitled to payment out of the fund in court in priority to a subsequent judgment creditor⁸.

Even though it comprises future calls on shareholders¹, no mortgage, unless it expressly so provides, precludes the company² from receiving any calls to be made by it and applying them to the purposes of the company³. A mortgagee of unpaid capital, it seems, prevails against a judgment creditor of the company, who is entitled to proceed by way, in effect, of execution against a shareholder whose shares are not fully paid up, and against a liquidator making calls in the winding up of the company⁴.

According to the amount of the money secured, the obligees in bonds given by the company¹ are proportionally entitled to be paid, out of its tolls or other property, the sums secured, without any preference one above another by reason of priority of date of any bond or of the meeting at which it was authorised².

Bondholders are not assignees of the undertaking or tolls³; nor are they entitled to any specific equitable lien on any of the company's property or effects⁴. Their only remedy appears to be the obtaining of a judgment⁵ and, as against them, any judgment creditor of the company may seize its goods and chattels under a writ of fieri facias⁶.

If given by a mortgagee or bond creditor, the notice must be delivered to the secretary⁴ or left at the company's principal office⁵. In default of payment, a right of action arises on the mortgage or bond¹. property of the company not included in the interim order². With the permission of the court, the claimant may then issue execution³, and, if he fails to obtain satisfaction of his debt, he may obtain an order on petition for the company to be wound up⁴ as an unregistered company⁵. If, by means of an execution, an individual holder has obtained satisfaction of his debt, he cannot afterwards be made to refund, for the benefit of other holders, any part of what he has received⁶.

1748. Interest on mortgages and bonds.

The interest on money borrowed upon a mortgage or bond must be paid at the periods appointed in it or, if no period is appointed, half-yearly, and in preference to any dividends payable to the company's shareholders¹. Where a company gives a bond for a principal sum to be paid on a specified day with interest in the meantime, and does not pay or offer to pay the principal at the date fixed, the bondholder is entitled to interest from the date fixed for payment until actual payment of the principal sum². If a bondholder sues the company on its covenant to pay and recovers judgment, the original debt merges in the judgment debt, which carries interest at the appropriate statutory rate³ unless the parties have agreed that any judgment should carry a different rate of interest⁴.

Where the company has given notice of its intention to pay off a mortgage or bond at a time when it may lawfully be paid off, all further interest ceases to be payable on the mortgage or bond at the expiration of the notice unless, on demand of payment made pursuant to the notice or at any time afterwards, the company fails to pay the principal and interest due at the expiration of the notice⁵.

1749. Appointment of receiver by justices.

Where the mortgagees of a company¹ are empowered by the special Act² to enforce the payment of arrears of interest, or arrears of principal and interest, due on the mortgages by the appointment of a receiver, a mortgagee may, without prejudice to his right to sue for the sum in the High Court, require the appointment of a receiver by application to justices³:

2376 (1) if the interest accruing upon any mortgage is not paid within 30 days after it has become payable, and after a demand in writing⁴; or

2377 (2) if the principal money owing upon any mortgage is not paid within six months⁵ after it has become payable, and after a demand in writing, provided his debt amounts to the sum prescribed⁶ by the special Act; if it does not, he may combine with other mortgagees entitled to make the application whose debts, together with his debt, amount to the prescribed sum⁷.

The application must be made to two justices who may, on the application, after hearing the parties, by order in writing appoint some person to receive the whole or part of the tolls or sums liable to the payment of the amount due until that amount and all costs, including the charges of receiving the tolls or sums, are fully paid⁸. On the appointment being made, all such tolls and sums must be paid to the person appointed⁹. The money received is so much money received by or to the use of the party to whom the interest, or principal and interest, as the case may be, is then due, and on whose behalf the receiver has been appointed; and, after the interest and costs, or principal, interest and costs, have been so received, the power of the receiver ceases¹⁰.

1750. Appointment of receiver by High Court.

The statutory provisions for the appointment of a receiver¹ do not oust or exclude the ordinary jurisdiction of the High Court to appoint a receiver²; and a mortgagee may either bring a claim to recover his interest and principal or apply for the appointment of a receiver of tolls or sums liable to the payment of such principal and interest³. Where the security is in jeopardy, a receiver may be appointed before the money secured has become payable⁴. As a general rule, mortgagees or bondholders cannot have a manager of the undertaking appointed by the court, nor can they have it sold⁵, though, if such a company is ordered to be wound up, its undertaking may be sold by the liquidator⁶.

A transfer must be produced to the secretary¹ within 30 days after its date if it is executed within the United Kingdom², or otherwise within 30 days after its arrival in the United Kingdom, and he must thereupon enter it in the register of mortgages and bonds³. For such entry, the company⁴ may demand a sum not exceeding the prescribed⁵ sum or, where no sum is prescribed, the sum of 12 pence⁶.

Until registration of the transfer, the company is not in any manner responsible to the transferee in respect of a mortgage, but after such entry the transfer entitles him to the full benefit of the original mortgage or bond, and no party, having made a transfer, can release or discharge the mortgage or bond transferred or any money secured by it⁷.

(ii) Debenture Stock

1753. Power to issue debenture stock.

A company having power to raise money on mortgage or bond by virtue of an Act of Parliament, or authorised by any special Act to create and issue debenture stock¹, may create and issue debenture stock subject to the provisions of the Companies Clauses Act 1863².

In either case, with the sanction of such proportion of the votes of the shareholders and stockholders, entitled to vote in that behalf present personally or by proxy at a meeting of the company specially convened for the purpose, as is prescribed in its special Act and, if no proportion is prescribed, then of three-fifths of such votes, a company may from time to time raise all or any part of the money which for the time being it has raised or is authorised to raise on mortgage or bond, by the creation and issue, at such times, in such amounts and manner, on such terms, subject to such conditions and with such rights and privileges, as it thinks fit, of debenture stock³, instead of and to the same amount as the whole or any part of the money which may for the time being be owing by the company on mortgage or bond, or which it may from time to time have power to raise on mortgage or bond⁴. To the stock so created it may attach such fixed and perpetual preferential interest, payable half-yearly or otherwise, and commencing at once or at any future time or times, when and as the debenture stock is issued, or otherwise, as it thinks fit⁵.

The creation of the stock, as distinguished from its issue, is effected by the resolution authorising the issue, fixing the rate of interest and prescribing the other conditions on which the stock is to be held⁶. In certain cases, debenture stock may be created or issued so as to be redeemable⁷.

1 Wherever 'debenture stock' is mentioned in the Companies Clauses Act 1863 Pt III (ss 22-35), the provisions of Pt III are deemed to apply to mortgage preference stock, and to funded debt, as the case may require, in all respects as if mortgage preference stock or funded debt were debenture stock: s 35. As to the application of the Companies Clauses Acts see PARA 1668 note 2.

2 The provisions of the Companies Clauses Act 1863 Pt III are deemed to be incorporated with the company's special Act: Companies Clauses Act 1869 s 3. As to the application of Pt III to every company having power to raise money on mortgage or bond by virtue of any Act of Parliament see PARA 1668.

The provisions of Pt III were also applied with modifications to the power of railway companies to create and issue debenture stock by the Railway Companies Act 1867 s 24 (repealed): see Re Mersey Rly Co [1895] 2 Ch 287.

No such corresponding limitations on the creation and issue of debentures and debenture stock are contained in the Companies Act 2006.

4 Companies Clauses Act 1863 s 22 (amended by the Companies Clauses Act 1869 s 1).

5 Companies Clauses Act 1863 s 22. Since the passing of the Companies Clauses Act 1869 a company entitled to issue debenture stock may attach to it any rate of interest which the exigencies of its financial position at the time of the creation of the stock may require; and any special Act of a company passed before the passing of the Companies Clauses Act 1869 prescribing any rate, is to be read as if no rate had been prescribed in it: see s 1. Debenture stock, authorised but not issued before the Companies Clauses Act 1869, could not be issued on any terms other than those on which it might have been issued before that Act without further authority of the company: see s 2.

1754. Priority of charge created by debenture stock.

A company's debenture stock¹, with the interest on it, ranks prior to all its shares or stock, and is transmissible and transferable in the same manner and according to the same regulations and provisions as its other stock², and in all other respects has the incidents of personal estate³.

The issue of debenture stock does not in any way affect any mortgage or bond at any time legally granted by the company before the creation of such stock, or any power of the company to raise money on mortgage or bond, except in so far as its borrowing powers are extinguished by such issue⁴, the holders of all such mortgages and bonds being entitled to the same priorities, rights and privileges in all respects as they would have been entitled to if the special Act authorising the issue of debenture stock had not been passed⁵, with the result that the priority of mortgages and bonds granted before the creation of the debenture stock is saved, as also are the company's existing borrowing powers⁶.

The interest on debenture stock has priority of payment over all dividends or interest on any shares or stock of the company, whether ordinary, preference or guaranteed, and ranks next to the interest payable on its mortgages or bonds for the time being legally granted before the creation of the debenture stock; but the holders of debenture stock created and issued under the same special Act are not, as among themselves, entitled to any preference or priority⁷.

1 Debenture stock is not a charge in the ordinary sense of the word; owing to its nature it confers only a limited right to enforce the interest payable on it: see PARA 1756. The register must be accessible for inspection at all reasonable times to every mortgagee, bondholder, debenture stockholder, shareholder and stockholder of the company, without payment³; and every such person is entitled to see the whole register and make such copies as he thinks fit, for this provision is aimed (inter alia) at enabling any such person to communicate with the whole body of people interested on some matter which concerns them all⁴.

1756. Nature of security.

The holder of debenture stock is not a creditor of a company except as to the annual interest; he has only a right to a perpetual annuity, payable out of the concern. Unless expressly issued as redeemable in the cases where that is permissible¹, the capital cannot be called in or paid off. There is a charge², but no conveyance or assignment to the stockholder, or to any trustee for him; but there is an entry in the books of the concern that there is so much debenture stock on which there is so much to be paid half-yearly to each holder.

The shareholder has a security of a special and limited kind on the company's assets and, if the interest on the stock is in arrear, with a right to obtain or join with other holders in obtaining the appointment of a receiver, but with no right to take possession of a single item of the company's property in specie³. He is not a member of the company, and is not entitled to vote or be present at any of its meetings⁴, although he has the rights and powers of a mortgagee of the undertaking, other than the right to require repayment of the principal money paid up on the stock⁵.

The money raised by debenture stock must be applied exclusively either in paying off money due by the company on mortgage or bond, or for the purposes to which the money would be applicable if it were raised on mortgage or bond instead of on debenture stock¹.

Separate and distinct accounts must be kept by the company showing how much money has been received on account of debenture stock, and how much money, borrowed or owing on mortgage or bond or which it has power so to borrow, has been paid off by debenture stock, or raised by it instead of being so borrowed².

If the interest on debenture stock is not paid within 30 days after it is payable, any one or more of the stockholders holding, individually or collectively, the nominal amount prescribed in the special Act and, if no sum is prescribed, a sum equal to one-tenth of the aggregate amount which the company is for the time being authorised to raise by mortgage, by bond and by debenture stock, or the sum of £10,000, whichever of the two last-mentioned sums is the smaller sum, may, without prejudice to the right to sue in any court of competent jurisdiction for the interest in arrear, require the appointment of a receiver¹.

The application for a receiver must be made to two justices of the peace, who may by order in writing appoint some person to receive the whole or part of the tolls or sums liable to the payment of the interest until all the arrears of interest then due on the debenture stock, with all costs, including the charges of receiving the tolls or sums, are fully paid². On the appointment being made, all such tolls or sums must be paid to and received by the person appointed³. All money so received is deemed so much money received to the use of the several persons interested in the same, according to their several priorities; and the receiver must distribute it rateably, and without priority, among all the proprietors of debenture stock to whom interest is in arrear, after satisfying the interest on the company's mortgages and bonds⁴. When the full amount of interest and costs has been so received, the receiver's power ceases, and he is bound to account to the company, and to pay it any balance in his hands⁵.

If the interest on debenture stock is in arrear for 30 days after any of the days on which the same is payable, the stockholder for the time being may, without prejudice to his power to apply for the appointment of a receiver, recover the arrears, with costs, by a claim against the company in any court of competent jurisdiction⁶.

(7) PROSPECTUS AND OFFER FOR SALE

1760. Statutory provisions.

There are no special provisions in the Companies Clauses Acts concerning prospectuses and offer documents of companies regulated by those Acts¹. However, the provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 apply².

1761. Misrepresentation.

The common law remedy by a claim for damages for deceit¹, the equitable remedy by a claim for rescission² of a contract to take shares or debentures on the ground of misrepresentation, and the statutory provision for damages for innocent misrepresentation³, apply to companies regulated by the Companies Clauses Acts⁴ equally with companies subject to the provisions of the Companies Acts.

(8) REGULATION AND MANAGEMENT

(i) In general

1762. How company's powers are exercised.

The directors¹ are invested with the management and superintendence of the affairs of the company², and they may lawfully exercise all its powers, except as to such matters as are directed by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 or the special Act³ to be transacted by a general meeting⁴. The exercise of these powers is subject to the provisions of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 and the special Act, and also to the control and regulation of any general meeting specially convened for the purpose, but not so as to render invalid any act done by the directors prior to any resolution passed by such a general meeting⁵.

The principles applicable to litigation in the company's name or by shareholders suing on behalf of their class, and those relating to interference of the court in the company's internal management, are in substance the same as those which apply to companies subject to the Companies Act 2006⁶.

4 As to the general meeting see the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 ss 66-80; and PARAS 1793-1801. The powers specified by s 91 (see PARA 1792) to be exercised only at a general meeting include the power to issue new ordinary or preference shares or stock (see PARAS 1687-1688), to cancel forfeited shares (see PARA 1729), and to borrow on mortgage or bond (see PARAS 1736-1737) or by issuing debenture stock (see PARA 1753). (ii) Directors

1766. Appointment and number of directors.

The number of directors¹ is the number prescribed² in the special Act³, which usually also appoints the first directors⁴. If that Act does not contain negative words, such as 'not less than' a specified number, a provision as to the number of directors may be directory only, as when it is provided elsewhere in that Act that directors are not bound to fill a vacancy on the board⁵.

Where the company⁶ is authorised by its special Act to increase or reduce the number of directors, it may from time to time, in general meeting⁷, after due notice for that purpose, increase or reduce their number within the prescribed limits, if any, and determine the order of rotation in which they are to go out of office, and what number is to be a quorum at their meetings⁸.

4 The special Act appointing the first directors may oblige them to continue in office until the first ordinary meeting held after the passing of the Act: Re South London Fish Market Co (1888) 39 ChD 324, CA. Generally it should be noted that guidance may be obtained from decisions with regard to directors of companies registered under the Companies Act 2006 or the Acts which it replaces: see further PARA 478 et seq.

1767. Tenure of office.

Unless the special Act¹ provides otherwise, the directors² appointed by it hold office until the first ordinary meeting³ to be held in the year next after that in which the special Act was passed⁴. At this meeting the shareholders⁵ present, personally or by proxy, may either re-elect the directors appointed by the special Act, or any number of them, or may elect a new body of directors, or directors to supply the places of those not re-elected⁶. At the first ordinary meeting to be held every year afterwards, directors to replace those then retiring from office in accordance with the statutory provisions⁷ must be elected by the shareholders present, personally or by proxy⁸. Unless they are removed or disqualified or resign, the persons elected at any such meeting continue to be directors until others are elected in their stead⁹. The directors cannot legally agree to an arrangement with contractors or others which would have the effect of depriving the shareholders of their power of appointing their own directors¹⁰.

1768. Quorum to elect directors.

If, at any meeting at which an election of directors¹ ought to take place², the prescribed³ quorum⁴ is not present within one hour from the time appointed for the meeting, no election of directors can be made, but the meeting stands adjourned to the following day at the same time and place⁵. If the prescribed quorum is not present within one hour from the time appointed for the adjourned meeting, the existing directors continue to act, and retain their powers until new directors are appointed at the first ordinary meeting of the following year⁶.

1769. Casual vacancy in office of director.

If a director¹ dies or resigns or becomes disqualified or incompetent to act as such, or ceases to be a director by any other cause than that of going out of office by rotation², the remaining directors³, if they think proper to do so, may elect in his place some other shareholder⁴, duly qualified, to be a director⁵. 1770. Qualification to be director.

No person is capable of being a director¹ unless he is a shareholder² and possesses the prescribed number, if any, of shares³; and a person holding an office or place of trust or profit under the company⁴, or interested in any contract with the company, cannot be a director⁵. A director must not accept any other office or place of trust or profit under the company, or be interested in any contract with it, during the time he is a director⁶. If the special Act⁷ prescribes a certain share qualification for the directors and names a person as one of the first directors, he is in effect constituted by the Act a shareholder to the extent of the prescribed share qualification; and if, in neglect of his duty, he fails to take up that number of shares and to procure himself to be registered in respect of them, he is liable in respect of that number of shares⁸.

2 As to the meaning of 'shareholder' see PARAS 1670, 1703 note 7.

3 As to the meaning of 'prescribed' see PARA 1670 note 4. The holding of the prescribed number of shares is a condition precedent to qualify for election as a director: Channel Collieries Trust Ltd v Dover, St Margaret's and Martin Mill Light Rly Co [1914] 2 Ch 506, CA.

4 As to the meaning of 'company' see PARA 1670.

Notwithstanding anything in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, as applied to any company, but subject to any provision of a memorandum and articles having effect by virtue of an order under the Statutory Water Companies Act 1991 s 12 (adoption of articles of association: see WATER AND WATERWAYS vol 100 (2009) PARA 135) and to any modification of any such memorandum and articles, the provisions of s 10 have effect in relation to any statutory water company: see s 10; and WATER AND WATERWAYS vol 100 (2009) PARA 134.

1771. Consequences of director's interest in company's contract.

If a director¹ at any time after his election accepts or continues to hold any other office or place of trust or profit under the company², or is either directly or indirectly concerned in any contract with it or participates in any manner in the profits of any work to be done for it, his office of director becomes vacant, and thenceforth he must cease from voting or acting as such³. A member of any incorporated joint stock company⁴ is not, however, disqualified or prevented from acting as a director of a company subject to the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 by reason of any contract entered into between the two companies, although he must not vote on any question as to any contract with the joint stock company⁵. A director cannot validly deal, on behalf of the company, with himself or with a firm in which he is a partner; as a fiduciary agent of the company, he cannot enter into engagements in which his personal interest may possibly conflict with his duty to the company⁶. The disqualification applies only to contracts with the company in the execution of its enterprise; hence a director may be a partner in a banking company which is the company's bank⁷.

The consequences of a director being interested in a contract with his company are:

- 2378 (1) the statutory consequence that he ceases to hold office⁸; and
- 2379 (2) the legal consequence that the contract is voidable at the instance of the company⁹.

A contract between two companies sanctioned by both in general meeting is not, however, to be treated as invalid and ultra vires one of the companies merely because the directors of that company are so interested in the contract¹⁰.

1772. Director ceasing to hold shares.

The office of a director¹ becomes vacant if at any time he ceases to be a holder of the prescribed number of shares² in the company³. If he executes an equitable mortgage of his qualifying shares and the mortgagee gives notice of the mortgage to the company, the mortgagor's position as a director is at once determined⁴. Where he creates, in favour of his creditor, a mere equitable lien on his qualifying shares, his ownership of the shares is probably not so affected by notice to the company's secretary not to register any transfer of them without the creditor's consent as to deprive him of his office⁵.

1774. Appointment of committees.

The directors¹ may appoint one or more committees, consisting of such number of directors as they think fit, within the limits, if any, prescribed² in the special Act³, and they may grant to such committees power to do any acts relating to the affairs of the company⁴ which the directors could lawfully do, and which they from time to time think proper to entrust to them⁵.

A committee may meet from time to time and adjourn from place to place, as it thinks proper, for carrying into effect the purposes of its appointment⁶. No committee can exercise the powers entrusted to it except at a meeting at which there is present the prescribed quorum or, if no quorum is prescribed, a quorum to be fixed for that purpose by the general body of directors⁷. At all committee meetings one of the members present must be appointed chairman⁸. All questions at any committee meeting must be determined by a majority of votes of the members present and in case of an equal division of votes the chairman has a casting vote in addition to his vote as a committee member⁹.

The power which may be granted to a committee¹ to make contracts, as well as the power of the directors² to make contracts³, on behalf of the company⁴, is exercisable as follows:

- 2380 (1) any contract which, if made between private persons, would by law be required to be in writing and under seal may be made by the committee or the directors on behalf of the company in writing, and under the company's common seal, and may be varied or discharged in the same manner⁵;
- 2381 (2) any contract which, if made between private persons, would by law be required to be in writing and signed by the parties to be charged may be made by the committee or the directors or any person acting under the company's express or implied authority on behalf of the company in writing, signed by the committee or any two of them, or any two of the directors, or by such authorised person, and may be varied or discharged in the same manner⁶;
- 2382 (3) any contract which, if made between private persons, would by law be valid even though made by parol only, and not reduced into writing, may be made by the committee or the directors or any person acting under the company's express or implied authority on behalf of the company by parol only, without writing, and may be varied or discharged in the same manner⁷.

Any contract so made is effectual in law⁸ and binds the company and its successors, and all other parties to it and their personal representatives⁹; and on any default in the execution of any such contract, either by the company or by any other party to it, such claims may be brought, either by or against the company, as might be brought had the same contract been made between private persons only¹⁰.

Contracts binding on the company may be made in other ways if there is power so to make them¹¹. Thus a company established for the purpose of trading may, independently of the statutory provision, validly make all contracts which are of ordinary occurrence in its trade and all contracts, not expressly regulated by any statute, which relate to objects or purposes for which it was incorporated, without the formality of a seal¹².

A company's rights and obligations under its contracts, when once validly made, are in all respects the same as those of individuals¹³.

1776. Contracts under seal.

In order to bind a company by a bond, the seal must be affixed by or by the authority of the directors or a committee of the directors, acting together at a properly constituted meeting¹.

Where directors have only the power of affixing the company's seal under certain prescribed rules, a person dealing with them is taken to have notice of those rules; and, if there is something which may only be done by them under limited powers, the person so dealing must at his peril see that those powers are not being exceeded². If, however, they have power to bind the company, but certain preliminaries are required to be gone through on the part of the company before their power may be duly exercised, the person so dealing is not bound to see that all those preliminaries have been observed, but is entitled to presume that the directors are acting regularly³.

1777. Other circumstances in which contracts bind the company.

A company may make a parole contract for the temporary occupation of land required for carrying out its undertaking and may be sued on such a contract in respect of the occupation; and, even though no evidence other than the occupation of the land by the company is adduced, the court will, in the absence of evidence to negative a parole contract, assume that it had been made¹. The directors may ratify a written contract made by the company's manager without authority, and, if they do so, it becomes in effect the company's contract². It has, however, been held that, in the absence of an order of the directors or of a duly authorised committee or of something from which authority in the company's engineer to make a parole contract may be inferred, the mere fact of work having been done, as for example by a contractor on the order of the company's engineer, is not enough to render the company liable³.

In some cases a corporation has not been allowed to take the benefit of a misapprehension on the faith of which some person has expended money on the corporation's land, but a contract in favour of such persons has been implied: Crampton v Varna Rly Co (1872) 7 Ch App 562 at 568; Laird v Birkenhead Rly Co (1859) John 500 at 510.

1778. Directors' liability.

No director¹, by being party to or executing as director any contract or instrument on behalf of the company², or lawfully executing any of the powers given to the directors, incurs any personal liability³. The directors are entitled to be indemnified out of the company's capital for all payments made or liability, losses, costs and damages incurred in the due execution of their powers, and for the purposes of such indemnity may apply the company's funds and, if necessary, make calls on unpaid capital⁴.

A director indorsing a certificate for debenture stock⁵ with a warranty, contrary to the fact, that the amount of stock represented by the certificate is within the amount which the company has power to issue, is personally liable for breach of warranty, if money is lent to the company on the faith of the warranty⁶.

Promoters of a company who afterwards become its first directors and who obtain an advance of money on their personal credit will not escape from their personal liability to the lender merely by showing that the money was applied in payment of expenses incidental to the passing of the special Act⁷, and that the company has purported to ratify their act in obtaining the advances⁸.

The directors¹ must hold meetings at such times as they appoint for the purpose, and may meet and adjourn from time to time and from place to place as they think proper². Any two of them may at any time require the secretary³ to call a meeting of the directors⁴. In order to constitute a meeting of directors there must be present at least the quorum prescribed⁵ in the special Act⁶ or, where no quorum is prescribed, one-third of the directors⁷.

All questions at any such meeting must be determined by the majority of votes of the directors present; and, in case of an equal division of votes, the chairman⁸ has a casting vote in addition to his vote as a director⁹. In order to do effectually such an act as authorising the affixing of the company's seal¹⁰ to a bond, the directors, or at least a quorum of them, must act jointly and as a board at a meeting¹¹.

1780. Chairman of directors.

At the first meeting of directors¹ held after the passing of the special Act², and at the first meeting of the directors held after each annual appointment of directors³, the directors must choose one of themselves to act as chairman for the following year, and may also, if they think fit, choose another director to act as deputy chairman for the same period⁴. If the chairman or deputy chairman dies or resigns, or ceases to be a director or otherwise becomes disqualified to act, the directors must fill the vacancy at the next meeting; every chairman or deputy chairman elected to fill a vacancy continues in office so long only as the person in whose place he may be so elected would have been entitled to continue if the vacancy had not occurred⁵.

If at any meeting neither the chairman nor deputy chairman is present, the directors present must choose one of their number to be chairman of the meeting⁶.

The directors¹ must cause notes, minutes or copies of all appointments made or contracts entered into by the directors, and of the orders and proceedings of all meetings of the company² and of the directors and committees of directors³ to be entered in books which must be kept under the directors' superintendence⁴. Every entry must be signed by the chairman of the meeting⁵, and, if so signed, is to be received as evidence in all courts without proof of the meeting having been duly convened or held, of the persons making or entering the orders or proceedings being shareholders⁶ or directors or members of committee, of the signature of the chairman, or of the fact of his having been chairman, all of which matters are presumed until the contrary is proved⁷. The signature required to authenticate the minutes is that of the director who has presided at the particular meeting, but the signature need not be attached at the time of that meeting; it may be given at a subsequent meeting⁸.

1783. Retirement of directors by rotation.

Subject to the provision under which a company¹ may determine the order of rotation in which directors go out of office², directors³ must retire at the times and in the proportions laid down in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 as follows⁴:

- 2383 (1) in the case of the first elected directors⁵, the number prescribed⁶ in the special Act⁷ and, if no number is prescribed, one-third of the directors, to be determined by ballot among themselves unless they otherwise agree, must go out of office at the end of the first year⁸;
- 2384 (2) at the end of the second year the prescribed number and, if no number is prescribed, one-half of the remaining number of the directors to be determined in like manner, must go out of office⁹; and
- 2385 (3) at the end of the third year the prescribed number and, if no number is prescribed, the remainder of the directors, must go out of office¹⁰.

At the first ordinary meeting in every subsequent year the prescribed number and, if no number is prescribed, one-third of the directors, being those who have been longest in office, must go out of office¹¹.

If the prescribed number of directors is some number not divisible by three, and the number of directors to retire is not prescribed, the directors must in each case determine what number of directors, as nearly one-third as may be, are to go out of office, so that the whole number must go out of office in three years¹².

In each instance the places of the retiring directors must be filled by an equal number of qualified shareholders¹³. A retiring director may be re-elected immediately or at any future time¹⁴.

Except as otherwise provided by the special Act¹ and subject to the power of directors² to fill casual vacancies in the office of director³, the company's powers to choose and remove directors can be exercised only at a general meeting⁴. 1786. Statutory requirements.

Besides the directors¹, the company² is required by statute to appoint a secretary³, auditors⁴, and a book-keeper⁵, and it may have other officers such as treasurer and collector⁶.

Except as otherwise provided by the special Act⁷, the company's powers as to the choice of auditors, and the remuneration of the auditors, treasurer and secretary, can be exercised only at a general meeting of the company⁸. A person employed by the directors as secretary may, however, maintain a claim against the company to recover remuneration for his services even though there has been no determination of a general meeting on the subject, but directors agreeing, without authority, to pay a salary to a secretary may, as between themselves and the general body of shareholders, have been guilty of a breach of trust⁹.

Where the security of a surety is taken, any variation of the agreement to which he has subscribed, which is made without his consent or knowledge, or may prejudice him (North Western Rly Co v Whinray (1854) 10 Exch 77 at 82), or may amount to the substitution of a new agreement for the original agreement, will discharge the surety, even though the original agreement might, notwithstanding that variation, be substantially performed (Bonar v Macdonald (1850) 3 HL Cas 226 at 238-239; Phillips v Foxall (1872) LR 7 QB 666 at 672, 680). Where by statute the nature of a principal's office is so changed that its duties are materially altered so as to affect the surety's risk, the surety is discharged: Pybus v Gibb (1856) 6 E & B 902 at 911. The amalgamation of two companies by statute impliedly or expressly preserving rights against a surety does not so alter the position of an officer of one of the companies who continues to hold that office under the amalgamated companies as to discharge his surety: London, Brighton and South Coast Rly Co v Goodwin (1849) 3 Exch 320 at 332; Eastern Union Rly Co v Cochrane (1853) 9 Exch 197. 1788. Officers' duty to account.

When required by the directors¹, every officer must make out and deliver to them or to any person appointed by them a true and perfect written² account under his hand of all money received by him on behalf of the company³, stating how, to whom and for what purpose that money has been disposed of, together with vouchers and receipts⁴. He must also pay to the directors or to any person appointed by them all money which appears to be owing from him upon the balance of those accounts⁵.

Any officer failing to render that account, to produce and deliver up all the vouchers and receipts in his possession or power, to pay the balance when required, or, for three days after being required, failing to deliver up to the directors or to any person appointed by them all papers and writings, property, effects, matters and things in his possession or power relating to the execution of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, or the special Act⁶, or any Act incorporated with it, or belonging to the company, may be summoned before two or more justices who may determine the matter in a summary way and may adjust and declare the balance owing by him⁷. If it appears, either upon his confession, or upon evidence, or upon inspection of the account, that any of the company's money is in his hands or owing by him to the company, the justices may order him to pay the amount⁸.

1789. Officers' refusal to account.

If an officer refuses to make out his written account, or to produce and deliver to the justices his vouchers and receipts, or to deliver up any property in his possession or power belonging to the company¹, they may commit him to prison until he has delivered up all the vouchers and receipts, if any, in his possession or power, and all property, if any, in his possession or power, belonging to the company². Further, if any director³ or other person acting on behalf of the company makes oath⁴ that he has good reason to believe, upon stated grounds, and does believe, that the officer intends to abscond, the justice before whom the complaint is made, instead of issuing his summons, may issue his warrant to bring the officer before two justices⁵. However, no person executing the warrant may keep the officer in custody longer than 24 hours without bringing him before some justice⁶. The justice before whom the officer may be brought may either discharge him, if he thinks there is no sufficient ground for his detention, or order him to be detained in custody so as to be brought before two justices unless the officer gives satisfactory bail for his appearance before them⁷.

No such proceeding against an officer will deprive the company of any remedy which it might otherwise have against him or his surety⁸.

1790. Solicitor.

A solicitor is not ordinarily, but may be, an officer of a company¹. The mere fact that a solicitor has been employed in bringing out a new company does not entitle him to claim payment from it², but in the case of companies formed under private Acts provision is usually made by the Act incorporating the company for the costs, charges and expenses incident to obtaining the Act and forming the company to be paid out of the company's assets when formed. Such a provision, being intended to benefit the promoters, does not entitle a solicitor employed under a retainer from the promoters to obtain payment of his costs directly from the company³. To enable him to do so, he must establish either that the company has, after its formation, entered into a new contract with himself to pay him⁴ or, perhaps, that he has no claim against the promoters, being in fact a promoter himself and having only the company to look to for payment⁵.

(iv) Byelaws

1791. Power to make byelaws.

The company¹ may from time to time make such byelaws as it thinks fit for the purpose of regulating the conduct of its officers and employees and for providing for the due management of its affairs², and may alter or repeal them and make others³. The byelaws must not be repugnant to the general law, or to the provisions of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, or the special Act⁴. They must be in writing, sealed with the company's common seal⁵, and a copy must be given to each of its officers and employees affected by them⁶.

By its byelaws the company may impose reasonable penalties upon all its officers or employees offending against them as it thinks fit, not exceeding level 1 on the standard scale or not exceeding a lesser amount for any one offence⁷.

The production of a written or printed copy of the byelaws, with the company's common seal affixed, is sufficient evidence of them in all prosecutions under them⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' see PARA 1670.

2 A byelaw to the effect that a company's canal must not be used on Sundays is void, as an attempt to deal with a matter outside the cognisance of the company: Calder and Hebble Navigation Co v Pilling (1845) 14 M & W 76.

1793. Ordinary and extraordinary meetings.

The first general meeting¹ of the shareholders² of the company³ must be held within the time prescribed⁴ by the special Act⁵ or, if no time is so prescribed, within one month of the passing of that Act⁶. Subsequent general meetings must be held at the periods prescribed by that Act or, if no periods are prescribed, in February and August each year or at such other stated periods as are appointed for that purpose by an order of a general meeting⁷. These meetings are called 'ordinary meetings'⁸.

Every general meeting of the shareholders other than an ordinary meeting is called an 'extraordinary meeting'⁹.

Notice and place of meeting.

1794. Notice and place of meeting.

At least 14 clear days' public notice of all meetings, whether ordinary or extraordinary¹, must be given by advertisement², specifying the place, day and hour of the meeting³. No business except that which may be appointed by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 or the special Act⁴ to be done at an ordinary meeting⁵ can be transacted at any ordinary meeting unless special notice of that business has been given in the advertisement convening the meeting⁶. Thus the voting of remuneration to directors⁷ is a matter requiring special notice⁸. In the case of an extraordinary meeting, the notice must always specify the purpose for which the meeting is called⁹, and the meeting cannot enter upon any business not set forth in the notice upon which it has been convened¹⁰.

The whole purpose, as distinguished from the details, must be fairly stated in the notice, which must not be so framed as to mislead those to whom it is addressed; if there are several purposes, the notice will not be sufficient in respect of any purpose not indicated in it¹¹.

All meetings, whether ordinary or extraordinary, must be held in the place prescribed¹² by the special Act and, if no place is so prescribed, at some place appointed by the directors¹³.

1795. Convening extraordinary meetings.

Extraordinary meetings¹ may be convened by the directors² at such times as they think fit³.

The number of shareholders⁴ prescribed⁵ by the special Act⁶, holding in the aggregate shares to the amount prescribed by that Act or, where the number of shareholders or the amount of shares is not prescribed, 20 or more shareholders, holding in the aggregate not less than one-tenth of the company's capital, may by writing under their hands at any time require the directors to call an extraordinary meeting⁷. The requisition must fully express the object of the meeting required to be called, and must be left at the office of the company⁸ or given to at least three directors or left at their last or usual places of abode⁹. Upon the receipt of the requisition the directors must forthwith convene a meeting of the shareholders, and, if they fail to do so within 21 days, the shareholders signing the requisition may call it by giving 14 days' public notice¹⁰.

If the object of the requisition is such that in no manner and by no machinery can it be legally carried into effect, the directors are justified in refusing to act upon it; but, if the object stated can be carried into effect, it is the directors' duty to call the meeting¹¹. If, upon receiving a requisition, the directors issue a notice convening a meeting so worded as not to be a proper compliance with the requisition, the requisitionists are justified in calling the meeting, as upon a failure by the directors to do so¹².

1796. Quorum at general meeting.

In order to constitute a meeting, whether ordinary or extraordinary¹, there must be present, either personally or by proxy², the quorum prescribed³ by the special Act⁴, and, if no quorum is prescribed, then shareholders⁵ holding in the aggregate not less than one-twentieth of the capital of the company⁶, and being in number not less than one for every £500 of that required proportion of capital, unless that number would be more than 20, in which case 20 shareholders, holding not less than one-twentieth of the capital, form a quorum⁷.

If within one hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum is not present, no business can be transacted at the meeting other than the declaring of a dividend, in case that is one of the objects of the meeting; and, except in the case of a meeting for the election of directors⁸, the meeting must be adjourned indefinitely⁹. If and so long as the total number of shares issued represents less than the amount of capital required to be represented at a general meeting, no valid meeting can be held¹⁰.

1799. Voting rights.

At all general meetings¹ every shareholder² is entitled to vote according to the scale of voting prescribed³ by the special Act⁴; and, where no scale is prescribed, every shareholder has one vote for every share up to ten, and an additional vote for every five shares beyond the first ten shares up to 100, and an additional vote for every ten shares beyond the first 100 shares; but a shareholder is not entitled to vote at any meeting unless he has paid all calls then due upon his shares⁵.

Where several persons are jointly entitled to a share, the person whose name stands first in the register of shareholders⁶ is, for the purpose of voting⁷, deemed the sole proprietor, and on all occasions his vote, either in person or by proxy⁸, must be allowed as the vote in respect of the share without proof of the concurrence of the other holders⁹.

A shareholder who is a minor¹⁰ may vote by his guardian or any one of his guardians¹¹; and every such vote may be given either in person or by proxy¹².

1800. Manner of voting; proxies.

The votes may be given either personally or by proxies who are shareholders¹, by written authorisation according to the statutory form² or in a form to the like effect under the hand of the shareholder nominating the proxy or, if the shareholder is a corporation, then under its common seal³. Every proposition at a meeting must be determined by the majority of votes of the parties present, including proxies, the chairman of the meeting⁴ being entitled not only to vote as a principal and proxy but to have a casting vote if there is an equality of votes⁵.

Where the shareholder is a body corporate, the proxy may be any member of that body, even though not personally a shareholder in the company⁶. During the continuance of his appointment, the proxy is to be taken to be a shareholder in the company to which his appointment relates, holding the number of shares held by the corporation by whom he is appointed, for all purposes except the transfer of any share or the giving of receipts for any dividend⁷. His appointment may be made and revoked by the corporation in the statutory forms⁸.

No person is entitled to vote as a proxy unless the instrument appointing him has been transmitted to the secretary⁹ of the company¹⁰ within the period prescribed¹¹ by the special Act¹² or, if no period is prescribed, not less than 48 hours before the time appointed for holding the meeting at which the proxy is to be used¹³.

Proxy forms in the directors' names may be sent to some only of the shareholders at the expense of the company without contravening the Act, and the court will not interfere if the motive in so acting is honest, eg to ensure the presence of a quorum at the meeting, and not improper, eg to ensure a favourable vote: see Wilson v London, Midland and Scottish Rly Co [1940] Ch 393, [1940] 2 All ER 92, CA. 1801. Evidence of resolutions.

Whenever in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 or the special Act¹ the consent of any particular majority of votes at any meeting of the company² is required in order to authorise any proceeding of the company, that particular majority is required to be proved only in the event of a poll being demanded at the meeting³. If a poll is not demanded, a declaration by the chairman⁴ that the resolution authorising that proceeding has been carried and an entry to that effect in the book of the company's proceedings is sufficient authority for the proceeding, without proof of the number or proportion of votes recorded in favour of or against it⁵.

1804. Balance sheets.

The books of the company¹ must be balanced at the periods prescribed² by the special Act³ and, if no periods are prescribed, 14 days at least before each ordinary meeting⁴. On the books being balanced, an exact balance sheet must forthwith be made up, exhibiting a true statement of the capital stock, credits and property of every description belonging to the company, and the debts due by it at the date of making the balance sheet, and a distinct view of the profit or loss which has arisen on the company's transactions⁵ in the course of the preceding half-year⁶. Before each ordinary meeting, the balance sheet must be examined by the directors⁷, or any three of them, and be signed by the chairman or deputy chairman⁸.

At the ordinary meeting, the directors must produce to the shareholders⁹ the balance sheet applicable to the period immediately preceding the meeting, together with the auditors' report¹⁰.

1805. Inspection of books and balance sheets.

The books duly balanced¹, together with the balance sheet, must for the periods prescribed² by the special Act³ and, if no periods are prescribed, for 14 days previous to each ordinary meeting⁴, and for one month afterwards, be open for the inspection of the shareholders⁵ at the principal office of the company⁶ or place of business⁷. Shareholders are not, however, entitled at any time, except during these periods, to demand the inspection of the books⁸, unless in virtue of a written order signed by three directors⁹.

Every book-keeper must permit any shareholder to inspect the books and to take copies or extracts at any reasonable time during the periods when the books are so open for inspection¹⁰. Failure to comply with these requirements involves forfeiture to the shareholder, for every offence, of a sum not exceeding £5¹¹.

The account books must also be open at all reasonable times to the inspection of the company's respective mortgagees and bond creditors with liberty to take extracts without fee or reward¹².

1806. Appointment and qualification of auditors.

Except as otherwise provided by the special Act¹, the powers of the company² as regards the choice of auditors and their remuneration can be exercised only at a general meeting of the company³. Except where the special Act directs them to be appointed otherwise than by the company, the company must at the first ordinary meeting⁴ after the passing of the special Act elect the number of auditors prescribed⁵ by that Act or, if no number is prescribed, two auditors, in the manner provided for the election of directors⁶. At the first ordinary meeting in each year afterwards the company must in the same manner elect an auditor to supply the place of the retiring auditor⁷. Every auditor so elected, if he has not been removed or become disqualified, and has not resigned, continues to be an auditor until another is elected in his stead⁸.

Where no other qualification is prescribed by the special Act, every auditor must have at least one share in the undertaking⁹. He must not hold any office in the company or be in any other manner interested in its concerns except as a shareholder¹⁰.

1807. Auditors' duties.

The directors¹ must deliver to the auditors the half-yearly or other periodical accounts and balance sheet at least 14 days before the ensuing ordinary meeting² at which they are required to be produced to the shareholders³. It is the auditors' duty to receive from the directors the accounts and balance sheet and to examine them⁴, but they may employ accountants and other persons as they think proper at the company's expense⁵. They must either make a special report on the accounts or simply confirm them⁶. Their report or confirmation must be read, together with the directors' report, at the ordinary meeting⁷. If the auditors differ, they may make separate reports, and each of them may separately employ an accountant⁸.

One of the auditors (to be determined in the first instance by ballot between themselves, unless they otherwise agree, and afterwards by seniority) must go out of office at the first ordinary meeting¹ in each year, but the auditor going out is immediately eligible for re-election². Any vacancy which takes place among the auditors in the course of the current year may be supplied at any general meeting³, if the company⁴ thinks fit, by election of the shareholders⁵.

(vii) Dividends

1809. Power to pay dividends.

Subject as mentioned below, a company¹ incorporated by special Act² may, like a company regulated by the Companies Act 2006, pay dividends on its shares³. Certain provisions relating to the dividends on preference shares are imposed by statute⁴. The rate of dividend on ordinary shares is in nearly every case limited either by the special Act itself or by the provisions of a general Act; and, where a limit is imposed, it is usual to provide that arrears of dividend may only be paid out of profits earned in subsequent years. Where there are two cases of ordinary shares entitled to a dividend at different rates, and the dividend on both classes is in arrear, the ratio existing between the respective rates of dividend must be preserved in paying off arrears of dividend in subsequent years⁵.

No dividend can be paid in respect of any share until all calls then due in respect of that and every other share held by the person to whom the dividend may be payable have been paid⁶.

1810. Declaration of dividend.

Before every ordinary meeting¹ at which a dividend is intended to be declared, the directors² must cause a scheme to be prepared showing the profits, if any, of the company³ for the period current since the preceding ordinary meeting at which a dividend was declared, and apportioning them, or as much as they may consider applicable to the purposes of dividend, among the shareholders⁴ according to the shares held by them, the amount paid on them and the periods during which those amounts have been paid⁵. The scheme must be exhibited at the meeting, at which a dividend may be declared according to the scheme⁶.

Except as otherwise provided by the special Act⁷, the company's powers as to the declaration of dividends can be exercised only at a general meeting⁸.

6 See the Arbitration Act 1996 s 94(2); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1209. The effect appears to be that the provisions of Pt I, unless a provision is expressly excluded, apply to arbitrations (inter alia) under the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 except in so far as such arbitrations are conducted pursuant to provisions inconsistent with the provisions of the Arbitration Act 1996. The provisions for arbitration contained in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 ss 128-134 (see PARAS 1814-1816) are not introduced into arbitrations under the Arbitration Act 1996. The submission to arbitration under the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 may be made a rule of any of the superior courts, on the application of either of the parties: s 134. As to the application of the Companies Clauses Acts see PARA 1668 note 2. As to enforcing arbitration awards see the Arbitration Act 1996 s 66; and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1274.

1814. Appointment of arbitrators.

When any dispute has arisen, authorised or directed by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, or the special Act¹, or any Act incorporated with it, to be settled by arbitration², then, unless both parties concur in the appointment of a single arbitrator, each party, on the request of the other by written³ nomination under his hand, must appoint an arbitrator to whom the dispute is to be referred⁴. After the appointment has been made, neither party can revoke it without the other's consent, nor does the death of either operate as a revocation⁵.

If for the space of 14 days after a dispute has arisen, and after a written request has been served by one party on the other to appoint an arbitrator, the latter fails to appoint an arbitrator, the party making the request, and having himself appointed an arbitrator, may appoint that arbitrator to act on behalf of both parties, and that arbitrator may proceed to hear and determine the matters in dispute, in which case the award or determination of the single arbitrator is final⁶.

If before the matters referred are determined an arbitrator appointed by either party dies, or becomes incapable or refuses or for seven days neglects to act as arbitrator, the party by whom he was appointed may by written nomination appoint some other person to act in his place; and if, for seven days after written notice from the other party, he fails to do so, the remaining or other arbitrator may proceed in the absence of the other party⁷. Every arbitrator so substituted has the same powers and authorities as were vested in the former arbitrator at the time of his death, refusal or disability⁸.

The Companies Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 ss 128-134 (see the text and notes 4-8; and PARAS 1815-1816) are incorporated, with adaptations, with the Insolvency Act 1986 for the purposes of any arbitration under s 111: see s 111(4); and PARA 1446.

1815. Appointment of umpire.

Where more than one arbitrator has been appointed¹, they must, before entering on the matters referred to them, by written appointment under their hands appoint an umpire to decide any matters on which they differ². If the umpire dies, or refuses or for seven days neglects to act, they must forthwith appoint another umpire in his place³. The decision of the umpire on the matters so referred to him is final⁴.

If in either case the arbitrators refuse or for seven days after request of either party to the arbitration neglect to appoint an umpire, the Secretary of State⁵ may, in any case in which a railway company is one party to the arbitration, on the application of either party to that arbitration, appoint an umpire whose decision on the matter on which the arbitrators differ is to be final⁶.

(1) IN GENERAL

1824. General provision regarding overseas companies.

In the Companies Acts¹, an 'overseas company' means a company² incorporated outside the United Kingdom³.

An overseas company that has complied with the statutory duty to register specified particulars under the Companies Act 2006⁴ does not fall within the Companies Acts definition of a 'UK-registered company' (which, for these purposes, means a company registered under the Companies Act 2006)⁵.

1825. Company contracts and execution of documents by overseas companies.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² applying those provisions of the Companies Act 2006³ that govern the formalities of doing business, and other related matters, to overseas companies⁴, subject to such exceptions, adaptations or modifications as may be specified in the regulations⁵.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 Regulations under the Companies Act 2006 s 1045 are subject to the negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): ss 1045(2), 1289. As to the making of regulations under the 2006 Act generally see ss 1288-1292. In exercise of the power conferred under s 1045, the Secretary of State has made the Overseas Companies (Execution of Documents and Registration of Charges) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1917. Accordingly, the Companies Act 2006 s 43 (see PARA 282), s 44 (see PARA 288), s 46 (see PARA 288), s 48 (execution of documents: Scotland) and s 51 (see PARA 66) are applied to overseas companies, but modified to read as set out in the Overseas Companies (Execution of Documents and Registration of Charges) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1917, regs 4, 6. As to the provision that may be made in regulations in order to specify the person or persons responsible for compliance with any requirements imposed on overseas companies, and as to provision for related offences, see PARA 1835.

(2) REGISTRATION OF PARTICULARS

1826. Duty to register particulars of overseas company.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² requiring an overseas company³:

- 1 (1) to deliver to the registrar of companies⁴ for registration a return containing specified particulars⁵; and
- 2 (2) to deliver to the registrar with the return specified documents⁶.

The regulations: (a) must, in the case of a company other than a Gibraltar company⁷, require the company to register particulars if the company opens a branch in the United Kingdom⁸; and (b) may, in the case of a Gibraltar company, require the company to register particulars if the company opens a branch in the United Kingdom⁹; and (c) may, in any case, require the registration of particulars in such other circumstances as may be specified¹⁰.

The regulations may provide that where a company has registered particulars in this way¹¹ and any alteration is made, either in the specified particulars¹², or in any document delivered with the return¹³, the company must deliver to the registrar for registration a return containing specified particulars of the alteration¹⁴.

The regulations may make provision requiring such a return¹⁵ to be delivered for registration to the registrar for a specified part of the United Kingdom¹⁶, and requiring it to be so delivered before the end of a specified period¹⁷.

The regulations may make different provision according to the place where the company is incorporated¹⁸, and the activities carried on (or proposed to be carried on) by it¹⁹. This is without prejudice to the general power to make different provision for different cases²⁰.

Such regulations²¹ must require an overseas company to register particulars identifying every person resident in the United Kingdom authorised to accept service of documents on behalf of the company²², or to register a statement that there is no such person²³.

Such particulars, returns and other documents that are required, in the case of an overseas company, to be delivered to the registrar²⁴ are documents subject to the 'Directive disclosure requirements'²⁵.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 Regulations under the Companies Act 2006 s 1046 are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): ss 1046(8), 1290. 1827. Registration of overseas company under corporate name or alternative name.

Regulations made by the Secretary of State¹, for the purpose of requiring an overseas company² to register specified particulars under the Companies Act 2006³, must require such a company⁴ to register its name⁵. This may be the company's corporate name (that is, its name under the law of the country or territory in which it is incorporated)⁶ or an alternative name that is duly specified⁷, being a name, other than its corporate name, under which it proposes to carry on business in the United Kingdom⁸.

An overseas company that has registered an alternative name may at any time deliver to the registrar of companies for registration a statement specifying a different name under which it proposes to carry on business in the United Kingdom (which may be its corporate name or a further alternative) in substitution for the name previously registered⁹. The alternative name which is for the time being registered in this way¹⁰ is treated for all purposes of the law applying in the United Kingdom as the company's corporate name¹¹. This does not affect references¹² to the company's corporate name¹³, or affect any rights or obligation of the company¹⁴, or render defective any legal proceedings by or against the company¹⁵.

An EEA company¹⁶ may always register its corporate name¹⁷; in any other case, certain provisions of the Companies Act 2006 which govern a company's name¹⁸ apply in relation to the registration of the name of an overseas company¹⁹. However, the Companies Act 2006 provisions which govern the use of permitted characters etc in a company's name²⁰ apply in every case²¹.

1828. Delivery to registrar where overseas company is registered in more than one part of the United Kingdom.

Where an overseas company¹ is required to register or has registered particulars under the Companies Act 2006² in more than one part of the United Kingdom³, the Secretary of State⁴ may provide by regulations⁵ that, in the case of such a company, anything authorised or required to be delivered to the registrar of companies⁶, under the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 that govern overseas companies⁷, is to be delivered: (1) to the registrar for each part of the United Kingdom in which the company is required to register or has registered particulars⁸; or (2) to the registrar for such part or parts of the United Kingdom as may be specified in or determined in accordance with the regulations⁹.

1829. Duty to give notice of overseas company ceasing to have registrable presence.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² requiring an overseas company³:

- 3 (1) if it has registered particulars following the opening of a branch⁴, to give notice to the registrar of companies⁵ if it closes that branch⁶;
- 4 (2) if it has registered particulars in other circumstances⁷, to give notice to the registrar if the circumstances that gave rise to the obligation to register particulars cease to obtain⁸.

The regulations must provide for the notice to be given to the registrar for the part of the United Kingdom⁹ to which the original return of particulars was delivered¹⁰; and the regulations may specify the period within which notice must be given¹¹.

For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 provisions that relate to overseas companies¹², the relocation of a branch from one part of the United Kingdom to another counts as the closing of one branch and the opening of another¹³; but the relocation of a branch within the same part of the United Kingdom does not¹⁴.

1833. Charges over property in the United Kingdom to be registered.

The Secretary of State¹ may by regulations² make provision about the registration of specified³ charges over property in the United Kingdom⁴ of a registered overseas company⁵. This power⁶ includes power to make provision about⁷:

- 8 (1) a registered overseas company that has particulars registered in more than one part of the United Kingdom⁸ or has property in more than one part of the United Kingdom⁹;
- 9 (2) the circumstances in which property is to be regarded, for the purposes of the regulations, as being, or not being, in the United Kingdom or in a particular part of the United Kingdom¹⁰;
- 10 (3) the keeping by a registered overseas company of records and registers about specified charges and their inspection¹¹;
- 11 (4) the consequences of a failure to register a charge in accordance with the regulations¹²;
- 12 (5) the circumstances in which a registered overseas company ceases to be subject to the regulations¹³.

The regulations may for this purpose apply, with or without modifications, any of the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 that govern company charges¹⁴; and may modify any reference in an enactment¹⁵ to those provisions (or to a particular provision)¹⁶, so as to include a reference to the regulations or to a specified provision of the regulations¹⁷.

In relation to overseas companies¹ that are required to register particulars under the Companies Act 2006², the Secretary of State³ may make provision by regulations⁴ requiring the delivery to the registrar of companies⁵ of returns⁶: (1) by such a company⁷ that either is being wound up⁸, or becomes or ceases to be subject to insolvency proceedings, or an arrangement or composition or any analogous proceedings⁹; (2) by the liquidator of such a company¹⁰.

(4) SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISION

1835. Offences for failure to comply with requirements imposed on overseas companies.

Regulations made in relation to overseas companies¹ may specify the person or persons responsible for complying with any specified requirement of the regulations².

Such regulations³ may make provision for offences, including provision as to the person or persons liable in the case of any specified contravention of the regulations⁴, and including provision as to circumstances that are, or are not, to be a defence on a charge of such an offence⁵; but the regulations must not provide for imprisonment⁶, or for the imposition (on summary conviction) of a fine exceeding level 5 on the standard scale⁷ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine⁸ not exceeding one-tenth of level 5 on the standard scale⁹.

1836. Service of documents on overseas companies.

A document may be served on an overseas company¹ whose particulars are registered under the Companies Act 2006²:

- 13 (1) by leaving it at, or sending it by post³ to, the registered address⁴ of any person resident in the United Kingdom⁵ who is authorised to accept service of documents on the company's behalf⁶; or
- 14 (2) if there is no such person (or if any such person refuses service or service cannot for any other reason be effected⁷) by leaving it at or sending by post to any place of business of the company in the United Kingdom⁸.

A document also may be served on such a person holding any such position, in the case of an overseas company whose particulars are registered under the Companies Act 2006, as may be specified for the purpose⁹.

In civil proceedings generally, a company may be served by any method permitted under the CPR Pt 6, or by any of the methods of service set out in the Companies Act 2006¹⁰.

- 1 As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824.
- 2 Companies Act 2006 s 1139(2). The text refers to an overseas company whose particulars are registered under s 1046 (see PARA 1826): see s 1139(2).
- 3 Where an Act authorises or requires any document to be served by post (whether the expression 'serve' or the expression 'give' or 'send' or any other expression is used) then, unless the contrary intention appears, the service is deemed to be effected by properly addressing, pre-paying and posting a letter containing the document and, unless the contrary is proved, to have been effected at the time at which the letter would be delivered in the ordinary course of post: see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 7; and STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1388. As to proof of posting and proof of delivery see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARAS 945, 946. A requirement to send a document by post is not confined to sending it by the Post Office postal system: see the Postal Services Act 2000 s 127(4), Sch 8 Pt 1; and POST OFFICE.
- 4 For these purposes, a person's 'registered address' means any address for the time being shown as a current address in relation to that person in the part of the register available for public inspection: Companies Act 2006 s 1139(3). As to the meaning of the 'register' see PARA 146.
- 5 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5.
- 6 Companies Act 2006 s 1139(2)(a). As to persons whose names have been delivered to the registrar of companies as authorised to accept on behalf of the company service of process or notices see PARA 1826.
- 7 Under the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908 (repealed), it was held that service on a person whose name and address had been given was good service, even where he refused to accept it on the ground that his authority to do so had ceased: Employers' Liability Assurance Corpn v Sedgwick, Collins & Co [1927] AC 95, HL.

However, in view of the wording of the Companies Act 2006 s 1139(2), it is doubtful to what extent this case remains good law.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1139(2)(b). The place of business contemplated here is one which is established at the time of service rather than a former place of business: Deverall v Grant Advertising Inc [1955] Ch 111, [1954] 3 All ER 389, CA. What has to be shown in every case is that the business which is carried on at the relevant location is the business of the company itself; it is possible for a company to carry on business in the United Kingdom without having a place of business here: Rakusens Ltd v Baser Ambalaj Plastik Sanayi Ticaret AS [2001] EWCA Civ 1820, [2002] 1 BCLC 104, CA (address of agent not an established place of business for the company). See also Matchnet plc v William Blair & Co LLC [2002] EWHC 2128 (Ch), [2003] 2 BCLC 195 (claimant company not entitled to rely upon the service of the claim form at an address where the evidence was not conclusive as to whether the defendant company had established a place of business there).

A company establishes a place of business within Great Britain if it carries on part of its business activities within the jurisdiction and it is not necessary for those activities to be either a substantial part of or more than incidental to the main objects of the company: South India Shipping Corpn Ltd v Export-Import Bank of Korea [1985] 2 All ER 219, [1985] 1 WLR 585, CA, distinguished in O'Hara v McDougal [2005] EWCA Civ 1623, [2005] All ER (D) 275 (Nov) (it cannot be right that the mere fact that a person is the landlord of a large piece of land, with many properties, would enable him to be served at any one of those properties under CPR 6.5). As to service on overseas companies see also O'Hara v McDougal at [14] per Neuberger LJ (it may well be that the court should adopt a more generous approach, so far as the server of a document is concerned, in relation to an overseas company in respect of which there may be no other means of service other than in accordance with the Companies Acts, than when considering services for the purposes of CPR 6.5 at a place of business); and Lakah Group v Al Jazeera Satellite Channel [2003] EWHC 1297 (QB), [2003] All ER (D) 141 (Jun) (requirement of service was very important, particularly in cases concerning non-resident defendants, and it might be open to the claimants to seek redress in another jurisdiction). As to CPR Pt 6 see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 138 et seq.

9 See the Companies Act 2006 s 1140(2)(b); and PARA 672. The positions specified for the purposes of s 1140(2)(b) are director, secretary, and permanent representative: see the Overseas Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1801, reg 75; and PARA 672.

(5) RECOGNITION OF FOREIGN COMPANIES AND CORPORATIONS

1837. Recognition of foreign company.

A company which purports to have been incorporated in a foreign country may be recognised as a corporation in England¹ and, as such, English law will allow it to sue and be sued in England in its corporate capacity². The universal succession of one foreign corporate body to another will also be recognised³.

1 As to recognition under the Foreign Corporations Act 1991 see PARA 1841. It is generally accepted as a matter of private international law that the law of the place of incorporation determines the capacity of the company, the composition and powers of the various organs of the company, the formalities and procedures laid down for them, the extent of an individual member's liability for the debts and liabilities of the company, and other matters of that kind: see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 465 et seq. 1838. Proceedings by and against foreign companies.

A foreign company may sue or be sued in an English court¹. The lex fori regulates the procedure and the parties to be joined².

In civil proceedings, a company may be served by any method permitted under the Civil Procedure Rules³, or by any of the methods of service permitted under the Companies Act 2006⁴.

2 See CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 11 et seq. However, all matters which are part of the internal management of the corporation are in principle governed by the law of the place of incorporation: see eg Pergamon Press Ltd v Maxwell [1970] 2 All ER 809, [1970] 1 WLR 1167; Sierra Leone Telecommunications Co Ltd v Barclays Bank plc [1998] 2 All ER 821; Base Metal Trading Ltd v Shamurin [2004] EWCA Civ 1316, [2005] 1 All ER (Comm) 17, [2005] 1 WLR 1157; Reeves v Sprecher [2007] EWHC 117 (Ch), [2007] 2 BCLC 614.

1839. Proceedings by shareholders on behalf of the company.

A minority of the shareholders of a foreign company may sue the directors or managing body in England and the foreign company to restrain the foreign company from acting ultra vires its constitution¹.

However, the courts of the place of incorporation will almost invariably be the most appropriate forum for the resolution of issues that relate to the right of shareholders to sue on behalf of the company².

If at any time:

- 15 (1) any question arises whether a body which purports to have (or, as the case may be, which appears to have) lost corporate status under the laws of a territory which is not at that time a recognised state¹ should or should not be regarded as having legal personality as a body corporate under the law of any part of the United Kingdom²; and
- 16 (2) it appears that the laws of that territory are at that time applied by a settled court system in that territory³, that question and any other material question⁴ relating to that body must be determined (and account taken of those laws) as if that territory were a recognised state⁵.

Any registration or other thing done before 25 September 1991⁶ is valid if it would have been valid before that date had the provisions described above then been in force⁷.

1 For these purposes, a 'recognised state' means a territory which is recognised by Her Majesty's government in the United Kingdom as a state (Foreign Corporations Act 1991 s 1(2)(a)); and the laws of a territory which is so recognised are taken to include the laws of any part of the territory which are acknowledged by the federal or other central government of the territory as a whole (s 1(2)(b)). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. As to the recognition of foreign states see Dicey and Morris The Conflict of Laws (13th Edn, 2000) pp 997-998; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 41.

2 Foreign Corporations Act 1991 s 1(1)(a).

3 Foreign Corporations Act 1991 s 1(1)(b).

4 For these purposes, a material question is a question (whether as to capacity, construction or otherwise) which, in the case of a body corporate, falls to be determined by reference to the laws of the territory under which the body is incorporated: Foreign Corporations Act 1991 s 1(2)(c).

Under the 'Brussels I' Regulation (and the Lugano Convention, to the extent that this continues to apply), apart from proceedings concerning immovable property, the other cases in which exclusive jurisdiction, regardless of domicile, is conferred on the courts of a particular Regulation (or contracting) state, include proceedings which have as their object the validity of the constitution, the nullity or the dissolution of companies or other legal persons or associations of natural or legal persons, or the decisions of their organs, in which cases exclusive jurisdiction is conferred upon the courts of the Regulation (or contracting) state in which the company, legal person or association has its seat: see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 76. See also Newtherapeutics Ltd v Katz [1991] Ch 226, [1991] 2 All ER 151 (the validity of the decisions of organs, as distinct from the decisions themselves, must be the object of the proceedings); Grupo Torras SA v Sheikh Fahad Mohammed Al-Sabeh [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep 7, CA (claims alleging abuse of authority are not concerned with the acts of the organs of a company, but with wrongful acts of individuals). The mere fact that there appears to be no live issue of English company law at stake does not have a bearing upon whether the English court has jurisdiction: see Speed Investments Ltd v Formula One Holdings Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 1512, [2005] 1 WLR 1936, [2005] 1 BCLC 455 (decision as to jurisdiction accorded with practical convenience and with the reasonable expectations of those involved, ie that such issues of internal management as did arise should be decided in the courts in which the company had its seat), applied in Choudhary v Bhattar [2009] EWHC 314 (Ch), [2009] 2 BCLC 108, [2009] All ER (D) 163 (Feb) (case sought the determination of the composition of the board of directors and of the general body of shareholders and their entitlement to vote at a general meeting).
